"And I do not, Mistress Claire; I refuse to so believe." Her eyes flashed up at me, and I lost all restraint in their swift challenge. "I am going to speak—just a word, yet I must give it utterance before I ride out into the dark, away from you. I love you. It makes no difference to me where your sympathies may be in this struggle, you have won my heart. Look up, dear, and listen. I am going back to camp, back to the campaign. I know not what the night, what the morrow may bring. But I know forever I love you, and that if I live I shall surely come back. Will you be glad? Will you promise me welcome?"

I could feel her tremble, yet there was no shrinking in her face, no alarm.

"Oh, why were you compelled to say that! I tried so hard not to let you. I—I cannot make the promise, it would not be right."

"Not right!"

"No, you do not know me. I told you before I was a sham, a fraud, not what I appeared to be. I will not explain even to you, and you must not ask me. Only it hurts me to hear you say what you have, and be compelled to return this answer."

"You care then—you do not disguise that?"

She threw her head back proudly, making no attempt to withdraw her hands.

"Yes, I care; any woman would. It is not true that I have served you merely because you were a soldier of the Colonies. I think it was true, perhaps, at first, but—but later it was different. Oh! why do I say this! Why do I delay your departure by consenting to remain here in conversation! Major Lawrence, cannot you realize that my only desire is to have you get away safely?"

"But that is not my only desire," I protested. "It must be weeks, months, before I can hope to see you again. I am a servant of the Colonies, and must go where I am sent; we are upon the verge of a campaign involving exposure and battle. I may not even come forth alive. Must I go without a word, without a hope? Claire, Claire, sweetheart, you have no right to turn me away, because of some phantom of imagination—"

"But it is not, it is terribly real."

"I care not; I would still love you in spite of all; you may be a spy—a British spy—but the fact would mean nothing to me. I would trust you, Claire, your womanhood; I should know that whatever you did was in accordance with your conscience, and be content—if you but love me. And, thank God! I know you do."

"I—I—no! You cannot mean that!"

"Ay, but I do. Have you supposed, I could not read the message of those eyes? Oh, it may be dark, dear, but there is a star-gleam, and when the lashes lift—they confess a thousand times more than your lips acknowledge. Yet I insist on the lips! Now tell me," and I held her to me, "tell me!"

"What—oh, major, please!"

"There are but three words to speak; whisper them, dear, and I go."

"Three words-"

"Such easy words; they are trembling on your lips now—I love you."

"But if I do not; if they are false. Hush! There is some one on the veranda—Seldon must have returned."

"All the more reason why you should speak quickly," I whispered, without releasing her.

"Will you go, then? At once?"

"I pledge my word."

She drew a deep breath, her eyes shadowed, but I could hear the swift pulsing of her heart.

"It—it will mean nothing—nothing."

"Of course; only a memory to dream over."

Her lashes lifted, her head tilted back upon my shoulder. For a bare instant I gazed down into the depths.

I Read the Lines Almost at a Glance and Suddenly Realized the Base Villainy Revealed.

"Then—I will—I love you!"

With the words I kissed her, pressing my lips to hers; an instant they clung, and I felt the pressure of her arm, the hot blood rioting through my veins.

"Sweetheart," I whispered, "sweetheart."

"No, no!" and she thrust me from her. "You forget. I am not that. You must not think it even. See, that man is coming down the steps. He will discover Captain Grant, and it will be too late—Oh, go, major, please go!"

I turned without another word, fully realizing the danger, the necessity of action. Her hand touched mine as I grasped the rein.

"We part friends," she said softly. "Some day you may understand and forgive me."

"I understand now more than you think," I returned swiftly, "and I am coming back to learn all."

CHAPTER XXII.

I Uncover Captain Grant.

The thicket was sufficiently dense to conceal us from the man, who remained standing at the foot of the steps. He was but a mere dark shadow, and I could not even distinguish that he was a soldier, yet the danger of his presence was sufficiently great, for should he advance to the right he would come upon Grant's unconscious form, and in that silence the slightest noise might arouse suspicion. Mistress Claire still clung to my hand, but only to whisper a sentence of instruction.

"Go straight north, major, until you reach the hedge; follow the shadow of that beyond the orchard, and then take the road running westward. Don't mount until you reach there—goodby."

"Goodby, you will not forget me?"

"I—I am afraid not, but—but you must go!"

I left her standing there, a faint gleam of white against the dark shrubbery, motionless.

There is no incident of that night's ride which I recall distinctly. I merely pushed on steadily through the darkness, leaving my mount to choose his own course, confident we were headed toward the river. I was sufficiently acquainted with the valley of the Delaware, when daylight came, to decide upon the nearest ford. As to the British patrols, I must run the risk of dodging these, but felt safe from such an encounter for several hours. In truth I met no one, having no occasion to even draw rein, although we passed through two small villages, and by a number of farms. I could not even determine that these houses were occupied; they were dark and silent, even the galloping hoofs of my horse failing to awaken response.

It was already daylight when I drew up on the bluff summit to gaze down into the river valley. In the middle distance small villages faced each other across the stream, and toward these most of the roads converged—proof of the existence of a ford. I could not be mistaken as to the town—Burlington on the Jersey shore, and opposite Bristol. I should be safe enough in the latter, even if we had no outpost stationed there. I knew homes along those shaded streets, where food would be forthcoming, and where I could probably procure a fresh horse. It was the nearer town, nestled on the Jersey bank, that I studied with the greatest care, but, so far as I could see, the single street was deserted. To the south, certainly two miles away, a squadron of horse were riding slowly, surrounded by a cloud of dust. Without doubt this was the British patrol that had left the village at daybreak.

It was a hot, close morning, and the padded Ranger's coat heavy and tight-fitting. I took it off, flinging it across the saddle pommel. As I did so a folded paper came into view, and I drew it forth, curiously. My eye caught the signature at the bottom of a brief note, and I stared at it in surprise. Fagin! How came Fagin to be writing to Captain Grant? He pretended to be a Tory to be sure, yet both armies knew him as a murderous outlaw, plundering loyalists and patriots alike. There came to me a memory of Farrell's chance remark that Grant had some connection with this fellow's marauding. I had not seriously considered it then, but now—why, possibly it was true. I read the lines almost at a glance, scarcely comprehending at first, and then suddenly realized the base villainy revealed:

"Have the money and papers, but the girl got away. Will wait for you at Lone Tree tonight. Don't fail, for the whole country will be after me as soon as the news gets out about Elmhurst. FAGIN."

So that was the reason for this raid—Grant's personal affair. He had returned to Elmhurst, leaving his men to trudge on into Philadelphia under their Hessian officers so that he might communicate with Fagin. What a pity it was I had failed to kill the fellow, instead of leaving him unconscious.

The papers! Perhaps they were in the coat also. Surely Grant had no time to change or destroy them, as he must have ridden directly to Elmhurst. I searched the pockets of the garment hastily, finding a note or two, his orders to escort Delavan, and a small packet tied securely by a cord. I felt no hesitancy in opening this, and ascertaining its contents. The lines I read hastily seemed to blur before my eyes; I could barely comprehend their purport. Little by little I grasped the meaning of it all, and then my mind leaped to recognition of Grant's purpose. They were notes of instruction, orders, suggestions, memoranda, such as might be issued to a secret agent greatly trusted. These were addressed simply "Mortimer," many unsigned, others marked by initials, but I instantly recognized the handwriting of Washington, Hamilton and Lee. Without question this packet was the property of Eric Mortimer, but why had the boy preserved these private instructions, covering months of operations, I should judge, although scarcely one was dated? And what caused them to be of value to Captain Grant?

The answer came in a flash of suspicion—the colonel. He could be threatened with them, blackmailed, disgraced before Sir Henry Clinton, driven from his command. They were addressed merely to "Mortimer," discovered at Elmhurst, and were sufficient to convict of treason. It was a fiendish plot, well conceived, and Grant was fully capable of carrying it out to the end. I could realize what the possession of these papers meant to him—military advancement, a distribution of the Mortimer estate in which he would doubtless share, and a fresh hold on Claire whereby he could terrify the girl into accepting them.

I stood there in uncertainty, turning these papers over and over in my hands, striving to determine my duty. Should I return to Elmhurst? To do so would only bring me into renewed peril, and would apparently benefit no one. Without this packet Grant was helpless to injure Colonel Mortimer. As to Claire, Seldon would protect her for the present, and as soon as the father returned, he would doubtless compel her to accompany him back to Philadelphia. The best service I could render [illegible] these notes, and then seek out Eric Mortimer, in Lee's camp, and tell him the whole story. All that anyone could do now was to warn the Mortimers against Grant, to let them know his treachery, and this could be best accomplished through Eric. Although in different armies, striving against each other in the field, there must still exist some means of communication between father and son, or, if not, then between brother and sister.

With flint and steel I built a small fire of [illegible] beside the road, and fed to the flames one by one the papers from the packet, glancing over each one again to make sure of its contents; all were addressed alike, simply "Mortimer," but upon two I found [illegible] "Elmhurst." It was easy to [illegible] how the discovery of such communications would tempt an unscrupulous scoundrel like Grant to use them to injure another, and win his own end, but why had that young Eric failed to destroy them as soon as received?

When the last paper had been reduced to ashes, I stamped out the embers of fire under my boot heel, and, with lighter heart, rode down the hill toward the ford.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Between Love and Duty.

It was already growing dusk when I rode into our lines at Valley Forge. A brief interview with Colonel Hamilton revealed his appreciation of my work, and that my hastily made notes of the Philadelphia defenses had been received twenty-four hours earlier. They had been delivered at headquarters by an officer of Lee's staff; no, not a boyish-looking fellow, but a black-bearded captain whose name had been forgotten. All Hamilton could remember was that the notes had been originally brought in by an Indian scout. Eager to discover Eric Mortimer, I asked a week's release from duty, but there was so much sickness in the camp, that this request was refused, and I was ordered to my regiment.

Busy days and nights of fatigue followed. Washington, watching like a hawk every movement of Sir Henry Clinton in Philadelphia, convinced by every report received that he was about to evacuate the city, bent all his energies toward placing his little army in fit condition for battle. Some recruits were received, the neighboring militia were drawn upon, and men were taken from the hospitals, and put back into the ranks as soon as strong enough to bear arms. Inspired by the indomitable spirit of our commander, the line officers worked incessantly in the welding together of their commands. I scarcely knew what sleep was, yet the importance of the coming movement of troops held me steadfast to duty. Word came to us early in June that Count d'Estaing, with a powerful French fleet, was approaching the coast. This surely meant that Clinton would be compelled to retreat across the Jerseys, and a portion of our troops were advanced so as to be within easy striking distance of the city the moment the evacuation took place. The remaining commands pressed farther north, near convenient crossings of the Delaware, prepared for a forced march across the British line of retreat. Maxwell's brigade, with which I was connected, even crossed the river in advance, co-operating with General Dickinson and his New Jersey militia. All was excitement, commotion, apparently disorder, yet even amid that turmoil of approaching battle, Hamilton recalled my request, and granted me two days' leave. His brief note reached me at Coryell's Ferry, and, an hour later, I was riding swiftly across the country to where Lee had headquarters.

Not once during all those days and nights had the memory of Claire left me. Over and over in my mind I had reviewed all that had ever occurred between us, striving in vain to guess the riddle. Now I would see and talk with her brother, and perhaps obtain the explanation needed. Yet I have gone into battle with less trepidation than when I rode into Lee's headquarters, and asked his chief-of-staff for Eric Mortimer. He looked at me strangely, as I put the question.

"I should be very glad to oblige you, Major Lawrence," he replied gravely, "but unfortunately I have no present knowledge of the young man."

"But he was attached to General Lee's staff?"

"Only in a way—he was useful to us as a scout because of his intimate knowledge of the Jerseys. His home, I understand, was near Mount Holly."

"What has become of him?"

"All I know is, he was sent out on a special mission, by Washington's own orders, nearly a month ago. We have not directly heard from him since. An Indian brought a partial report of his operations up to that time; since then we have received nothing."

"An Indian!" I exclaimed. "The same who brought in my notes?"

"I believe so; yes, now that I recall the matter. I had no opportunity to question the fellow; he simply left the papers with the orderly, and disappeared."

"And you have heard nothing from young Mortimer since?"

"Not a word."

"He must be dead, or a prisoner."

The chief smiled rather grimly.

"Or deserted," he added sharply. "I am more inclined toward that theory. He was a reckless young devil, attracted to our service more, it seemed to me, by a spirit of dare-deviltry than patriotism. Lee thought well of him, but I was always suspicious. He belonged to a family of loyalists, his father a colonel of Queen's Rangers. Did you know him, Lawrence?"

To the Investor Who Wishes a Conservative Investment :

The first thing to consider in making an investment is absolute security. High interest is a secondary consideration. For this reason many people prefer to accept 3 per cent. or 4 per cent. per annum with safety than speculate where a very high rate is possible. There are now and then opportunities where an investment can be made at as high rate of interest as 7 per cent. and 8 per cent. with just as much security as the 3 per. cent. man gets. If you are now drawing 3 per cent. or 4 per cent. interest we would respectfully call your attention to a block of 50,000 shares of 7 per cent. FirstPreferred Guaranteed Interest Bearing Stock of the DOMINION TOBACCO CO., LTD., which we are offering the public at par value of $1.00 in multiples of 100 shares. This money is to be used in building our coast factory. The stock shares sold under this agreement are numbered from 200,001 to 250,000 on the following terms: Cash at time of application, or 25 per cent. at time of application, 25 per cent. in 30 days, 25 per cent. in 60 days and 25 per cent. in 90 days from days of application. Should you be in a position to invest in a gilt-edged security, backed by an enterprise that will give employment to 300 men, that now owns an established business and which wishes to enlarge, advise us and we will mail you our prospectus and subscription blanks. Are You Droopy, Tired, Worn Out?

HERE IS GOOD ADVICE TO ALL WHO FEEL AS IF THEIR VIGOR AND LIFE ALL OOZED AWAY.

This Condition Can be Quickly Cured by a Good Cleansing Medicine.

Your experience is probably somewhat similar to that described by Mr. J. T. Fleming in the following letter from his home in Lebanon: "I think I must have the most sluggish sort of a liver. In the morning my mouth was bitter, and that foul, soft feeling that tells you, "No breakfast needed here this morning.' A cup of coffee would sort of brace me up, but in two hours I was disposed to quit work, all energy having oozed out of me. Supper was my only good meal, but I guess I didn't digest very well, for I dreamt to beat the band. A friend of mine put me wise to Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I think they must have taken hold of my liver, perhaps my stomach, too, because at the very start they made things go right. Look at me now—not sleepy in the daytime, but hustling for the mighty dollar and getting fun out of life every minute. That's what Dr. Hamilton's Pills have done for me—they rebuilt and rejuvenated my entire system."

To keep free from headaches, to feel young and bright, to enjoy your meals, to sleep sound and look your best, nothing can help like Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, five for $1.00 at all druggists and storekeepers or postpaid from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

NO NEED BEING OLD OR WRINKLED BEFORE 75

Lillian Russell says any woman who has wrinkles before she's 75 is herself responsible for them. Sunshine and fresh air she considers more valuable as complexion preservers, than nostrums and cosmetics.

The chief objection to cosmetics is that at best they only temporarily cover up defects. There are certain true aids to Nature, which may be applied with directly opposite effect. Ordinary mercolized wax, for instance, actually removes a bad or oldish complexion, by gradually, almost imperceptibly, peeling off the worn-out scarf skin. Just one ounce procurable at any drug store, will soon unveil an entirely new and natural complexion, with an exquisite girlish color. Of course, cutaneous blemishes like pimples, freckles, fine lines, moth patches, liver spots, disappear with the discarded skin.

To prevent or remove wrinkles, a face bath which also produces natural results, is made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. This is immediately effective and gives no untoward after-effect.

THROWING A SHOE

A Survival of an Ancient Jewish Custom

The throwing of a shoe after a bride comes from the ancient Jewish custom of handing a shoe to a purchaser of land on the completion of the contract (Ruth iv. 7). Parents also gave a shoe to the husband on a daughter's marriage in token of yielding up their authority. The slipper in the East, being taken off indoors, is at hand to administer correction, and is used to signify the obedience of the wife and the supremacy of the husband.

Baked Apples

Not half enough use is made of the baked apple as a feature of the diet. This recipe calls for apples with nuts or honey as an adjunct. Peel the apples and core. Place in a deep pan, allowing a heaping tablespoon of sugar and half a cup of water to each apple. In the center of each apple, place a teaspoon of chopped nuts and strip of lemon or orange peel. Over the whole sprinkle cinnamon and nutmeg. Bake very slowly. The juice will become jelly-like. Serve hot or cold. Or fill the centers with a little honey and a little butter, preparing otherwise the same.

THE METALS IN BELLS

Effects of Too Much Tin—Large Bells Seldom in Tune

Bell-making is one of the few arts which have been in practice from the earliest times, but even to this day it has never reached a state of perfection. Very skilled workmen are needed to construct bells so that they shall be melodius artistic and durable.

Taking Great Britain as an example, we find that its oldest industry is the art of bell-making. In Whitechapel, London, a bell foundry had its beginning 350 years ago, and yet this is by no means the oldest for we are told that some may be traced back four or five centuries.

The bell of to-day is usually composed of five parts of tin to sixteen parts of copper. It has been found by the large bell-founders that to put too much tin in a bell often causes undesirable results, of which cracking is the most common. But the most satisfactory results have been obtained by using very old copper and procuring good tin, which comes from Australia.

TENSION BETWEEN ENGLAND AND GERMANY HAS RELAXED

King's Visit to Fatherland and Kaiser's Action in Releasing the British Officers Has Created an Atmosphere of Good-Will on Both Sides

London, May 21.—The growth of good feeling towards Germany has been a marked feature of the week. The King's visit has created an atmosphere of good-will on both sides, which promises important permanent results.

The Kaiser's action in releasing the British officers has been genuinely appreciated. Even the newspapers usually eager to suspect Germany's intentions are to-day openly declaring their belief that the tension between the two nations has sensibly relaxed. This feeling is expressed in popular conversations everywhere.

GERMANY'S CAPITAL EN FETE OVER SATURDAY'S BIG AFFAIR

Unter Den Linden Never Looked So Gay as Now—Whole Town Bedecked

Berlin, May 21.—Garlands, flags, poles and decorations of all sorts adorn the Unter Den Linden and all the streets and avenues through which next Saturday's wedding procession will proceed.

The official programme for the three days' festivities has just been issued. It enumerates a series of luncheons and dinners to the foreign sovereigns and members of the princely families related to the Kaiser and to the prospective bridegroom, Prince Ernest August of Cumberland and receptions to the Ambassadors and delegates from the German States, Duchies and Colonies.

After the great State banquet on Friday night there will be a visit to the opera house by the three Emperors and all the distinguished visitors. This will undoubtedly be one of the most magnificent of the public functions. Earlier on Friday the gifts from Hanover, Brunswick and other States and cities will be presented.

Civil, Then Church Wedding.

The civil marriage is timed for 4.30 p.m. on Saturday in the great hall at the State of the Schloss. The Grand Marshal Count Eulenberg will officiate. A soon as the civil ceremony is concluded the procession to the Palace Chapel will start. The Rev. Dr. Dryander will conduct the church wedding.

Then will come the great parade through Berlin, a spectacle which bids fair to be more magnificent than any living Berliner has been privileged to see before. And while Berlin is on fete, ablaze with illuminations, crowds parading the parks and streets and the banquet at the Schloss will be served and the toast to the newly wedded couple proposed by Emperor William in a speech which will be cabled round the world.

Both Rulers Breakfasted.

Officers of the First Dragoon Guards, whose Colonel is King George of England, have arranged a "high breakfast," Berlin style, for the British Monarch and their regimental commanders, to be given on Sunday morning. Not to be outdone, the officers of the Czar Alexander Regiment of Imperial German Grenadier Guards, whose Colonel is Czar Nicholas, will give a breakfast Russian style, to the Russian Emperor at the Officers' Club on the same day and hour.

SCHOOL BOARD RESPONSIBLE FOR 1.30 MILLS INCREASE IN TAXES

Asserts Mayor Bradburn and Ald Anderson—Council's Responsibility 1.70 Mills—Ald Langford Offered That A Man Owning 3 Houses Might as Well Give One to the City Owing to the Tax Rate and Other Expenses

The Fire, Water and Light Committee met last night, Chairman Ald. Gillespie presiding. There were also in attendance, Mayor Bradburn, Aldermen Anderson, Langford, Green and Duffus.

The Water Commissioners will be asked to install a hydrant at Romaine street, near George, on Parnell street and at Driscoll Terrace, north of Cricket Place, to be placed at the direction of the Mayor and the chairman.

Fire Substation.

Fire Chief Howard submitted blue prints of two fire substations erected in London, two years ago for guidance in erecting a substation in South city. The cost of these substations were $6,479 and $6,466, respectively. The structures each provide accommodation for six men, a watch room, apparatus department for one hose rig, and stables. As cost of labor and material has considerably increased since these halls were built two years ago, allowance for an additional $1,000 should be made in estimating the cost of a similar substation in this city. Chief Howard estimates that the cost of a substation for Peterborough, equipped complete, at $10,000 and over.

Ald. Green while agreeing with the proposition for a substation thought $10,000 for a building in which to accommodate one fire fighting apparatus too much.

Ald. Langford was opposed to the scheme, and offered that if a by-law were submitted he would vote against it. He thought a limit had already been reached in expenditure on the fire department for this year. "We are this year getting an increased revenue from increased taxes and an additional assessment to the extent of near $500,000 amounting to some $40,000 which has been so largely provided for in the estimates that it is time to call a halt in the way of increased expenditure."

The Mayor—"I suppose you include the School Board in too, Ald. Langford?"

Ald. Langford—"School Board or not, the money comes out of the people."

The Mayor—"I grant you that Ald. Langford; but I want you and the public to clearly understand that the Council is not responsible for all the increased expenditure. We are taking care of everything and providing for needed permanent improvements at an increase of less than two mills."

Finance Minister, Ald. Anderson acquiesced and pointed out that of the [illegible] increase of 3 mills the Council is not responsible for 1.70 mills, the School Board's requirements calling for an additional 1.30 mills over last year's rate.

Both Ald. Gillespie and Green agreed that some additional fire protection is needed, especially in view of the industrial growth in South City, and whether the acquisition of a motor-driven chemical engine at a cost of $7,850 would meet increased demands or not was freely discussed.

Ald. Duffus thought a motor-driven chemical engine essential. Still, this city would be the first of its size to acquire one, and he was not prepared to say that it would be workable in the winter owing to the deep snow which prevails here. Consequently, he would not vote for a chemical engine this year, thus giving opportunity for acquiring indisputable assurance as to the practicability of a motor-driven chemical engine here in winter before investing $7,850 in one. He believed, however, that the factories springing up in South City called for adequate fire protection, and would therefore vote for a substation in South City to protect those factories that have built the town.

Ald. Green—"They have not built the town; we got along many years without them."

Ald. Anderson thought the city was taking a big risk in sticking to a central station only.

Ald. Green offered that if motor-driven chemical engine can be driven in the outskirts of Ottawa in winter, one should be equally serviceable here during the same season.

Ald. Anderson offered that the jump in taxes this year is due to the fact that the city had not in past years kept space with public requirements.

The Mayor—"The School Board did not keep apace with requirements and consequently have loaded the city up with increased expenditure in one year, that might have been spread over a longer period.

Ald. Langford contended that a limit had been reached in additional expenditure this year for fire protection. People are ladened with taxes and other expenditures to such an extent that a man owning three houses of equal value might as well make a present of one to the city.

The Mayor—"You know, Ald. Langford, that a man with three houses to-day is better able to pay taxes than he was 15 years ago, did he then own three houses."

Moved by Ald. Duffus, seconded by Ald. Green,—That definite estimates be prepared for erecting and equipping a substation in South City and also that full information be secured in regard to the serviceability of a motor chemical engine during the winter months.—Carried.

Committee were agreed that in any event both substation and a motor driven chemical engine is out of the question this year. One of the propositions must be abandoned.

OUR LOCAL MEMBER ON THE LEAD BOUNTIES

We quote the following verbatim from Hansard, in reference to the debate on the land bounties.

Mr. BURNHAM: Will you allow me Mr. Chairman, to put on record my protest against this thing. If there is not some reasonable excuse given for it—and I have not heard any given yet—I must say that for my part I shall vote against it. Though I have neither the eloquence nor the brains of the hon. member for Red Deer (Mr. Clark) I have more pluck than he has and I am not going to sit by and make a howl and having done that let the thing go on.

Mr. CLARK (Red Deer): I will vote with you.

Mr. BURNHAM: You will vote with me; you funked the whole job because it emanated from your party, when they were in power. That's what's the matter with you. So far as I am concerned this is exactly like the steel bounty; I regard this thing as immoral and nothing else. I do not see how we can possibly bring the principles of honesty and fair dealing to apply to a thing like this."

NEW LAWYER IN GIBSON CASE

Mr. T. Herbert Lennox Will Fight for Life of Condemned Man

Toronto, May 21.—It was definitely stated this morning that Mr. T. Herbert Lennox, K.C., has been retained to look after the interests of Charles Gibson, condemned to death for the murder of Rosenthal. Mr. Lennox will take steps at once to prepare an application for a new trial, and will go to Ottawa when he has properly prepared the case.

At the capital he will take up the matter with the Minister of Justice.

He expresses himself as sanguine of success. He is now going over the evidence given at the previous trial, and is also following up a number of new witnesses who are expected to give important evidence.

INQUEST OPENS ON ERNEST ROY BOLTON

Duncan Drummond, Herb Stenson, Fred Sanderson, J. D. Craig, James Metheral, W. McIlmoyle, James Girvin, Jas. Fitzsimmons, J. M. Brooks Robt. Gibbs, Harry Morgan, Arthur Clydesdale; Forman—J. M. Brooks—was the jury sworn in yesterday morning to enquire into the cause of death of Ernest Roy Bolton of Elm street, killed on Tuesday evening, on Park street, by an auto driven by Mr. R. C. Heard, of 506 Smith St.

The only witnesses heard were Mr. W. Comstock, at whose undertaking establishment the inquest was held, and P. C. Meagher, whose evidence was only technical. Dr. Greer, the Coroner, appointed Dr. Eastwood to perform an autopsy with Dr. Malcolm McCullough, appointed by the County Attorney. The sitting was postponed until 8 p.m. next Tuesday, in the Council Chamber.

THE WEATHER.

To-day—Fresh westerly winds; few showers, but partly fair.

What Senator Ross Said

Here is what Sir George Ross said in 1910:

"While I am not much impressed with what the German Scare I think the duty of England is plain and our duty is equally plain; for the conquest of England means the conquest of Canada. Let the British throne totter; let London be in possession of the enemy, let her ports be filled with foreign seamen and foreign men-of-war, and Canada would be blotted from the map as an English dependency and her autonomy would be forever destroyed. And although I do not think the emergency is great, still I think it is sufficiently great for us to be GUIDED BY THE JUDGMENT OF THE ADMIRALTY OF ENGLAND to prepare ourselves for all possible contingencies."

POOR HOUSE INMATE RICH WITH MIND GONE

Mind Is Restored by Injury After Being Blank for Twelve Years

Warren, Pa., May 21.—In response to a call the county commissioners went to Torpedo, where they picked up an aged man and brought him to the Rouse hospital. The fellow told the commissioners his name was John Oliver and stated that he had a brother in Chicago. He also said that he owned a plot of 120 building lots near Wheeling, W.Va., and that he had a valuable mineral collection in Lancaster, Pa.

A wire sent to his brother in Chicago brought a prompt reply and a confirmation of the fellow's story of his wealth. According to the telegram received from Chicago, Oliver has been missing for 12 years, suffering from a mental malady and hundreds of dollars had been spent in searching for him. Until recently he has been employed at the Silican Sand plant at Torpedo and was hurt under a fall of rock.

The injury evidently cleared his mind and he has recovered his memory. He will be retained at the almshouse until his brother arrives. Beyond a doubt John Oliver is the wealthiest man that Warren county has ever had in its poor house.

CREW FIGHTS FIRE IN MIDSTREAM

Steamship Hoerde Comes Into Port After Harrowing Experience at Sea.

New Orleans, May 21. — "Save the ship first and then the cargo."

These orders were given by the captain of the steamship Hoerde of the Hamburg-American line, while the crew was bravely battling the flames that started in the ship's hold in mid-ocean while on its voyage to this city. The crew, upon instructions from the captain, had battened down the hatches and were shooting steam and water alternately into the hold where the fire raged.

This was kept up for three hours, but the fire still burned when the covers were removed. The crew then bent their efforts towards throwing overboard much of the cargo that was burning. Again the hold was covered and again the steam and water was pumped into it. This time the crew was successful.

The Hoerde reached here Thursday. It carried a 7000-ton cargo, including woolens, wines, chinaware, matches, toys and 500 tierces of palm olive oil. It was said that had the tierces of olive oil caught fire the ship would have gone to the bottom of the ocean with its crew. On the Terpsochore street wharf Friday morning was dumped a huge pile of the half-burned cargo, most of which are toys. The loss will aggregate several thousand dollars.

THE SUPPLEMENTARIES WILL BRING GOOD HERE

The supplementary estimates placed before the House at Ottawa yesterday include the following for Peterborough:

New Public Building	$20,000.00
Customs Bldg extension	10,000.00
Dry Dock	25,000.00
To pay G. W. Hatton balance of interest at 6 p.c. on purchase peice of wharf property	250.00
Pavillion on wharf at Spalding's Bay	2,500.00
Dry Dock will cost	40,000.00

THE TRENT CANAL.

The question of the terminus of the Trent Canal on the Georgian Bay is settled at last by a vote of $250,000 towards the work via the Severn with an outlet near Midland and Port McNicoll. A $9,000,000 contract is to be at once let and it is expected that the above vote will be expended this year.

LONDON GIRL DIES OF POISON

Report That She Was Slain Proven Untrue by Police—Ill At School

London, Ont., May 21.—Catharine Ellen Mingo, a girl who resides with her mother at 883 Dundas street, was found in an unconscious condition in a back yard in the east end of the city early Tuesday evening and died a few hours later without regaining her senses.

While attending school yesterday she was taken ill and it is supposed that she succumbed to a second and more violent attack. There are signs that she died of a convulsion due to poisoning and a post mortem examination will be held to-day.

A report that the child had been the victim of an assault has been proven untrue by the police.

BRITAIN STIRRED BY THE TURKEY TROT

New York, May 21.—Invasion of the British Isles by the turkey trot, the tango and other modern dances has so stirred the British public that a spirited discussion of the diversions in question is now in progress in the newspapers, cable advices from London here to-day show. Editorial writers have taken up the topic and are treating of it freely.

"Some of the attitudes in the new dances are strange, we admit," says The Standard, "but surely the important point is that the dancers see nothing curious in them."

Few, if any of the London dancing masters seem to regard the turkey trot as suitable to the ball room, the cabled comment indicates, but opinion regarding other dances generally grouped with this is not so nearly unanimous. The Boston and the Tango, which a correspondent of The Times who signs herself "Peeress" describes as the "beginner of evil," are regarded by Charles Dalbert, vice president of the Imperial Society of Dancing Masters, as two since the time of the minuet. Other opinions are as widely at variance.

PREPARING TO EXPROPRIATE THE P. L. AND P. CO'S PLANT

For Hydro-Electric Purposes—Work in Central City to be Begun as Soon as Agreement for Rear of Property Overhead Line are Signed by Property Owners - A Division in Council

The City Fathers convened in special session last night at 8.40, all the members present.

Mr. W. H. Denham, manager of the Quaker Oats So., wrote that pressure should be brought to bear on the C.P.R. to provide a swing in their proposed new bridge over the river, so as the Trent waterway when opened at both ends should be navigable throughout the whole system.

The Mayor thought that the Dominion Government should be approached on this question. If the Otonabee is a navigable stream the Government should see to it that a swing is provided in the new C.P.R. bridge to allow of access up the river to the Quaker Oats and wharfs to be constructed along the water front.

Moved by Ald. Buller, seconded by Ald. Duffus,—That a copy of Mr. Denham's letter be forwarded to Mr. Burnham, M.P., informing him that the City Council is deeply interested in this question.—Carried.

The Fire Water and Light Committee's report of its business earlier in the evening was adopted.

The Back Lane Pole Agreement.

Engineer R. T. Jeffery, of the Hydro-Electric Department, reported that some property owners have signed and all others except ex Mayor Morrow and one other, are agreed to sign the following agreement for the erection of poles in rear of properties from which to feed stores on Charlotte and George streets with electric current for commercial purposes:

MEMO OF AGREEMENT made this
BETWEEN:
....
Hereinafter called the Owner of the First Part
—and—
THE CORPORATION OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH
Hereinafter called the City of the Second Part

WITNESSETH that in view of the fact that the Corporation of the City of Peterboro is at present endeavoring to remove all poles from the main streets in the business section of the City, by placing poles and wires in alleys and on the back property lines, thereby removing the necessity of installing an expensive underground system for commercial distribution.

The undersigned having jurisdiction over property on .... hereby agrees to allow the Corporation of the City of Peterboro to erect poles and wires on the said property as shown in drawing No. ....., all poles and wires to be located so as not to interfere with present buildings, and all wiring to be insulated according to standard Underwriters' specifications and installed according to standard practice.

Should the said poles or wires at any time be found to interfere with the present buildings or with future building operations, the pole or wires so interfering shall, on two weeks' notice from the owner or agent of the owner of the said property, be moved to a position which shall be satisfactory to the owner or agent of the owner of the said property, and also to the electrical engineer of the Corporation.

Signed ....
Dated ...... at Peterborough, Ont.
Witness ....

In connection with the foregoing, Mr. Jeffery offered that the agreement to be binding in case of change of property owners would have to be registered against the property, to which he thought effective objection would arise.

The Mayor—"In my case that would be impracticable—It would take a month and a half to get others interested in our estate to agree or disagree to registering agreements against their properties. And we can't afford to wait so long. Our contract for street lighting expires in December 31st, when the city must be prepared to furnish its own service."

Mr. Jeffery thought ex-Mayor Morrow would ask a monetary consideration for pole rights. He controls 50 per cent. of the properties in question, and should he hold out the scheme would be blocked.

Mr. Jeffery here wanted to set himself right. He had been accused in one paper of coming here and interfering with private rights. That is not so, he had merely, under instructions, suggested the scheme for a pole line in rear of properties for consideration.

Asked if each pole would cost the properties $75 is installed, he said Ald. Langford had better get the estimates for such from the Examiner, so far as he was concerned he could not see where any such cost would come in.

The Mayor—"This rear-of-property pole line would not interfere with the city's fire insurance rating."

Mr. Jeffery acquiesced in this and continued, that but three wires would be run into the lanes, wires to be of same voltage as on streets now; increased fire risks are but imaginary. Altogether 20 poles would be installed, poles to be painted and not unsightly. A dollar a year each is the usual rental when such is demanded. The underground system on streets for commercial purposes would cost more money and the city would have to abandon the modern arc light for street lighting and return to the cluster scheme which is characterized as much inferior.

England Is Delighted

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, May 21.—The Prime Minister has shown me cable just received from England, stating that the papers published full reports of his Toronto speech and are truly delighted with it. Hurrah, for the old flag!

J. H. BURNHAM.

Moved by Ald. Johnston, seconded by Ald. Duncan,—That Mr. Jeffery be authorized to get the foregoing agreement signed up by all owners affected, and if successful to proceed with the work.—Carried on the following vote:

AYES—Ald. Duncan, Anderson, Buller, Gillespie, Johnston, Langford and Gordon.

NAYS—Ald. Duffus, Green and McIntyre.

Ald. Duffus put himself on record that he opposed any agreement not binding for all time, and favored a complete underground system in central city as originally agreed upon.

Arbitration Proceedings.

Mayor Bradburn offered that a satisfactory reply could not be secured from the Peterborough Light and Power Co. as to what they would sell their property for to the city, and Ald. Duncan moved, seconded by Ald. Johnston,—that a by-law be prepared to provide for proceeding with arbitration proceedings to expropriate the Peterborough Light & Power Co's distributing plant, and the appointment of an arbitrator for that purpose. Also that the Peterborough Light and Power Co. be notified of this resolution.—Carried on the following division.

AYES—Ald. Duffus, Gordon, Langford, Johnston, Gillespie, Buller, Anderson, McIntyre, Duncan and the Mayor.

NAYS—Ald. Green.

Combination Poles.

Council decided to install combination light and trolley wire poles on George and Charlotte streets, where ornamentally lighted.

The Street Railway Co. is willing to use such poles, the city to pay cost of transferring the trolley wires —$300. By these means one set of poles—present trolley ones—will be eliminated.

Mr. Jeffery will endeavor to get the agreements as outlined above fully signed up at the earliest possible moment, when another meeting will be called. If Mr. Jeffery is successful Council will then authorize him to take immediate action to prosecute the work with local labor and material as far as practicable. An Hydro-Electric Engineer will be on the scene to supervise the work, the expenses of which the city defrays.

It will take four months to complete the Hydro-Electric system in central city.

The Trent Canal.

Moved by Ald. Duncan, seconded by Ald. Johnston,—That the Dominion Government be informed of the gratification of this council and Peterborough citizens in the most [illegible] amount voted for the Trent Canal, especially for the opening of the Georgian Bay end, which conveys assurance of the waterway's early completion.—Carried unanimously.

PINE TAR CORDIAL

Advertisements under above heads, 20 words and under, one insertion, 15c.; 3 insertions, 25c.; 6 insertions, 40c.

NUGENT'S SARSAPARILLA—PRICE FOR large bottle, 100 full doses, 35c. and well worth it, too. It's better to take no medicine at all than to depend upon cheap concoctions that are compounded to sell at low price and a big profit just because there is a large demand for certain remedies at certain seasons of the year. There are so-called Sarsaparillas offered to us to sell to our customers at 75c a bottle that would bring us a larger profit than Nugent's Sarsaparilla sold at 35c. Nugent's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, arouses the torpid liver, drives out all impurities, cleanses and tones up the system, and helps Nature throw off the dullness that comes from indoor life of winter. It arouses energy, brightens the eye, clears the brain, gives lightness to the movements. Nugent's Sarsaparilla is not the only thing you will find in this drug store. We make a specialty of Nugent's Remedies. Nugent Drug Co., 388 George St., directly opposite Cressman's store.

RUBBISH AND GARBAGE

The Poison Germs Lurk in Accumulations of Refuse

Fortunes have been found and lost in dust heaps. Lives also are lost in them every year, despite modern progress.

Every poorly managed ash-heap or garbage-pile is a poisoner in some degree. City folks may think themselves free from this trouble because the city takes away the garbage. But even then rubbish is often allowed to accumulate in which the germs of poison lurks.

If through storm or ill weather collection is clogged and garbage piles up there is an immediate rise in the cases of "filth disease" and a corresponding increase in the death rate. So it behooves all the public, whether in the city or in a small town, to keep watch over the waste which goes out of the kitchen door.

Wherever it is possible waste should be turned to ashes. Things which cannot be burned should be dried and kept dry. When you apply this concretely, it means burn paper, dirty cardboard of any sort, rags, straw, excelsior, hair, lint, carpet sweepings, feathers, bones and old leather.

For the most part the burning can be done in a stove or grate or range, especially if one burns up things right along. When this is impossible, burn outdoors in a deep can.

If there is sufficient garden space, instead of burning leather, and bones, bury both two feet deep where the roots of a plant can reach them. They make an excellent fertilizer.

Fruit-skins and pits, potato-skins, pea hulls, beet tops, the refuse of salads, any sort of vegetable waste in fact, ought to be spread out, thin, and dried through and through before going to the dust heap. Never by any chance let a dust heap get wet or greasy.

Cabbage leaves and potato parings mashed together and left to decay will breed pestilence almost as soon as animal matter. If such massing is unavoidable, the heap should be mixed with quick-lime and charcoal. If the stench is bad, drench the whole heap with a strong chloride of lime solution. Covering decayed stuff with clean earth is always advisable.

BABY FOOD RECIPES

Cleanliness is the first requirement in preparing the baby's food. The next matter of importance is the choice of foods and their preparation. Here are a few simple recipes which every mother should know and which can be made easily. Each has a medicinal as well as a food value.

BARLEY WATER WITH PREPARED FLOUR.—Two tablespoonfuls of pearl barley, one quart of water. Boil continuously for six hours. As the water boils away add more, keeping the quantity one quart. Strain through coarse muslin. It is well to soak the barley before cooking it.

OATMEAL WATER.—One tablespoonful of oatmeal blended with one tablespoonful of cold water. Add pinch of salt. Stir in one quart of boiling water. Boil three hours, adding water as it boils away. Strain through firm sieve of cheesecloth. After the infant is six months old either barley or oatmeal water can be used in preparing its food instead of plain water. Barley water is to be used when there is looseness of the bowels. The oatmeal water remedies constipation.

ARROW ROOT GRUEL serves the same purpose as barley water. Mix two tablespoonfuls of arrow root, one teaspoonful of sugar, a little salt, with two tablespoonfuls of cold water. Add one cupful of boiling water, stirring constantly. Cook for twenty minutes. Then add two cupfuls of scalded milk and bring once more to the boiling point. Strain.

BEEF ESSENCE.—Cut the lean of beef into small pieces and place them in a wide-mouthed bottle. Cork securely and allow to stand for several hours in a vessel of boiling water. This may be given in teaspoonful doses to infants who temporarily cannot take milk. It is a tonic.

To try the heat of the bathwater for baby dip your elbow in. If you find it too hot cool it till it is right for the elbow, when it is the right heat for baby.

"A Progressive Peterborough."

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Borden administration is to be warmly congratulated upon the prosperity reflected in Mr. White's budget pronouncement.

We will welcome more explicit information regarding unrest in India and South Africa before venturing any opinion as to the probable outcome.

Russia's population is increasing at the rate of about two and a half millions a year. It now stands at 147,000,000, of which over 100,000,000 are peasants.

HISTORY

Hon. W. T. White, Finance Minister, last week announced in his budget speech the largest surplus in the history of Canada. The surplus of ordinary revenue over ordinary expenditure was no less than $55,000,000 as much as the total revenue of but a few years ago. Thanks to careful financing combined with buoyant revenues Canada's credit was never in such a satisfactory position as at the present time. The capital expenditure was all paid out of revenue, the total amount being $33,000,000, leaving no less than $23,000,000 which was applied to reducing the National debt, which during the year was brought down from $339,000,000 to $316,000,000.

Two loans which matured during the past year were also paid out of revenue, so that the Finance Minister did not have to float a solitary loan during the past year. Another loan of £1,700,000 falls due this fall, and it, too, will be paid by Mr. White out of revenue.

Then during the year there was purchased some $13,000,000 wotth of G. T. P. bonds. This was done through the legislation passed this year. By the "joker" inserted by the Laurier Government in the G. T. P. contract, the Government was compelled to implement the difference between the selling price of the bonds and par. Mr. White has saved much of this difference by purchasing the bonds.

Altogether, the Canadian financial situation was never better and the outlook for the coming year is for the best twelve months in the history of the Dominion of Canada.

REJUVENATION OF SPAIN

King Alfonso XIII's recent visit to the French capital gives rise to the question as to whether Spain is once again to take her former place among the real powers of Europe. The youthful monarch of the Latin kingdom was received in Paris with all the honors, both military and civil, to which his rank entitled him, and, it is reported that an agreement was reached during his stay whereby the Triple Entente will become a Quadruple Entente by adding the Spanish nation to the Russia-France-England combination.

Whatever defects or faults may be attributed to Alfonso, it must be admitted that he has proved, since his of very strong will and at times great far-sightedness and it is highly probaccession to the throne, a young man able that he saw that the union of Spain with her new friends would pretty nearly even up the relative strength of the Entente and the German-Austria-Italy Triple Alliance.

Quite recently Premier Romanones [illegible] declared that Spain could no longer afford to remain isolated, but must so arrange her affairs as to "be on terms of the best friendship with our two great neighbors by land and sea—France and England." Shortly after this remark in the Spanish Parliament the visit of the King to France was arranged. Its result is yet to be seen.

Indolence and unrest within her own borders have been marked characteristics of the Spanish nation for over a century making Spain her own worst enemy, and if she can overcome these two great evils and assume the progressive spirit of the times, she undoubtedly can take her old place among the nations of the world. That place is hers by right and, if she makes herself worthy of it, she will certainly receive a most cordial welcome.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Calgary Herald Gives a Most Eulogistic Biography of Mr. J. H. Burnham, the Energetic Member for West Peterborough, That Strikes the Bull's-Eye of Truth.

The Calgary Herald, one of the brightest newspapers of the far West has the following about the member for West Peterborough.

"John Hampden Burnham, the Conservative M.P. for West Peterborough, who introduced in the Canadian house of commons a resolution providing that no Canadian shall be allowed to accept imperial titles, is a native Canadian, and of pure English United Empire Loyalist extraction. It is interesting to know that he was given his second name in honor of John Hampden, the great English patriot, who, in the seventeenth century, allowed himself to be imprisoned rather than submit to unjust taxation. Although he does not particularly relish the familiarity, Mr. Burnham's friends in Peterborough speak of him as "Ham" Burnham. He never gets "John" or "Hampden." He is of a most active disposition. A barrister by profession, he has followed a number of leisure to the trying path of literature. He was for a time editor of the Peterborough Review, and he has written several novels, among them "Marcelle," and "Jack Ralston." It is stated that while engaged in literary work it was not unusual for him to write all night in his apartments and seek sleep at eight or nine o'clock in the morning. In his native city he has been a resident of progressive standards and public spirit. Among other things he was instrumental in having formed a branch of the Children's Aid society, the first in Canada, and in organizing the Peterborough board of trade, of which he was secretary for several years. He is also one of the fathers of the Young Conservative Club of Peterborough, which has permanent quarters and a large membership. Mr. Burnham does not exactly care whether people approve of his course of attitude on any question, either civic or political; and has never trimmed his sails to catch the passing breeze of applause or popularity. It is interesting to recall that it was Mr. Burnham who, at the last federal general election administered the first defeat at the polls that J. R. Stratton, former provincial secretary of Ontario, ever met with in thirty years of public life. Mr. Burnham is in his fifty-third year."

Quit Sniffing, Stop Sneezing, Cure Your Cold Now!

Thousands of Cases Prove the Quickest Cure is Catarrhozone.

When germs attack the lining of the nose, make you sneeze and gag—when later on they infest the bronchial tubes—how can you follow them with a cough syrup?

You can't do it—that's all. Cough syrups go to the stomach—that's why they fail.

But Catarrhozone goes everywhere—gets right after the germs — kills them—heals the soreness—cures the inflammation—makes Catarrh disappear.

"Nothing I have ever used gives the warm, soothing sensation of Catarrhozone," writes Isabel Fry, of Seguin Falls, Ont. "I was in a frightful way with catarrh of the nose and throat—had droppings, hard breathing, bad breath and indigestion. Catarrhozone relieved at once and cured me thoroughly. It is invaluable in colds, sore throat and bronchial trouble." Not difficult for Catarrhozone to cure, because it contains the essences of pine balsams and other antiseptics that simply mean death to catarrh. Large size costs $1.00, and contains two months treatment; smaller size, 25c. and 50c. all druggists and storekeepers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Apple Salad

Green or red uncooked apples may be scooped out and filled with popcorn, nuts, celery, and some other fruit. Mix this combination with the pulp of the apple and bind together with mayonnaise. Garnish with nasturtium, grape or other leaves.

Marmalade

Cook crab apples and sweet or wild plums separately till soft. Then rub through colander and measure. To each three quarts of crab apple allow one quart of plum. Mix and weigh and allow one pound sugar to each of fruit. Cook slowly and very carefully that this may not burn till smooth and thick. Place in marmalade pots. When cold seal as for jelly.

Apple Custard Pie

For one large pie use one pint of apple sauce and a tablespoon of butter, the yolks of three eggs, beaten well, with a pinch of salt and half a cup of sugar. Beat this into a pint of hot milk and bake in shallow tin or dish lined with crust. (Pastry must be baked before pouring in the custard.) Flavor with lemon or spice. When done spread over the top a meringue made of the whites of the eggs and a half cup of sugar.

Apple Pudding

Chop a cupful of suet to a coarse powder and stir into it 3 cupfuls of flour, twice sifted with a teaspoonful of baking powder. Add enough milk to make a dough that can be rolled out. Roll into a square sheet, lay 3 cupfuls of peeled and minced apples, strewn with sugar. Bring the four corners of the sheet over the fruit, and pinch the corners to gether in the middle. Tie up firmly with a piece of broad white tape passed twice around the pudding. Lay in a steamer and cook for 2½ hours. Remove the tape and serve the pudding with a hard sauce flavored with lemon juice and powdered cinnamon.

Apple Pie

Peel and slice tart apples and place in stewpan with just enough water to keep from burning. Stew till about half tender and unbroken. Sprinkle the bottom of a pastry-lined dish or pan with dots of butter and sugar and then fill with alternate layers of the apple and sugar and butter. On the top sprinkle flour and nutmeg or cinnamon or grated lemon peel. Pour over the whole three-fourths of the apple syrup or water and sugar. Place a pastry cover over the top and slash well. The pastry lining should be baked to a light brown before the apples are added.

Creamed Apple Pie

Pare, core and quarter sweet apples. Put them into a pudding dish with a few teaspoonfuls of water to prevent burning. Cover closely and cook until tender but not broken. Add two tablespoonfuls of sugar to each cupful and let them get cold in the syrup. Then cut into thin slices or tiny dice. Roll out some puff paste quite thin; line a pie plate and sprinkle with flour. Lay on another crust and bake until brown. When ready to serve open the crusts, spread the lower one with the stewed apple, cover with whipped cream, put on the top crust and sprinkle that with powdered sugar.

Crab Apple Jelly

Make as for apple jelly, using a little more water. Do not pare or core the apples.

Another recipe for crabapple jelly: Wash and wipe the apples. Cut in half and place in crock on the back of the stove or the oven, setting in another vessel of hot water if there is danger of too great heat. When the apples are soft place in jelly bag to drain over night. Measure this juice and allow one pint of sugar to one of juice. Boil and skim the juice ten minutes before adding the heated sugar. Stir till dissolved, then boil eight or ten minutes. This makes a very tart jelly, stronger than many people like. Mint may be used to flavor this when served [illegible] or lamb.

Electric Ovens for Bakers

Electric ovens for bread baking are beginning to make their appearance in some of the large cities of Europe, and the central electric stations are promoting their use. The Vienna electric plant is making arrangements with the bakers' syndicate to have electric ovens adopted widely throughout the city, and it offers to supply the current for this use at special reduced rates. As the bakers' ovens run all night this provides an outlet for current during the hours when the load is normally low. There will soon be a trial oven put in operation in order to test the method.

CAUSE OF DOUBLE CHIN

The Formation Can be Remedied by Systematic Effort

A double chin is not to be desired, as it spoils the outline of the face. It can be remedied by systematic effort. Contrary to the common supposition, double chin is not always due to excessive fat, but is as frequently due to relaxed muscles. The simplest movement to remove the double chin is a regular exercise, a forward and backward action of the head as far as it will go. This should be taken at least twenty-five times each way, should be persisted in each night or morning and should be accompanied with a ten-minute massage with the tips fo the fingers, drawing the hands from the middle of the chin out till they touch the ears. This action stimulates the tissue. The head movement exercises the muscles and makes them firmer. Inactivity of any muscle means that that part will grow weak and flabby and lose its proper development.

To Keep Egg Yolks

When eggs are not required for immediate use, put the yolks in a basin and barely cover with cold water. Place a plate on the basin to exclude the air. Stand in a dark cool place until required for use.

SPORTING NEWS

RING.

New York, May 21.—Reports from the West, where they are still takinb about the Kilbane-Dundee fight in Los Angeles, says it is not likely Kilbane will be given another chance to box on the Pacific Coast for some time. The California sporting men were so thoroughly disgusted with the champion's showing that they don't care to pay out perfectly good money to see him again.

Kilbane, it seems, and his manager, did quite a little talking before the fight, promising that Johnny would make an example of the presumptuous challenger. Kilbane was going to show how quickly he could knock out a rival when he wanted to. Entering the ring he looked a little fat, as if he had not trained any too well, or as if he had found it hard to take the extra weight off. He showed at once that he intended to shoot over a right hand or else he bluffed with it successfully. Dundee, however, ducked the right every time, and Kilbane was soon puffing and more than willing to make a runaway fight of it, trying to outpoint the aggressive little Italian by tapping him with his powder puff left while leaping out of range.

Kilbane's showing was so poor that the ringsiders think Dundee could have beaten him decisively had not Dundee wasted a lot of time in fantastic maneuvers, ducking needlessly, trying to outfeint and outbox Kilbane, and leaping in the air while trying to land the left, taking all the sting out of the blows by being off his feet.

The boys, thinks his Honor, have as much right to play baseball on Sunday as men have to play golf. There is no law against it But, continues his Honor, the boys should attend church in the forenoon. Fairly good philosophy.

New York, May 21.—President Edward Barrow intends to stamp out rowdy tactics on the ball fields of the International League. Yesterday he indefinitely suspended Firstbaseman Swacina, of the Neward Club, for his argument with Umpire Hayts in Neward recently. Mr. Barrow says that Swacina may also be fined if an investigation of the trouble should warrant it.

Manager Smith of Newark and Zimmerman, thirdbasemen of the same club, were fined $50 each for trouble in a game at Rochester on Saturday. Manager Smith and Zimmerman will draw heavy suspensions, says President Barrow if they engage in further disorderly tactics during the game.

London, May 21.—At the close of play on Saturday the leading cricket games stood:

Warwickshire, who declared at 383 for seven, gained an easy victory over Leicestershire, whose second innings was 183 (all out). Highest scores: Montenny 58, Wood 35.

Yorkshire beat Gloucestershire by 230 runs. Gloucester second innings, 200, all out. Dipper 39, Green 33.

Sussex beat Cambridge by five wickets, declaring their second innings at 314 for five.

Health and Beauty Answers

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN.

Esther: I was glad to read that you are recommending my almozoin wrinkle-removing jelly recipe to your friends. The shampoo recipe you ask for consists only of 1 teaspoonful of canthrox dissolved in a cup of hot water. It lathers freely and makes the head feel good. By shampooing the hair with canthrox every 2 or 3 weeks it will remain soft and fluffy. Canthrox also relieves itching and irritation of the scalp. (If troubled with dandruff read answer to Elsie.)

Worried: Waste no time on liquid preparations. Use a delatone paste, made by mixing together powdered delatone and water. Apply to hairs not wanted and in 2 or 3 minutes rub off wash the skin and the hairs are entirely dissolved. This is a quick, harmless method, but be sure you get the delatone in an original package.

Mrs. G.: Try pyroxin on your eyebrows and you will be delighted on how quickly they will grow. By the same treatment you can make short, straggly eyelashes come in long and curly. Apply the pyroxin at lash-roots with thumb and forefinger. You can buy pyroxin in a small, original package, but be careful and don't get any where no hair is wanted.

Birdie: I agree with you. A bright, clear, youthful eye is always attractive and admired. Most girls neglect to give the eyes proper care. Very few use an eye-tonic, which I think essential in caring for the eyes. I have found the following tonic to be fine for weak, tired and inflamed eyes: Go to your druggist and one ounce of crystos and dissolve it in a pint of water. Use two or three drops in each eye night and crow's feet as easily as worry, but inexpensive eye-tonic will do you lots of good and relieve you of that dull, tired feeling above the eyes.

Beulah: You are not the only girl with a sallow complexion and oily skin who cannot find a face powder that pleases her. But you need not despair. There are other aids to beauty more satisfactory than face powder and the use of washes is becoming more popular everywhere. Here is a recipe for a wash that when on seems part of the skin that you can make at home and it will cost much less than any manufactured brand. Dissolve 4 ounces of spurmax in a half-pint of witch hazel or hot water and add 2 teaspoonfuls of glycerine. This will make a complexion-beautifier that whitens and softens the skin without the use of powder, and it also tends to remove pimples, tan and freckles.

Flo: Yes, dear, smiling makes crow's feet as easily as worrt, but don't stop smiling on that account. Scowling, age and eye-troubles, also make deep wrinkles. You can quickly remove wrinkles and keep the face velvety — and smooth at very little cost by making at home and using regularly this greaseless vegetable jelly-cream, which does not grow hair. Get from your druggist one ounce almozoin and dissolve it in half-pint of cold water or witch hazel, adding 2 teaspoonfuls of glycerine. Stir and let stand one day. Apply to wrinkled surface and leave through night, then wash off and use more of the cream as a massage. This treatment will remove and prevent the most obstinate wrinkles or finest crow's feet, while softening the skin to a velvety texture.

Elsie: Neither you nor your husband will be embarrassed by dandruff settling on your shoulders if you follow these simple directions: Brush the hair and apply a quinine hair-tonic, made by dissolving 1 ounce of quinzoin in ½ pint of alcohol and adding ½ pint of cold water. Apply once a week. This tonic removes dandruff, stops falling hair and keeps the scalp in a healthy condition, promoting the growth of hair and making it glossy and abundant.

Katherine: Do not be alarmed because you have become fleshy. Most of us gain weight in winter. To make a never-failing flesh-producer, get from your druggist 4 ounces of parnotis and dissolve it in 1½ pints hot water. Take 1 tablespoonful 3 times a day just before meals

Alice: Your drowsy, tired, worn-out feeling, which most of us have at the approach of warm weather, comes from the poisoned impurities in the blood which generally lead to sickness or poor health. At the first signs of spring a good blood-purifying tonic should be taken by every member of the family. The expense of making such a tonic will be small if one gets from the drug store ½ pint alcohol and 1 ounce kardene, then mix these with ½ cupful sugar, adding hot water to make a quart. A tablespoonful taken before meals will soon clear the blood of all impurities, banish pimples and sallowness and restore lost appetite and energy. No known remedy is so strengthening and energizing to a tired, "worn-out" system as this old-fashioned body-regulator. It is one of the best best health-restorers known to medical science.

Connie: A brisk walk in the fresh air will do a common headache lots of good.

BEDROOM VENTILATION

Raise the Windows or Lower the Upper Sash Before Going to Sleep

Every person should remember that it is essential to ventilate a bedroom properly. Impurities of the body are thrown off while people sleep exactly as much as when they are walking. Yet scores of men and women forget apparently that there is any need of an exit for the impure breath, or that it is [illegible] as essential to have a source of fresh air as in the waking hours. On retiring, the windows in the bedroom should be raised from the bottom and lowered from the top. If there are two windows, raise one from the bottom and lower the other from the top. The one raised should be toward the side from which the wind is blowing. The lowered one should be on the other side. If the room has a window or windows on one side only, it is often necessary to open the transom on the other side of the room or perhaps leave the door open a few inches to create a current of air. The temperature of the occupied room should not go above 60 degrees Fahrenheit even in winter.

HURRY WEARS

It is Like Worry in Exhausting the Human System

Don't hurry It wears the system like worry.

It tears out the nerves and the bodily tissues rapidly, puts lines in the face, interferes with digestion and other intestinal action, and in time may produce permanent palpitation of the heart. Loss of both mental and physical control and a number of varieties of nervous disorders may result.

Hurry exhausts twice the energy in a given time than would be required to accomplish twice the work if undertaken leisurely.

Don't hurry at your meals. If you have only a few minutes in which to snatch a bite forego the usual breakfast which requires careful mastication. Instead take a cup of warm milk or break a couple of raw eggs into a cup. These you may swallow quickly. They will digest easily.

Don't hurry after a train or a street car. It has been known to be the cause of many fatal accidents and serious hurts.

Don't hurry when you are dressing in the morning. It will fluster you and make you irritable at the outset of the day. Your appearance will bear the marks of the insufficient time, too. Instead get up ten minutes earlier and take proper time.

The system can stand an immense amount of physical labor for an indefinite time. But it cannot very long safely withstand the wear of hurry.

Have plenty of exercise. Be alert in your work. But don't wear out before your time hurrying.

HEALTHOGRAMS

Proper treatment for tubercular glands in the early stages includes thorough cleansing of the tonsils mouth and teeth; tuberculin properly given and abundant feeding, good ventilation and sufficient rest.

A bedroom should not have storm windows. The windows should be left open enough to keep the temperature of the room during sleeping hours about 50 degrees. The humidity should be between 60 and 80, preferably about 70.

Stoop shoulders are best remedied by straightening the spinal column through properly developed muscles gained by gymnastics and exercise persisted in for a long time, and by the avoidance of posture and occupations which cause them.

Hives is a nervous eruption and is due to some kind of food poisoning. A good dose or two of a purgative usually cures it. Frequently one dose will suffice. Foods which cause hives should be avoided.

Suggestion creates symptoms. It does not create disease. Deny yourself the self-indulgence of thinking the first and you may double your reserve power to cope with the second.

Water in abundance is an excellent aid to health if not more than two glasses are taken at one time. Very cold or very hot drinks are not good for the stomach.

Daytime drowsiness may often be overcome by sleeping less at night, having more fresh air in the workroom or living rooms, eating a lighter noon meal, correcting constipation, getting more exercise and giving more thought to the subject in hand.

Colds are caused by germs. The best way to avoid them is to eat lightly, harden one's self, keep the nose clean, avoid people with colds and keep out of warm rooms and badly ventilated rooms. Dress suitably.

Warm up the body with a half-dozen good breaths. Deep breathing is an excellent method of diffusing heat throughout the body and a very fair method of increasing the production of heat.

SHEEP IN CANADA

They are Poorly Cared for Says Commissioners' Report

In their report on the sheep industry the commissioners who investigated it on behalf of the Dominion Government stated, among other things, that sheep in Canada are, as a rule, poorly housed and poorly fed, that severe losses are sustained through lack of proper care during the winter season, and that from shearing to marketing no country in the world handles its wool in a worse manner. Besides pointing out these weaknesses of many Canadian sheep raisers the commissioners reported fully upon the state of the industry in Great Britain and described how old country shepherds handle their flocks. A farmer there may keep sheep of the breed popular in the district and although they may not be eligible for record in an Association Flock Book they are very highly bred and young ewes are sold at very remunerative prices to neighboring farmers for crossing purposes. For producing early lambs he ewes are bred to lamb soon after New Years. Male lambs not intended for the early trade are always wethered. Besides grass pastures, such crops as kael, vetches, rape, cabbages and turnips are grown for the sheep. These are often sown in succeeding periods in season so that when one is consumed another is ready, thus providing fresh food a great part of the summer. The sheep are not allowed to forage over large areas, but are often kept within portable fences which are moved periodically to take up new patches. The same thoroughness is exercised in the treatment of the flock throughout the winter, with the result that sheep keeping is a highly profitable branch of English agriculture.

Moving Pictures and Their Origin

What we know as moving pictures originated, it is stated, in a question asked by Sir John Herschel of his friend Charles Babbage. This was in 1826, and the question asked was how both sides of a shilling could be seen at once.

Babbage replied by taking a shilling from his pocket and holding it before a mirror.

This did not satisfy Sir John, who set the shilling spinning on a large table, at the same time pointing out that if the eye is placed on a level with a rotating coin, both sides can be seen at once.

Babbage was so struck by the experiment that the next day he described it to a friend, Dr. Fitton, who immediately made a working model.

On one side of the disc was drawn a bird, on the other side an empty bird cage. When the card was revolved on a silk thread, the bird appeared to be in the cage. This model showed the persistence of vision upon which all moving pictures depend for their effect.

The eye retains the image of the object seen for a fraction of a second after the object has been removed

This model was called the thaumatrope.

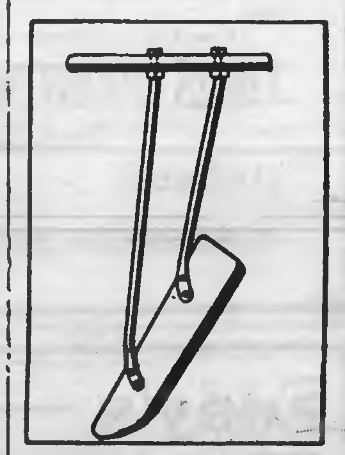
Next came the zoetrope, or "wheel of life." A cylinder was perforated with a series of slots, and within the cylinder was placed a band of drawings of dancing men. On the apparatus being slowly rotated, the figures seen through the slots appeared to be in motion.

The first systematic photographs of men and animals taken at regular intervals were made by Edward Maybridge in 1877.

NEWEST SOD CUTTER

Broad Blade Shears Through Turf with Ease and Speed

The cutting of sod with most of the tools used in that operation is rather tedious. It is usually done with a short curved blade on the end of a long handle and the workman has to step on the top of the blade to force it through the turf and repeat the action every six or eight inches. A western man devised a sod cutter that appears to be a big improvement over the old type. A broad, sharp blade is fixed to two substantially parallel arms that are attached to a handle. To cut the sod the workmen inserts two sticks in the ground and runs his guide line from one to the other. Then he starts at one end with the cutter and pushing it straight ahead of him, literally ploughs his way along. It is easy to see how much time this implement will save.



PUSH BLADE STRAIGHT AHEAD

TREES AND LIGHTNING

No Particular Kind Chosen When a Bolt Seeks Conductor

The relation of trees to lightning, as shown by a forestry bulletin, does not wholly accord with popular beliefs. It is found that trees are the objects most often struck because they are the most numerous of all prominent objects; they offer a short course to the ground, and their spreading branches in the air and roots in the soil present an ideal conductor to the ground.

Any kind of tree may be chosen by the lightning, the greater number in any locality being found among the dominant species. The likelihood of any tree being struck is increased if it is taller than surrounding trees, is isolated, is on high land, is deeply rooted, and if its condition—as when wet—makes it the best electrical conductor of the vicinity at the time of the flash.

Lightning may set a forest fire by igniting the tree or—what is much more likely to be the case—the humus about the base.

EXPERT APPLE TRADE

Excellent Condition of Quality and Packing Wins Confidence

That grading and packing of Canadian apples for export to Great Britain is constantly improved is shown in a report from Mr. J. F. Ray, Canadian Trade Commissioner at Birmingham, sent to the Department of Trade and Commerce at Ottawa. He writes:—

"Your commissioner visits Smithfield market weekly in order to ascertain the state of the fruit market, quality of Canadian apples, and to seek probable buyers. It is gratifying to report the excellent condition in which apples arrive. Eight years ago complaints about quality and packing were numerous; but there appears to be no complaint of any kind now. Such a state of affairs is sure to increase the confidence of Birmingham buyers, and cannot fail to augment direct imports."

TENDERS FOR DREDGING

SEALED TENDERS, addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for dredging, Collingwood," will be received until 4.00 P.M., Thursday, June 5, 1913, for dredging required at Collingwood, Ontario.

Tenders will not be considered unless made on the forms supplied, and signed with the actual signatures of the tenderers.

Combined specification and form of tender can be obtained on application to the Secretary, Department of Public Works, Ottawa, and plan of work may be seen at the Office of the Assistant Chief Engineer of Public Works, Ottawa, and the Office of the District Engineer, Confederation Life Building, Toronto, Ont. Tenders must include the towing of the plant to and from the work. Dredges and tugs not owned and registered in Canada shall not be employed in the performance of the work contracted for. Contractors must be ready to begin work within thirty days after the date they have been notified of the acceptance of their tender.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, for five per cent. (5 p.c.) of the contract price, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,

MUNICIPAL FORMS ALWAYS IN STOCK

SYNOPSIS OF DOMINION LAND REGULATIONS

ANY person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-agency for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any agency, on certain conditions by father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

Duties.—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, solely owned and occupied by him or by his father, mother, son, daughter, brother, or sister.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties.—Must reside upon the homestead or pre-emption six months in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and cultivate fifty acres extra.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may enter for a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties.—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

Newspapers will not be paid for this advertisement if they insert it without authority from the Department.—40791.

An Auto Polo Game

What is thought to have been the first automobile polo game ever played was staged in Wichita, Kansas. Four stripped automobiles and eight men took part. An ordinary basketball was driven back and forth over the field, the object being to drive it between goal posts sixty yards apart. Carl Evans and Ross King, two race drivers, did the greater part of the playing. The game was played in three ten-minute periods and ended with the score a tie, 1 to 1. King's automobile turned a complete somersault in the air on one sharp turn, but was righted and he finished the game. No one was injured.

MAKING A PORTAGE

How to Ease the Weight of a Canoe

It has been said that the portages cure more people of the woods fever than anything else to be found in the wild lake country. The burdens one must carry at the portages are certainly discouraging even to the most enthusiastic and cause much backache and general soreness.

The carrying of the canoe over the portages has always been a problem. Some of the canoes are so large that it is impossible for one man to manage them. This device would not do for them. But for the smaller and lighter boats a much easier method of portage has been invented than the old custom of raising the canoe over the head and walking with it in this uncomfortable manner, with the arms bearing much of the weight.

A canoe rest for the shoulders has been devised that is made of four pieces of stout board and lets the entire weight fall on the shoulders without straining the canoe or the man who is carrying it. The four pieces of board are fashioned into a frame which is provided with padded notches for the shoulders, on one side and on the other smaller notches at each end into which fall the battens of the canoe.

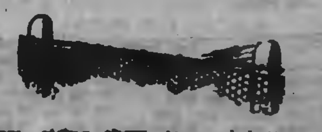
Roll the Ladder

A step ladder is an awkward thing to trail about from place to place. Let's not trail it any longer. Put casters on each of its four legs and push it around. You'll find it's a whole lot easier.

Wire Netting Fence

The wire netting on the chicken yard fence gives a lot of trouble very often. It sags and is difficult to fasten to the board frame. A new way of putting it up has been found. Don't use a board frame.

When your fence posts are up good and firm, instead of nailing laths on them, string them, top and bottom, with heavy wire. Then stretch your netting and fasten it to this wire frame with hooks made of the same wire.



It's the simplest and easiest way to put up a wire netting fence, and if it is properly stretched when put on there will be no sagging.

Extensive Scheme of Irrigation Recommended for Australia

N. R. W. Nielsen, formerly Minister of Lands for Australia, who conducted an investigation into the irrigation methods of North America, has issued a report, in which he says that the eastern coast of Australia can be made quite as productive as any similar area in Canada. He recommends the Government to undertake extensive irrigation works, declaring that the cost of these would be amply repaid.

Mr. Nielsen also recommends the organization of a general scheme of immigration from Canada, the New South Wales Government undertaking to pay a proportion of the fares of those persons possessing a certain amount of capital.

Dear Sirs.—
It is just one year ago that we put in the first stock of SANOL and SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES CURE, and we wish to state that we have been amazed at the remarkable sale of these remedies. We have had many repeat orders in both our stores and have sold retail $1000.00 worth of these remedies. In spite of all these sales we have yet to hear of one dissatisfied customer, while many have come back to tell us of the wonderful cures resulting from the Medicine.
Another striking feature of this business is that so many customers come in stating that SANOL has cured Mr.—— their intimate friend, and they wished to try it for themselves.

MY LADY OF DOUBT

By Randall Parrish.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Major Lawrence, son of Judge Lawrence of Virginia, whose wife was a Lee, is sent on a perilous mission by Gen. Washington, just after the winter at Valley Forge.

CHAPTER II—Disguised in a British uniform arrives within the enemy's lines.

CHAPTER III—The Major attends a great fete and saves the "Lady of the Blended Rose" from mob. He later meets the girl at a brilliant ball.

CHAPTER IV—Trouble is started over a waltz, and Lawrence is urged by his partner, Mistress Mortimer, (the Lady of the Blended Rose), to make his escape.

CHAPTER V—Lawrence is detected as a spy by Captain Grant of the British army, who agrees to a duel.

CHAPTER VI—The duel is stopped by Grant's friends and the spy makes a dash for liberty, swimming a river following a narrow escape.

CHAPTER VII—The Major arrives at the shop of a blacksmith, who is friendly, and knows the Lady of the Blended Rose.

CHAPTER VIII—Captain Grant and rangers arrive and search the blacksmith shop in vain for the spy.

CHAPTER IX—Lawrence joins the minute men who capture Grant and his train.

CHAPTER X—Major Lawrence is made prisoner by an Indian and two white men.

CHAPTER XI—Lawrence's captors lock him in a strong cell, where he meets Peter the jailer.

CHAPTER XII—Peter advises Lawrence not to attempt escape as "some one" will send for him.

CHAPTER XIII—Grant's appearance adds mystery to the combination of circumstances.

CHAPTER XIV—Lawrence again meets the Lady of the Blended Rose, who informs him that he is in her house and that she was in command of the party that attacked and captured him.

CHAPTER XV—The captive is thrust into a dark underground chamber when Captain Grant begins a search of the premises.

CHAPTER XVI—After digging his way out, Lawrence finds the place deserted. Evidences of a battle and a dead man across the threshold.

CHAPTER XVII—Col. Mortimer, father of the Lady of the Blended Rose, finds his home in ruins.

CHAPTER XVIII—Capt. Grant insists that Lawrence be strung up at once.

CHAPTER XIX—Miss Mortimer appears, explains the mystery and Lawrence is held a prisoner of war, and is again locked in the strong room.

CHAPTER XX — Lawrence escapes through plans arranged by The Lady and sees Grant attack Miss Mortimer.

CHAPTER XXI—Grant is knocked out by Lawrence, who comes to Miss Mortimer's relief, and then makes his escape.

CHAPTER XXII—Captain Grant's base villainy revealed.

CHAPTER XXIII—Lawrence returns to Valley Forge, where he learns more of Grant's perfidy.

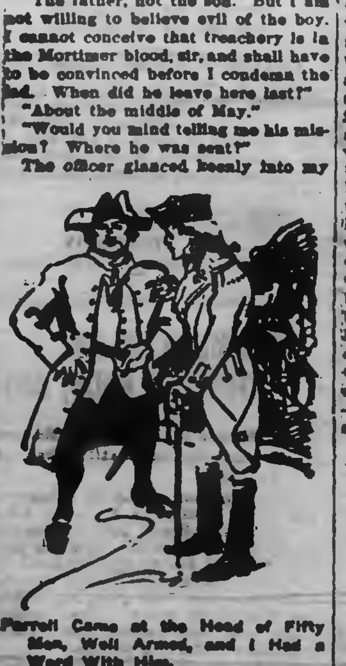
"The father, not the son. But I am not willing to believe evil of the boy. I cannot conceive that treachery is in the Mortimer blood, sir, and shall have to be convinced before I condemn the lad. When did he leave here last?"

"About the middle of May."

"Would you mind telling me his mission? Where he was sent?"

The officer glanced keenly into my face; then ran hastily over a package of papers taken from an open trunk.



Farrell Came at the Head of Fifty Men, Well Armed, and I Had a Word With Him.

"I can see no harm in doing so now, major. He was sent to communicate with a British officer—a prominent Tory—who has associations with 'Red' Fagin, and others in Monmouth county. This officer has in the past, for a consideration, furnished us with valuable information, generally through young Mortimer, who knew him. He had written us that he had more to sell."

"Where were they to meet?"

"At a rendezvous known as the Lone Tree, not far from Medford."

"Was the Tory officer named Grant?"

He stared at me in surprise.

"I am not at liberty to answer."

"Oh, very well; however, I understand the situation even better than you do probably. Only I advise you one thing—don't condemn that boy until you learn the truth. Grant is an unmitigated, cold-blooded scoundrel, and the treachery is his. You'll learn that, if you wait long enough. Mortimer is either dead, or in Fagin's hands. Good night."

I passed out, and was beyond the guard, before he could call me, even had he desired to do so. I had no wish to talk with him longer. I felt disappointed, sick at heart, and realized this staff officer was strongly prejudiced against young Mortimer. It seemed to me I saw a little light, although not much. Eric had been at Elmhurst, and Claire was not innocent of his presence in that neighborhood. She was shielding him, and it was through her help that his first report to Lee had been sent back by the Indian. Then Eric must have been in the house while I was there. Indeed it must have been Eric who made me prisoner. And to protect him she had told me a deliberate falsehood.

As I rode back through the night, finding a path almost by instinct through the mass of military encampments, I thought of all these things, exonerating her from wrong, and yet wondering more and more at her real connection with the various events. The chief had not stated what information of value Grant had promised to reveal; nor what Eric's first report had contained. In my sudden disappointment I had forgotten to inquire. And where could the boy be? What could have happened to him? Something serious surely to keep him thus hidden for nearly a month. Claire would know, but she was probably long ago back in Philadelphia in the heart of the British garrison. And I? Well, I was tied hand and foot by discipline; helpless to turn aside from duty now in the face of this new campaign. Every man was needed, and no personal consideration would excuse my leaving the ranks even for a day. It was with heavy heart I rode into the camp of my regiment, and lay down on the bare ground, with head pillowed upon the saddle, knowing the drums would sound in a few short hours.

It was hard to work through the routine of the next few days, although some excitement was given us of Maxwell's brigade by scouting details sent across the valley to observe the movements of the British patrols. On such duty I passed the greater portion of two days in the saddle, and, by chance, met both Farrell and Duval, who were with the Jersey militiamen, now rapidly coming in to aid us, as the rumors of an impending battle spread across country. Farrell came at the head of fifty men, rough looking, raggedly dressed fellows, but well armed, and I had a word with him while pointing out where Dickinson's troops were camped. Unfortunately he knew little of value to me. Mortimer's column of Queen's Rangers had passed his place on their return to Philadelphia two days after my escape. Grant was not with them, but Claire was, while Peter had been left behind at Elmhurst. Fagin had not been overtaken, although the Rangers had engaged in a skirmish with some of his followers, losing two men. Colonel Mortimer had been wounded slightly. As to Eric he knew nothing—no one had even mentioned the lad's name.

It was thus clearly evident I could do nothing, although I now possessed a well defined theory of just what had occurred. To my mind Eric was in the hands of Fagin, either hidden securely away among the sand caves for some purpose connected with Grant's treachery, or else with the intention of claiming the reward for his capture offered by Howe. The former probably seemed most likely in view of Grant's failure to return to Philadelphia with Colonel Mortimer, yet there was no reason why the conspirators should not wreak vengeance, and win the reward also. But did Claire know, or suspect the predicament of her brother? If she did, then she was seeking to conceal the truth from her father, but would never remain long inactive in the city. I knew the girl's real spirit too well to believe she would fail for long in learning the boy's fate. And when she did she would act quickly. Perhaps even now she was back at Elmhurst, facing peril in the track of the contending armies, striving to give the lad refuge.

In an agony of apprehension I asked for a scouting detail in that direction, but was sternly refused. Word had come that Clinton was evacuating Philadelphia; that his advance was already across the Delaware. Any moment might bring to our little army orders to press forward to intercept him. I was a soldier, compelled to remain.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Forcing Clinton to Battle.

I was left behind at Coryell's Ferry, for the purpose of hastening forward any supplementary orders from Washington, when Maxwell, and the Jersey militiamen, pressed forward in an effort to retard the march of the enemy. From the reports of scouts we began to understand what was occurring. Before dawn on the eighteenth of June the British army began leaving the city, crossing the Delaware at Gloucester point, and by evening the motley host, comprising Regulars, Hessians, Loyalists, and a swarm of camp followers, were halted near Haddenfield, five miles southeast of Camden.

The moment this knowledge reached Washington, he acted. In spite of opposition from some of his leading officers, his own purpose remained steadfast, and every preparation had already been carefully made for energetic pursuit. Our troops fit for service numbered less than five thousand men, many of these hastily gathered militia, some of whom had never been under fire, but the warmth and comfort of the summer time, together with the good news from France, had inspired all with fresh courage. Whatever of dissension existed was only among the coterie of general officers, the men in the ranks being eager for battle, even though the odds were strong against us. There was no delay, no hitch in the promptness of advance. The department of the Quartermaster-General had every plan worked out in detail, and, within two days, the entire army had crossed the river, and pushed forward to within a few miles of Trenton. Morgan, with six hundred men, was hurried forward to the reinforcement of Maxwell, and, relieved from my duties at the ferry, I was permitted to join his column.

I know not when, during all my army life, I was more deeply impressed with the awful solemnity of war, than as I watched these volunteer soldiers land on the Jersey shore, and tramp away through the dust. In those ranks were sick and wounded scarcely able to keep up; occasionally one would crawl aside but the moment he was able would join some new body, and resume the march.

They were animated by a stern purpose which yielded power. Such as these were not to be trifled with. Others might scoff at their raggedness of line, their carelessness of discipline, their nondescript garments, and variety of equipment, but to one who had seen such in battle—who had been with them at Trenton, Brandywine, and Germantown—they were warriors not to be despised, stern, grim fighters, able to hold their own against England's best drilled battalions. I watched them file past—Wayne's, Varnum's, Scott's brigades, and Jackson's and Grayson's regiments—marking the brown, dust-caked faces, the eager eyes, the sturdy, tireless tread, the well oiled muskets. Boys, men, graybeards, all alike exhibited in their faces the same expression. They were anticipating battle against a hated foe, and counted hardship as nothing compared with the joy of conflict. Every step brought them closer to the grapple of arms—to that supreme test of strength, courage, endurance, for which they had left their homes. They might be poorly drilled, ill-dressed, variously armed, yet these were fighting men.

It was midnight when Morgan led us up the steep bluff, and out upon the sandy road. We advanced silently, and in straggling column through the darkness, passing the embers of camp fires for several miles, the recumbent soldiery of other commands sleeping on the ground. At Hopewell, Washington was holding another council with his officers. As we swung past we could perceive his tall figure standing in the glow of a fire, and there arose from the lips of our men a sudden, involuntary cheer, breaking strangely upon the solemn silence of the night. The group about him were startled and looked about, and he paused a moment shading his eyes.

"What troops are these?" he asked, his voice cutting across the distance. A hundred answered him:

"Morgan's riflemen!"

"Good, my lads!" and even at that distance I could see his face brighten. "There will be work for you at dawn."

With a rolling cheer, echoing down our ranks from front to rear, we answered, swinging the guns over our heads, as we swept forward into the dark night. There might be discussion, dissension about that council fire, but there was none in the hearts of those who were going out to die. Already rumors were flying about regarding Lee's unwillingness to engage in battle. I saw him as I trudged past, standing beside Wayne, the firelight on his face, although his head was bowed. Even to our cheers he never once glanced up, and, as we passed beyond the radius of light, I laid my hand upon the mane of Morgan's horse.

"Is it true that Charles Lee thinks we should let Clinton go without fighting?" I asked soberly. "That was rumored at the ferry."

"'Tis enough," he answered, his eyes upon the dark column of plodding men. "And he seems to have others with him. I know not what has put the coward into the fellows of late. Saint Andrew! the odds are no greater than we have met before. But there'll be no fighting, lad, I fear, unless Washington takes the bit in his teeth and orders it. I'm glad the boys cheered him; 'twill give the man new heart."

"You favor the joining of issue?"

"Why not? Were we ever in better fettle? A retreating army is always half whipped, and we can choose our ground. Why, lad, 'tis reported Clinton's [illegible] stretches out full twelve miles, with train of baggage wagons and battery horses, and camp followers enough for a division. 'Twill be easy work attending to them, and most of his troops are Dutch and Tories."

By daylight we came up with the New Jersey militia, lying at rest along the bank of the Millstone river, waiting their turn to ford that stream, and join Maxwell on the opposite shore. From where I stood I could see the thin lines of Continentals spreading out like a fan, as the skirmishers advanced up the opposite bluffs. Down the trampled bank, men were struggling with a light battery, and suddenly in the press of figures I came upon Farrell. He was mud from head to foot, his face streaked with it, but he looked up with beaming eyes as I spoke his name, and our hands clasped.

"I thought you would be over there with Maxwell," he said, pointing across at the black dots, now clearly distinguishable in the glow of sunshine.

"I was left behind, and came up just now with Morgan," I replied. "But I am anxious enough to be with my own fellows. What means that skirmish line, Farrell? Are we already in touch with Clinton?"

He swept the hair out of his eyes with his great fist.

"No one knows exactly, but the British are not far off, and are headed this way. A scout came through with the news two hours ago—Clinton has taken the road to Monmouth." He chuckled grimly, glancing at my face. "And who think ye the lad was who told us?"

"Who?" my throat tightening.

"The same you was so anxious about a few days back."

"Mortimer! Eric Mortimer?"

"Aye, unless my eyes fail me already, it was the boy."

"You are sure? You saw him?"

"Well, I had a glimpse, as he came up the bank here from the ford, his horse dripping. It was dark still, and he only stopped to ask the road. I knew the voice, and the form—the lad is as slender as a girl—then he went by me, digging his horse with the spurs, and lying close. He had a Dragoon's cape flapping from his shoulders, but 'twas the boy all right. Ah! there go the guns up the bank. Now, perhaps, they'll let me take my fighting dogs across."

"He Went by Me, Digging His Horse With His Spurs and Lying Close."

The way was open for me, at least, and I swung up into the saddle, and drove my horse down the slippery shore into the water. The stream was not deep, although the current flowed swiftly, and a moment later I had found Maxwell.

"Yes," he said to my first question, "we are going to fight, although it may not be anything more serious than skirmishing today. Washington has decided in spite of Lee, thank God, and we'll have a go at the Redcoats. Lafayette commands the advance, and Wayne will be up within a few hours. We are to skirmish forward toward Monmouth Court House; Clinton has turned that way."

"You learned that from a scout?"

"Yes; he just came through; one of Charles Lee's men, I understood—a blue-eyed, rosy-cheeked boy, who said his name was Mortimer. He had ridden from Cookstown, and was reeling in the saddle, but would go on. Your men are over there, major, beyond the clump of timber. In my judgment we'll accomplish little today, for there is a heavy storm in those clouds yonder."

"How many men will we have when Wayne comes up?"

"About four thousand, with the militia. We are ordered to hang close to Clinton's left, while Morgan circles him to the right. 'Tis said the British have transports at Sandy Hook, and are trying to get there; that was the word young Mortimer brought in."

The bath in the water seemed to have helped my horse, but I rode slowly up the valley toward the wood which served as my guide. Before I reached the skirmishers, great drops of rain fell, and then a downpour, utterly blotting out the landscape.

Soda Peels Potatoes

Many housewives do not know that it will be much easier to scrape potatoes if they are soaked for a while in water in which a little soda has been dissolved. Add a little milk to the water in which they are boiled and it will improve the flavor.

Great Britain sold more than 1,630,000 incandescent lamps to other countries in the first six months last year.

Bright, Ruddy Cheeks For Pale Girls

NO LONGER ANY NEED TO BE PALE, WEAK OR ANAEMIC.

By Following the Advice of Miss McEwen You Can Quickly Become Strong Again.

The pallid girl always lacks appetite. What little she eats is badly digested.

At night she is restless, she dozes, but doesn't sleep soundly.

Vital force must be increased, new blood must be supplied and a general rebuilding take place before she will feel like she ought.

Dr. Hamilton has invaluable experience in these cases and found nothing so prompt in building up young women as his vegetable pills of Mandrake and Butternut.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills begin by cleansing the system and purifying the blood; they also improve digestion and render food ready for absorption. Additional nourishment is quickly supplied and the patient is fast strengthened and invigorated.

Full of spirit, ruddy and strong is the girl that assists her system by the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

The following recent letter from Miss Etta McEwen, of Haliburton, speaks for itself:

"In using Dr. Hamilton's Pills I find my system is wonderfully built up. It is certainly the most effective remedy I ever used. I have now a good appetite, sleep more soundly, and awaken in the morning feeling quite refreshed.

"Formerly I felt tired and depressed. I looked as if a severe illness were hanging over my head.

"Nothing could give quicker results than Dr. Hamilton's Pills and I strongly advise every young woman to use them."

All dealers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box or five boxes for $1.00, by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Police Court Budget.

At yesterday's police court, an ex-local hotelman was charged with too fast driving on George street. Jim pleaded guilty and was taxed $5.

Effie Wilson, charged with being a common prostitute, was remanded for another week. It seems that some women, interested in her welfare, have secured a home for her.

Robert Carney, charged with neglecting to send his young son to school, claimed that he could not force him to attend, though he had tried every means possible. The case was enlarged for two weeks.

Peterborough Cheese Board.

At the first annual meeting for the season of the Peterborough Cheese Board, President Switzer gave notice of motion that men selling off the Board, be expelled. The bidding opened at 10¾ and rose to 11 3-16, Mr. Thompson taking Shearer, Villiers, Westwood, Ormond and Indian River. At 11¼ Mr. Gillespie took the remainder of the Board.

All the officers were re-elected with the exception that Mr. Mann succeeds Mr. Hanna as one of the vice-presidents.

The Board decided to accept the offer of Mr. Travers for the use of the Bank of Montreal Chambers.

A Crank and His Cane.

The case of poor old Robert Redmond, who has exceeded the Biblical allotage of man's life history by some 14 years, and has seemingly of late, absorbed a growing spirit of cussedness, or, as noted by Magistrate Dumble, is a cantankerous old crank was again in the police court lime light yesterday. In our issue of yesterday, we noted that Redmond had charged Col. Miller with throwing him down and hurting his hand. As, before said, Col. Miller and his son both showed conclusively that the old man had fallen while striking with his walking stick at Col. Miller. Magistrate Dumble, who tries to be fair, adjourned the case until yesterday to take the evidence of persons in Col. Miller's store when the trouble occurred. Yesterday those people unanimously testified that Redmond was the aggressor and that Col. Miller used almost unnatural kindness with so cranky an old man. The charge was dismissed.

DEATHS AND FUNERALS

Laid At Rest.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Russell, who passed away on Monday afternoon, was held yesterday afternoon to the Little Lake cemetery. Rev. F. A. Connors, pastor of Park street Baptist church, conducted the services which were very impressive. Mrs. Russell's death was caused through taking carbolic acid in mistake for other medicine

Walter Meharry.

Early yesterday morning, Walter C. Meharry, son of Mr. Robert Meharry, of 505 Cross street, city, passed away at the age of 14 years. For the past four years he has been an acute sufferer. He was a general favorite among the lads in that vicinity of the city.

His father, two brothers and two sisters mourn his death.

The brothers are: Robert John and Archie, and the sisters are Edith and Greta.

The funeral will take place this afternoon to the Little Lake cemetery.

Zaccheus Burnham.

Yesterday morning one of the best known and most universally respected residents of the County, passed away in the person of Mr. Zaccheus Burnham of Otonabee. Deceased was the eldest son of the late Rev. Mark Burnham, and brother of Dr. George Burnham, of this city, and grandson of the late Hon. Zaccheus Burnham, of Cobourg.

Deceased leaves a family of two sons and two daughters, Mark, on the homestead and George C., of Toronto, Mrs. Nickel and Miss Burnham at home. Mrs. Burnham survives.

Further announcements will be made as to the funeral.

Have Been an Untold Benefit

NEW BRUNSWICK WOMAN PRAISES DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

She Suffered for Four Years,—and Her Doctor Could Not Help Her, But Dodd's Kidney Pills Gave Her a New Lease of Life.

Porton, Carleton Co., N.B., May 21.—(Special)—"I find Dodd's Kidney Pills the best kidney medicine I have ever used. They have been of untold benefit to me."

The speaker is Mrs. John S. Dickinson, of this place. She is enthusiastic in her praises of the great Canadian kidney remedy, and not without reason.

"I suffered from kidney trouble that started in a cold," she continues. "And for four years I was never free of it. I was treated by a doctor, but he did not seem to be able to do me much good.

"I had rheumatism and neuralgia, and my joints were stiff; my muscles cramped, and I was always tired and nervous. I perspired freely with the slightest exertion. I was depressed and low spirited, my limbs swelled, and I had a dragging sensation across the loins. lb

"Nine boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills made a new woman of me."

Are not Mrs. Dickinson's symptoms those of any run-down worn-out woman? They are also the symptoms of kidney disease. Dodd's Kidney Pills give new life to run-down women by curing their kidneys.

Yesterday Mr. Switzer of the Montgomery House gave a work out to Ora Medium, Mr. Frank Montgomery's colt. This local horse shows indisputable signs of speed.

The public are cordially invited to these meetings.

REGRET EXPRESSED OVER A DEPARTING DIVINE

At the May meeting of the Quarterly Official Board of the George street Methodist Church, an unexpected question came up for settlement in that the pastor, Rev. Mr. Couch, had received a unanimous invitation to become the pastor of the McLeod street Methodist Church Ottawa. Recognizing that this invitation meant a still wider field of usefulness for Mr. Couch, the Board consented, though with deep regret, to part with their pastor at the close of his third year and, accordingly, invited the Rev. R. G. Peever of the McLeod street Methodist church to become their pastor at the close of the present conference year.

To show their appreciation of Mr. Couch and their regret at his approaching departure, the Board, after several had expressed their personal feelings, unanimously adopted the following resolution by a standing vote.

Resolved, that the Quarterly Official Board of the George street Methodist church, in severing the pastoral relationship of the Rev. Isaac Couch, M.A., B.D., to this church, desire to express their regret that a call to a larger charge has taken him from them before the completion of his four year term. He has show exceptional ability and his preaching has been earnest and instructive. He has been in constant touch with the Sabbath School and has been a faithful pastor, winning the good will and respect of his people. We bespeak for him continued success in his life work in a wider sphere and express our sincerest wishes for the future happiness and prosperity of himself and family.

SELLS MEDICINE FOR SOUL AND BODY, BOTH

Owen Kirnan Does Thriving Business Among Negroes Until Taken In Custody.

New Orleans, May 21.—Good for body and soul, was the way Owen Kirnan, an alleged fakir, advertised a medicine with which he did a thriving business among negroes until Detectives Glynn and Mellon arrested him Thursday. He gave his address as 1052 Camp street. The officers took him into custody for selling medicine without a license.

Kirnan is said to have been selling his medicine to negroes at a dollar a bottle, telling them that it was a good blood purifier and that it would clean their souls. He said that he was representing a Chicago firm and that he thought the firm had secured the proper license. Second Recorder Gauthreaux Friday sentenced him to pay a fine of $25 or serve thirty days in the parish prison.

YOU CAN MAKE MONEY IN

Carmangay

"The Star of Alberta"

PAST The splendidly strategic site of Carmangay was discovered by a far seeing, shrewd railway engineer attracted to the district by the lure of the finest wheat in the Canadian West. He snapped up lands where the wide canyons of the Little Bow River narrows to a point. Here must all railways cross. The C. P. R. came and the shipping centre created went ahead by leaps and bounds.

PRESENT Carmangay today is a thriving incorporated town, with not less than 53 business places. Her up-to-date electric and natural water supply systems are owned and operated by the people. Carmangay boasts an eight-roomed schoolhouse, two banks and four big elevators, shipping over a million bushels in 1911 and 1½ millions in 1912. Carmangay has coal mines operating, and the entire district is underlaid with coal of finest Galt quality.

FUTURE Carmangay grows as Alberta grows. That means a wonderful future. Four new railroads are heading for Carmangay. Four new elevators are trying to cope with the tremendous wheat yields of the district. The mines are opening up splendid prospects. Carmangay is being rapidly developed into one of the greatest towns in the Canadian West. YOU can just as confidently invest in Carmangay as her own people do, who are building in brick and stone for a tremendous future. Carmangay has her own supply of finest brick clay and stone right at her doors, and will soon supply her sister cities in Alberta.

NATIONALISTS AND LIBERALS UNITE AGAINST CONSERVATIVES

Mr. Armand Lavergne and Sir Wilfrid in Close Conference at Ottawa---Navy Bill to Be Killed by Senate

Ottawa, May 22.—There seems no douby now that the close of the session will be marked by a serious clash of authority between the Upper and Lower Houses. The two most important Government measures of the session, the Highways Act and the Naval Bill are doomed to be killed by the Senate or so amended that they will be unacceptable to the Government. The Highways Act will be defeated by the Senate today. It was debated all yesterday.

Parties Combine.

The Nationalist and Liberal combination has also apparently decided to kill the Naval Bill. An agreement has evidently been reached by the two parties and an amendment that the bill cannot become law until it is submitted to the people is, it is understood, to be added on to the measure. This will be refused by the House of Commons, and it will then rest with the Senate to either accept or kill the bill.

The sensation of the hour at Ottawa is the news that Mr. Armand Lavergne and Sir Wilfrid Laurier had a conference yesterday. Since before the election of 1911 there have been strained relations between the two. However, the Naval Bill has apparently made friends of enemies once again.

The Conference.

Mr. Lavergne, the dashing young Nationalist, resplendent with an Orange tie, came to Ottawa early this week apparently as an emissary of Mr. Bourassa. Yesterday he had a conference in the office of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and it is also understood that he has been in conference with French Senators with Nationalist leanings. It is the general belief at the Capital that the amendment, whic has been decided upon is a result of an agreement between the two parties.

Senate Reform.

As to what will happen if the Senate goes so far as to kill these two measures it is hard to say. The Liberal papers are again talking of a general election, but it can be stated authoritatively that the Government has no intention of permitting a body, which is not representative of the popular will, to dictate to the House of Commons.

Premier Borden in his Toronto speech, threw out a strong warning to the Senate, and it is believed that the next step of the Government will be to take up the question of Senate reform. However, the Government is crossing no bridges until it comes to them.

The Supply Bill.

There is considerable discussion as to the constitutional aspect of the present situation. A supply bill cannot be amended by the Senate, and it is a fine point as to the right of the Senate to amend this bill which is in the nature of a money bill, being an appropriation. This would mean that the bill must be either passed or killed by the Senate. Whether the speaker of the Senate will take this view remains to be seen.

A BLOW FROM QUEBEC

According to despatches from Ottawa the Naval Aid Bill is to be strangled in the Senate. The Liberal majority in the Upper Chamber will ask to have the measure submitted to the people. This is equivalent to rejection since the Government cannot accept the Senate's dictation. It is equivalent also to a definite alliance between the Liberal leaders and the Quebec Nationalists. For apparently the Liberal majority in the Senate, instructed by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, will definitely adopt the attitude of the Nationalists towards the naval proposals of the Government. This probably means that Mr. Borden will undertake to limit the power of the Senate or abolish it altogether.

PETERBORO PRESBYTERIAL W. F. M. S. CONTINUED

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Presbyterial, W.F.M.S., was continued yesterday in St. Paul's church. Among the interesting events were: Bible reading, by Miss Dickson, Peterborough; Prayer by Mrs. Allison, Campbellcroft; Minutes Mrs. Hume, Campbellford; Mission Band conference, Mrs. D. B. Gardner Toronto; Election of Officers; Prayer, Mrs. Head, Colborne; Reading of Scriptures, Mrs. Morrison, Peterborough; Report of Clothing Committee, Mrs. W. G. Ferguson; and a most interesting and instructive address by Dr. Margaret McKellar, of India.

YOSHIHITO JAPANS EMPEROR IS VERY SERIOUSLY ILL

Eight Physicians are in Constant Attendance---Has Inflammation of Lungs

Tokio, May 22—Emperor Yoshihito of Japan, is in a state of high fever. Eight court physicians are in constant attendance on him.

The Emperor caught a slight cold on May 18, but it was announced that it was unimportant and that his Majesty would soon resume his activities.

To-night the Japanese nation was shocked by the issue of an official bulletin from the Imperial Palace in the following terms:

"The Emperor who has been suffering from a slight cold, developed to-day inflammation of the lungs. We do not consider his condition justifies great anxiety, but his temperature is high."

The bulletin was signed by eight court physicians.

FOR LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR.

Toronto, May 22.—The News says it is rumored that Dr. G. Sterling Ryerson may be next Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario. This news comes from a reliable source, and it is also said that in any event Sir John Gibson's successor will be a Toronto resident.

ST. THOMAS WINS FIRST AFTER HARD FOUGHT GAME

Quite a number of fans turned out yesterday at Riverside Park to witness the game between the Petes and St. Thomas. The weather was fine but the grounds were a little heavy after the rain of Wednesday night.

The teams were very evenly matched and a good game resulted. Some fast playing being done by both teams.

The visitors opened with game by scoring two runs in the first innings. The Petes scoring their first run in the second. The Saints got another in the 4th the Petes taking one more in the same innings.

In the beginning of the eighth St. Thomas did some good hitting, driving out two long ones, the first to deep centre while two men were on the bases, and the second to deep left scoring two more. One more run was tallied in that innings and the game was cinched for the visitors, the score standing 8—2.

Totten was there with the old life again yesterday, stealing three sacks and playing a brilliant game all through. Hilliard's hitting was also a feature, and in the latter part of the game, Clements of the Saints, walked him several times rather than let him hit. Sterling of the Petes, pitched a good steady game, but the jinx roosted over Davie's pen and the luck was against them. But the Petes threaten to fix him to-day and another good game is expected.

The Petes touched Clements for 12 hits, and the Saints got 8 off Sterling.

Chapdelaine held down the first bag in good style, getting some very bad ones. Davie Rowan feeling just a little under the weather.

SENATE MUST BEWARE OR AXE WILL DESCEND

Newspaper comments on the Borden celebration in Toronto, have been made as follows:

THREATENS THE SENATE.

Brantford Courier (Conservative): The reception to Premier Borden beggars description. It was not alone residents of Tory Toronto who joined in the ovation, but stalwarts from all over Tory Ontario. The Premier was in fine form, never better. He did not betray any sign of a harrassing session through which he has passed, and a fine Imperialism was in his every word and attitude. Mr. Borden was most clear and convincing on the navy question, which formed his main theme, and there could be no mistaking his determination when he intimated that if the Senate as at present constituted became a mere partizan tool, then steps should and would be taken calculated to make it a responsive, as well as a responsible, body.

EMPIRE DAY IS NATIONAL FETE;

In London and All England School Children Will Observe Holiday.

London, May 22.—Despite the attempted Government rebluff, Empire Day will receive a splendid national recognition here in all the London schools with their hundred thousands boys and girls, to-day, when nearly the whole morning will be devoted to a celebration. The Union Jack will be explained in patriotic songs, sung by the children, including Kiplings "Children's Song," and the National Anthem.

In many schools an historical episode will be acted.

The celebration in each case finishes with a grand march past, saluting the flag and singing "Rule Britannia."

All schools will have a half holiday. The school celebration is general, also, throughout England, but less in Scotland and Wales, where Empire Day as yet means little or nothing. Saturday's demonstration in Hyde Park will be on a gigantic scale.

ANGEL DOCTOR DEAD HIS SECRET IS UNTOLD

New York, May 22.—The lower east side is in mourning, for "The Angel Doctor" is dead. Thirty years ago he came to Little Hungary and since that time had endeared himself to the poor of the district by administering to their ills and steadfastly refusing pay. Few of his neighbors knew more of him than that but when he died in his barren room yesterday they hastened out to spend their pennies for candles.

They marched up the narrow stair by twos and threes and stood in awe about the blanket-covered figure.

"The Angel Doctor's" real name was Dr. Karoly. He was born in Hungary 60 years ago and came to this country in 1881.

"Joe, I'm going," he said, "Before it's too late I want to tell you the great secret of my—

That is as far as he got, for he fell forward dead.

HEBREWS AND ITALIANS INDULGE IN FREE FIGHT

Toronto, May 21.—The unpoetic behavior of a number of Hebrews roused ire of some Italians in the Ward last night and there was a merry scrap which lasted for half an hour until the arrival of a policeman.

The Italians were out enjoying the beautiful night and making odes to the moon as she was dimly visible through the murk of the Ward when the Hebrews commenced a commercial discussion Their tones, the subject of their debate and the noise that they made riled the sons of Sunny Italy and a breach of the peace occurred.

No arrests were made, but Mr. Basso stated this morning that his fellow countrymen will lay information against the children of Israel who numbered nine to the Italians two.

This is not the first international squabble that the police from No. 2 have had to settle in the Ward. The cosmopolitan inhabitants of that quarter live generally at peace with one another, but between the Italians and Hebrews natives of the district there is little friendship and it takes very slight provocation to start a scrap.

The two Italians last night gave a good account of themselves with the nine Hebrews and showed that because a man is a poet and makes odes to the moon he is not necessarily a poor fighter. The poetic instinct was triumphing over the commercial instinct when the man in blue appeared on the scene and dispersed the fighters.

THE RUSSIAN CZAR NOW AT BERLIN; MET BY THE KAISER

Passion for Spectacles of Average German Must Have Been Gratified---Royal Processions Viewed by Throngs

Berlin, May 22.—Emperor Nicholas of Russia arrived here this morning to attend the wedding between Princess Victoria Luise, only daughter of Emperor William, and Prince Ernest August of Cumberland, on Saturday.

The Russian Emperor was met at the station by Emperor William and King George of England, and a great gathering of members of the various Royal families. The Russian Emperor, drove with his Imperial host in state to the castle. There were no incidents.

Emperor Nicholas' journey from the frontier station at Eydtkuhnen to Berlin had been made in the Russian Imperial armoured train, and passed off without a hitch.

The arrangements made by the Berlin police authorities for the protection of His Majesty were very comprehensive and they were assisted in carrying them out by a considerable force of Russian detectives.

Many More Spectators.

The ingabitants of Berlin whose passion for spectacles is unsurpassed were to-day able to obtain full gratification of their desires in that respect. The crowds were even greater than those of yesterday and people packed the sidewalks, the windows, the balconies and the roofs whence they had an almost constant view of passing and re-passing Royal processions from half-past eight in the morning until afternoon.

Royalty Has Busy Morning.

Very early in the day the Dowager Duchess of Baden, the Emperor's aunt and the senior living member of the Royal family of Prussia arrived and she was followed shortly afterwards by the Duke and Duchess of Cumberland.

On each occasion the Emperor William, the Empress, Prince August of Cumberland and his bride-to-be, the Princess Victoria Luise, together with a large contingent of Hohenzollern Princes and Princesses drove to the station to meet them and escort them to the castle.

Sir Wilfrid's Confession

"I have obstructed and I am proud of it," declared Sir Wilfrid Laurier in the House of Commons the other day during the course of the naval debate.

Yet all along Sir Wilfrid has been maintaining that he and his party were NOT obstructing.

Sir Wilfrid's pique has at last apparently got the better of his good judgment.

HER NIGHTIE CAUGHT FIRE AND GIRL FATALLY BURNED

Young Dressmaker is so Seriously Injured She May Not Recover--Small Spirit Lamp In Room Exploded--In Her Excitement She Made No Attempt to Extinguish The Flames

Toronto, May 21.—Lighting a small spirit lamp to make her morning cup of tea at her rooming house at 241 Sharbourne street this morning, Miss Elizabeth Moran turned away to continue dressing, when the lamp exploded and the flaming spirit was scattered over the room. Picking up a burning rug from the floor the girl rushed to the bathroom with the intention of throwing the thing in the bath, when her light nightdress caught fire and she was enveloped in flames from head to foot.

Shrieking wildly, the unfortunate girl dashed out into the hall, losing all sense of the direction in which she was going and making no effort to extinguish the flames which surrounded her. The owner of the house Mr. Henry Archer, alarmed by the girl's shrieks tried to catch her, but she had reached the head of the stairs and was about to run down them before he could grab her and, catching up a rug, wrap it round her and extinguished the flames.

Dr. Ball was summoned and after a temporary dressing had been applied the girl was taken to St. Michael's Hospital, where an examination of her burns showed that they are so extensive that there is little hope for her recovery. The girl was horribly burned from her feet as far as her chin. Her hair did not catch fire and her face with the exception of the lower part of her chin was untouched.

The injured girl was about twenty years of age.

THE WEATHER.

To-day—Generally fair and a little higher temperature.

HOT-AIR ARTIST AND BRITISH GENERAL COULDN'T HIT IT OFF

Resignation of MacKenzie as Chief of Canadian Militia Staff Has Caused Considerable Discussion in the Old Country---Made Minister as Reward for Flashing Speeches

London, May 22.—The resignation of Major General MacKenzie as Chief of the Canadian Militia Staff has caused not a little comment here, particularly in the military circles in which Colonel Hughes moved during his visit last year.

"The Hon. Sam Hughes is what is known as a character," declares one writer in a popular newspaper. "There was some raising of eyebrows when he became Minister of Militia, though it was regarded as a reward for his plashing speeches when in the Opposition."

The same writer recalls how Mr. Hughes declared there was no danger of a submarine not coming to the surface with two such hot-air artists as Winston Churchill and himself aboard. "It is not perhaps surprising that a hot-air artist, who is also a charcter, should not hit it all with a British general," is the final comment.

REV. PATRICK MORGAN GIVES AN EXPOSE OF ROMANISM

Last night the S.O.E. Hall was crowded to the doors by members of and sympathizers with the Protestant Benevolent Association. The chair was very ably occupied by President Dawson Kennedy. On the dais sat Rev. Mr. Conners of Park street Baptist church and Ald. Johnston.

The proceedings opened with singing "O Canada." The chairman introduced Rev. Mr. Conners. The latter said he was heart and soul in sympathy with the aims and objects of the Federation. His name might suggest a close connection with Rome, but he was thankful to say there was a wide gulf between them.

When Rev. Patrick Morgan, editor of the Liberator, Ottawa, was introduced he was given a hearty welcome. Mr. Morgan is a fluent and pleasing speaker. He said in part: "Romanism is a menace. Romanism is not the Roman Catholics, but the system. Within the Roman Church are souls that are earnest, but the system is wrong. When Leo XIII. died, some of the Cardinals wanted Cardinal Rampolla as the dead Pope's successor. He then explained why Rampolla, for political purposes was set aside for the present Pope. Cardinal Merry del Val, a leader of the Jesuits simply uses the present Pope as his tool. The ultra-montane power should be looked into. The enormity of the confessional was next dealt with: Rome has a happy faculty of christening things by their wrong names. He offers $1,000 to any priest of the Roman Church, who will in public translate passages from St. Alphonsus Leguori. The speaker said he heard Mr. Borden speak in Toronto. Romanism is a political organization first and a church last. If the church could win any other way she would not bother with religion. As soon as the money jingles in the priests' box, up jumps the soul from purgatory. The priest is simply a grafter, he is out for the money. Rome is a chameleon to suit political exigencies. The Church is grit or tory according to which side pays her best. Rome, in politics, wants to know "what is there in it for me?" The speaker then showed up the wrongs and unpatriotic principles of the Separate school system. Rome does not want children to go to public schools because she is afraid to face their own past history. Rome is always against liberty of thought and free speech. Her Separate schools are simply a means of teaching the catechism.

The meeting ended in the usual patriotic way.

CARNEGIE PLOT TO ANNEX THE U.S.

Says Ironmaster's Reward Was to be Dukedom--Dr. Buttler Attacked

London, May 21.—Miss Lillian Scott Troy, a novelist and magazine writer from San Francisco, who interested herself in obtaining the release from prison of Miss Zelie Emerson, a Michigan suffragette, has written a letter to Senator O'Gorman which contains some extraordinary charges against Andrew Carnegie and other noted Americans.

Senator O'Gorman should receive the communication in Washington to-morrow. In it Miss Troy makes the extraordinary allegation that the annexation of the United States to England is the ultimate object of the peace movement promoted by Mr. Carnegie and others.

The accusations by Miss Troy became known here to-day. They are not taken seriously.

She names Elihu Root and John Hays as prime movers in behalf of the peace propaganda, since the inauguration of which, she declares, the relations between the United States and Germany, and the United States and Japan have become strained.

Miss Troy suggests it is to England's interests to see the United States weakened in conflict with Germany or Japan. She asserts that while Theodore Roosevelt was in Africa the Duke of Connaught's aide suggested he should influence the United States to hand the Philippines over to Japan, that the idea of the arbitration treaties was not Taft's but that of Carnegie and King Edward, who sent it to America to be labelled "Made in the U.S.A."; that The Hague tribunal is essentially a British product, instituted simply for the ultimate undoing of the United States, and that Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, and others are rewriting American history to disparage the heroes of the revolution.

Miss Troy also asserted to The New York American that King Edward offered Andrew Carnegie a Dukedom if he should bring about the annextion of the United States to England, and that Roosevelt's famous Guild Hall speech was written partly by Sir Edward Grey. She further declared that the purpose of Haldane's visit to Germany in 1912 was to effect an agreement between England and Germany to smash the Munroe Doctrine.

LOCAL CITIZEN AT CRITERION THEATRE, N.Y.

A member of the Times staff, who returned yesterday from New York City, related a memorable visit he paid to the Criterion Theatre, which is managed by that veteran and successful impressario, Charles Frohman. The Criterion he describes as one of the best and most up-to-date play-houses in the American metropolis. The play was "The Argyle Case," written by Harriet Ford and H. J. O'Higgins, in co-operation with the celebrated N. Y. detective, William J. Burns. The play is replete with thrilling situations, including the detention of the "Suspect," by means of the dictograph. The Criterion is the "last word" in theatres and well worth a visit.

PINE TAR CORDIAL

Advertisements under above heads, 20 words and under, one insertion, 15c.; 3 insertions, 25c.; 6 insertions, 40c.

NUGENT'S SARSAPARILLA—PRICE FOR large bottle, 100 full doses, 50c. and well worth it, too. It's better to take no medicine at all than to depend upon cheap concoctions that are compounded to sell at low price and a big profit just because there is a large demand for certain remedies at certain seasons of the year. There are so-called Sarsaparillas offered to us to sell to our customers at 75c a bottle that would bring us a larger profit than Nugent's Sarsaparilla sold at 50c. Nugent's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, arouses the torpid liver, drives out all impurities, cleanses and tones up the system, and helps Nature throw off the dullness that comes from indoor life of winter. It arouses energy, brightens the eye, clears the brain, gives lightness to the movements. Nugent's Sarsaparilla is not the only thing you will find in this drug store. We make a specialty of Nugent's Remedies. Nugent Drug Co., [illegible] George St., directly opposite Cressman's store.

EUREKA CAUSTIC BALSAM

"Is one of the most wonderful discoveries in the Veterinary World."

Its action excels any known remedy in its curative effects, and can be used in all cases where stimulating applications are prescribed. Its powerful action is simply amazing, and can scarcely be accounted for. Its penetrating quality seldom found in an embrocation. IT NEVER BLEMISHES. EUREKA CAUSTIC BALSAM removes curbs, splints, all bunches common to livestock. Very little is required to have the desired effect. PRICE $1 PER BOTTLE.

Sold by all druggists. Prepared by Dr. O'Neill, a well-known veterinary surgeon and horseman of 40 years' experience.

HARE AND TORTOISE

Another Instance Where Honesty Proved the Best Policy and Won Out.

By GEORGE ELMER COBB.

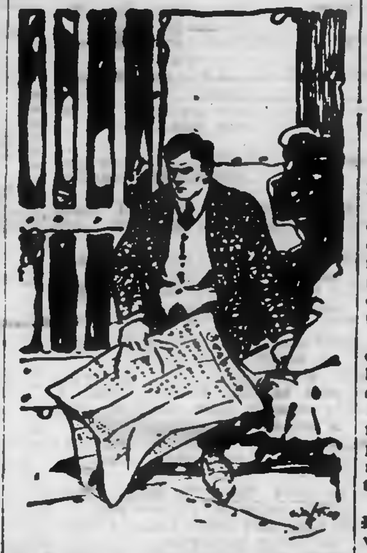
"Tortoise" Mowbray they called him at school, in contradistinction to "Hare" Snyder; and never were two sobriquets more fairly earned. Snyder was the particular bright boy of the class, and always at the top, while "Tortoise" Mowbray lagged respectably near the bottom of it. When "Hare" Snyder took advantage of the honor code to cover his cuffs with hieroglyphics and passed his examination for college with honors, "Tortoise" Mowbray got in by the skin of his teeth and kept his soul unsullied.

After college it was the same. "Hare" Snyder and "Tortoise" Mowbray obtained positions in the same corporation, Snyder through a "pull," Mowbray because the straightforward, clean-cut appearance of the young man favorably impressed Henry Davenrich, the president. And Snyder went up and up by means of sundry devious and doubtful short cuts, while "Tortoise" Mowbray remained pretty much where he had started, in the accounting office.

The "hare" made money and spent it recklessly, while the "tortoise" put his aside, added to it, and lived modestly and soberly. They were always friends of a sort, for Mowbray was patronized by Snyder and never openly resented it.

The test of this friendship came when they both fell in love with the same girl. Cynthia Lanfrey was a niece of Davenrich and lived in a big building on Madison avenue, where she kept house for him. At this period the "hare" and the "tortoise" had been working with the corporation for nearly ten years. Snyder was pretty near the top, thanks to the "pull" aforementioned, and was a constant visitor at Davenrich's home. Mowbray was invited casually, on some grand occasion; but Cynthia liked him and he was invited again.

Then, one evening, Mowbray told Cynthia his story in a plain, slow-spoken, manly fashion. He had loved her for a long time, he said simply, and he was quite sure he would never love anyone else. He could not ask her to share his thirty-five dollars a week, but could he dare ask her to wait?



Discovered That Snyder Had Taken His Nine Thousand.

And Cynthia had laughed a little and cried a little and treated him like a big, overgrown school boy. Somehow everybody treated Mowbray pretty much in the same fashion.

"You're too late," she said, with a little sob and a following laugh. "James—Mr. Snyder—asked me yesterday."

But that was always the "tortoise's" way. He was always one lap behind the "hare." So, because he had not expected anything different, he went away. Next day Snyder, who had somehow guessed his secret, began laughing at him. He told some of the men in the office, and they laughed at him, too. But these men were toadies of the "hare."

It was about this time that the "tortoise" was temporarily placed in charge of the books of one of these toadies and discovered something that made him sit up all night, thinking. In the morning he went straight to Snyder and told him what he had found. Snyder leaped out of his chair.

"My God, 'Tortoise,'" he yelled, "did old Davenrich put you in charge of the books?" Then he came to his senses.

"You'd have done the same if you'd been in my place, 'Tortoise,'" he whined. "How did you suppose I was going to keep up my style of living on seventy-five dollars a week? Besides, it wasn't really a crime, for Davenrich is going to make way for me next year, and he owns half the stock in the concern. Then, when I've married Cynthia, it will be practically my own business, won't it? What are you going to do about it?"

"These defalcations," said the "tortoise" slowly, clenching his fists—for somehow he always hated to hear the "hare" pronounce Cynthia's name—"amount to nine thousand dollars and seventy-three cents."

"Cut out the cents," said Snyder. "Yes, I guess that's about the figure."

"I have four thousand dollars," answered the "tortoise." "I can borrow five thousand more. I will pay the amount if you promise me to run straight in future for—" he clenched his fists again—"for Miss Lanfrey's sake."

"You good old 'tortoise.' Of course I will," said Snyder, clapping him upon the back. "And when I'm in Davenrich's place I'll make you assistant manager."

"When you are in Davenrich's place I shall look for another position," said Mowbray quietly, and turned on his heel and went back to his desk.

The wedding was set for June, three months ahead. The "tortoise" went no longer to the house on Madison avenue. The whole course of his orderly life was changed. After he had paid in the nine thousand dollars he began looking around for another position in anticipation of Davenrich's retirement. But Davenrich retired earlier than had been expected, for he died.

Then rumors began to spread concerning the financial condition of the corporation. Inquisitive men, connected with the state, began poring nightly over the books. Then one day they summoned Mowbray before them.

"There is an item of nine thousand dollars paid in by you on March 2 last, according to the books," they said. "Can you explain this?"

"Yes," answered the "tortoise" unflinchingly. "I stole that money to play the races, won, and paid the money back. What are you going to do about it?"

"Where is that nine thousand dollars?" asked the chief inquisitor. "It was entered but never deposited."

The "tortoise" could not think quickly enough to answer. So they arrested him and closed the business. Next day the world learned that nearly two hundred thousand dollars had been embezzled by a high official in the corporation. And the "tortoise," sitting in his cell, discovered that Snyder had taken his nine thousand and added it to his other plunderings. The "hare" was moving much more swiftly than the "tortoise."

The lock clicked and the jail governor stood before him, accompanied by the lawyers for the state.

"You want me?" asked the "tortoise" quietly.

"Yes," answered the lawyers. "As a witness. You are free. Mowbray blew his brains out yesterday evening."

"Good Lord!" said the "tortoise." Then, "I am really free?" he asked. "I must go—I have an important engagement." And, finding that he was really at liberty, he went to the house on Madison Avenue. In the window was a bill announcing that it was for sale. In the parlor sat Cynthia.

"I—I came—I came to say how deeply sorry—er—" began the "tortoise."

Cynthia was crying, but it was not all through grief. She knew that, unaided, the "tortoise" would never get to the goal. So she put her arms round his neck and kissed him.

MANY MIXED MARRIAGES

Ontario Statistics Show That They are Increasing

Mixed marriages are increasing in Ontario, despite the efforts of church organizations to turn the tide the other way. This is conclusively shown by a report of the Registrar-General. During the last fiscal year the returns show an increase of 2 per cent. in the number of Roman Catholics marrying outside their Church. The number of Roman Catholics who entered matrimony was 6,743 and of these 1,519, or 22.5 per cent., married outside their church.

The Methodist denomination headed the marriage list, with a percentage of 28.2. The Presbyterians followed closely with 20.4 and the Anglicans came fourth with 13.1 per cent., and the Baptists fifth with 6.6. The Lutherans were ahead of the Congregationalists with 3.7, the latter contributing only 1.2 per cent. of the marriage total. Altogether there were 25,807 marriages, an increase of 1,771.

A COMMISSION GOVERNMENT

St. John, N.B., is a progressive Canadian city, where the Commission form of Government has been tried with success. The civic administration is in the hands of a mayor and four commissioners, the mayor elected for two years and the commissioner for four years, two retiring at the end of each biennial period. Any official may be removed from office by the recall, and popular government is further assured by the iniative and referendum.

It is declared, after a year's trial, that the new system works to advantage. Business men are satisfied, and that feeling is shared by the public at large. The Toronto World has frequently pointed to American cities as examples of the benefits to be derived from commission government and it is pleasing to note that a Canadian community has taken such an important step. Let there be others.

THE NEW TREASURER.

Hon. I. B. Lucas, the new provincial treasurer, brings to the cabinet the advantages of youth and enthusiasm and a long period of devotion to the public service. Everyone who knows him will wish him well. He is a fine platform speaker, possesses a keen analytical mind and will add strength and dignity to the Cabinet.

Mr. Lucas' chief interest as a private member of the Legislature was to secure the boon of cheap telephones to the people of the rural districts by bringing the existing trunk lines under government control and it is to be hoped that his enthusiasm for the cause will not be dampened by his elevation. The Cabinet will be improved by this infusion of new blood.

Proof That Health and Renewed Vitality Quickly Return When Right Remedy is Used.

"I am only thirty years old, yet for almost two years I have felt more like seventy-five. I have found it difficult to sleep at night, and in the morning felt so depressed and heavy that effort was difficult. My hands were always clammy and perspiration on slight effort would break out all over me. It was not unnatural that I should begin to brood over the chance that I should be unfit to do my work, and this dread made my sleepless nights perfect misery. After repeated trials of medicines and mixtures, Dr. Hamilton's Pills gave me the first gleam of hope. From the very first I could see they were different in action from other pills. They didn't gripe and acted as naturally as if nature and not the pills were cleansing my clogged-up system. My spirits rose. I felt much better. The sluggish action of the system gave way to normal activity. Dizziness and headaches ceased, appetite, good color and ambition to work returned, and have remained. I am like a new man, and I thank Dr. Hamilton's Pills for it all."

This was the experience of J. E. Parkhurst, a well known grocery dealer in Jefferson. Follow his advice, use Dr. Hamilton's Pills for your stomach, kidneys and liver, and you'll enjoy long life and robust good health. All druggists and storekeepers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, 5 boxes for $1.00, or postpaid from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Born With a Caul.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Would you please tell me what it means when a baby is born with a veil over its face. Also is it a bad sign to throw the veil away. Thanking you in advance.

E. M. R.

Reply—Many superstitions have been connected in the past with cauls. The child that happened to be born with a veil or caul, was esteemed particularly fortunate, and it is said they can never be drowned. Sailors have been known to pay fancy prices for a caul, as it insured the possessor against all mishap. Dickens is reported to have been born with a caul.

Laurier's Anti-British Policy

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—The action taken by the Liberals under the leadership of Sir Wilfrid Laurier in attempting to block the efforts of the Governments to give immediate and effective aid to naval forces of the Empire is being welcomed by every enemy of that empire. It will be remembered that the British Admiralty, in their memorandum, emphasized the great moral force, at the present juncture of Canada coming to the aid of the mother in matter of defence. Laurier by his anti-British agitation has sought to nullify the effect of the gift of three Dreadnoughts and has deliberately ranged himself with the enemies of England.

The spectacle of a former Canadian premier coming out openly in favor of a policy of Separation is one which cannot arouse feelings of pride among the Canadian people. While it is gratifying to know exactly what views concerning our Imperial responsibilities, Laurier holds, it is nevertheless an insult to the intelligence of the people to be told that in aiding the motherland, they are playing fast and loose with autonomy. Laurier objects to Borden's naval policy for the reason he knows it will strengthen the ties which bind the daughter to the mother.

The Liberals have too long posed as the champions of Canadian autonomy. The bluff has been called, and they are shirking their imperial responsibilities under the cloke of preventing an attack on self-government.

THE LEVEL AND THE SQUARE

We meet upon the level, and we part
upon the square.
What words of precious meaning
those words Masonic are?
Come, let us contemplate them, they are worthy of a thought.
In the very soul of Masonry these precious words are wrought.

We meet upon the level, though from every station come,
The rich man from his mansion and the poor man from his home.
For the one must leave his heritage
outside the Mason's door,
While the other finds his best respect upon the checkered floor.

We part upon the square, for the world must have its due;
We mingle with the multitude — a faithful band and true.
But the influence of our gatherings in memory is green,
And we long, upon the level, to renew the happy scene.

There's a world where all are equal,
we are journeying toward it fast,
We shall meet upon the level there when the gates of Death are past.
We shall stand before the Orient, and our Master will be there,
To try the blocks we offer with His own unerring square.

We shall meet upon the level there,
but never thence depart.
There's a mansion—'tis all ready for each faithful, trusting heart.
There's mansion and a welcome, and a multitude is there,
Who have met upon the level and been tried upon the square.

Let us meet upon the level, then,
while laboring patient here.
Let us meet and let us labor, though the labor be severe;
Already in the western sky, the signs bid us prepare
To gather up our working tools and part upon the square.

Hands round, ye faithful Masons in the bright, fraternal chain!
We part upon the square below to meet in Heaven again.
O! what words of precious meaning
these words Masonic are.
We meet upon the level, and we part
upon the square.

A PROBLEM IN WHEAT

Here are Some Figures Which Can be Juggled Indefinitely

An Arabian author, Al Sephadi relates the following curious anecdote.

An Indian prince wishing to reward one of his subjects desired him to ask whatever he thought proper, assuring him it would be granted. To the surprise of the prince this subject only asked for a grain of wheat for the first square of the chessboard, two for the second square, four for the third, and in the same ratio to the last, or sixty-fourth space. The prince was almost incensed at this seemingly insignificant request, but was surprised to learn as the result of the calculations which ensued that to comply with the subject's demand, it would require a quantity of grain greater than be possessed in all the royal granaries, and even throughout all Asia.

The number of grains of wheat required to satisfy this demand will be found by calculation to be:—

18,446,744,073,709,551,615.

Now if a pint contains 9,216 grains of wheat, a gallon will contain 73,728 and a bushel (8 gallons) will contain 589,784 grains. Dividing the number of grains as shown above by this last quantity, we get 31,274,997,412,297 as the number of bushels necessary to discharge the promise of this Indian prince.

If we suppose an acre of land to be capable of producing in one year, an average of 30 bushels of wheat, it would require 1,042,499,913,743 acres, which is more than eight times the entire surface of the globe, based on the statement that the diameter of the earth being taken at 7,920 miles, its whole surface including land and water will amount to about 126,437,889,177 acres.

If the price of a bushel of wheat be estimtaed at one dollar, the value of the above quantity probably exceeds that of all the riches known on the earth!

BONE IN DRAFT HORSES

In Search for Size Quality Must not be Neglected

A study of draft horses reveals the great difficulty in securing extreme quality and great size and bone in the same horse. Draft horse buyers are insistent upon big bone, but the term applies most properly to great width of the canon as viewed from the side. The demand for large bone, as it is called arises primarily from the fact that legs in which the tendons are set far back from the canon-bones are thought to be stronger. If the bone itself is also large the horse has more weight, and heavy muscle usually goes with a heavy frame.

Some of the best draft horse judges, however, pay practically no attention to the size of the bone itself; that is they do not discriminate against a horse whose canons are narrow as viewed from the front. They like big limbs and well shaped hocks of ample size, but they assert that since the bones themselves almost never break one may safely disregard the circumference. Quality is really more important than size of bone.

Fine hair, soft skin and clean cordy canons indicate a strong vitality in the cells making up the tissues of the whole body, and are associated with that stamina which gives maximum utility through long years of use. On the other hand, coarse soft bone is not associated with the active durable type of horse, and is never found in horses which have endured a long lifetime of hard service. It is not the smooth, hard bone, but the [illegible] bone that most often develops unsoundness, so in the search for size of bone quality must never be neglected.

ENGAGEMENT RING

A Custom Which Was Originated by the Romans

Wearing engagement rings appears to have commenced with the Romans. Before the celebration of the nuptials there was a gathering of friends to settle the marriage contract. It was usually agreed then also that the dowry should be paid down on the wedding day or soon after. On these occasions a luxurious entertainment was given, and at its conclusion the man placed a ring upon the third finger of the lady's left hand, because it was thought that a nerve reached from there to the heart. This ring was considered a pledge of betrothal, and the day was named for the marriage.

Asiatic Creeds.

Few people realize the growth of Asiatic cults and religions in North America. It is stated on apparently good authorty that on this contient there are 15,000 sun worshippers, and an equal number of Buddhists.

THE MAT.

New York, May 22.—Stanislaus Zbyszko, the Polish champion wrestler, defeated Raymond Cazeaux, the Italian champion, in two straight falls in catch-as-catch-can, at Madison Square Garden last night. The winner, it was announced, will be matched to meet Frank Gotch, champion of the world, some time before September, probably in New York.

Zbyszko won the first fall in 14:33 with an arm hold and half nelson and the second in 20 minutes with a full body and back hold.

ROWING.

New Haven, May 22.—Kirby, the new English coach of the Yale crew, has directed that Capt. Snowden, who stroked the 'varsity last year and the freshmen the previous season, and who has stroked the 'varsity this spring, shall give way to William Crocker, stroke of the second eight. Kirby has been here a week, sizing up the situation, and several other changes are expected this week. The second eight have been beating the 'varsity almost daily and Snowden's failure to lengthen out the stroke is now assigned as one of the probable causes for the upset. Kirby has already attempeed two changes in technical stroking of the oarsmen. The coming week the two eight will row with Snowden stroking the second and Crocker the regulars, Snowden may later possibly replace Bryce at No. 2 in the 'varsity shell.

New York, May 22.—George W. Gaidzik, the former American amateur champion fancy driver, arrived here today from Europe. Gaidzik, who recently has been in Paris studying drawing, came back at the request of a Chicago athletic club to compete for it in the Chicago Olympic games.

On the trip over Gaizlik, while trying to vault a railing, lost his balance as the ship lurched in a seaway, and fell, fracturing a knuckle bone in his right hand.

RING.

They are beginning to call Gunboat Smith "Fitzsimmons No. 2," but the old-time fans rather resent the comparison, says W. W. McNaughton, the fistic expert. These latter say that Gunboat has a long way to go before he can claim to be Fitzsimmons' equal in any department of the game.

For one thing, it is held that Gunboat's knockout punch does not carry a tithe of the force that lurked in the old Bob, woodening wallop. Considerable discussion has arisen over this point, and there are numbers of fight fans who hold that the best of knockout blows have their limitations, one phase of the argument being that there were men who, Fitz could not knock out, just as there are men at present in the lists whom Gunboat has failed to flatten.

Jim Jeffries is instanced as one of the fellows who was immune to Fitzsimmons' knockdown smashes. It is recalled that the pair met twice, and that, though Jeffries on both occasions was cut and marked about the face, he was never staggered by Fitz. The fellows who are using this line of reasoning seem to think that Willard will prove a second Jeffries in the matter of assimilating power, and that Gunboat, even if he does land his overhand right, will be unable to knock the big solid Kansan off his stride.

Among those who think this way is Willard himself. He says it is fairly certain there will be a knockout Tuesday night, but that Gunboat will be the victim of it.

TENDERS FOR DREDGING

SEALED TENDERS, addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Dredging, Trenton, Ont.," will be received until 4.00 P.M., on Tuesday, June 10, 1913, for dredging required at Trenton, Ont.

Tenders will not be considered unless made on the forms supplied, and signed with the actual signatures of the tenderers.

Combined specification and form of tender can be obtained on application to the Secretary, Department of Public Works, Ottawa. Tenders must include the towing of the plant to and from the work. Dredges and tugs not owned and registered in Canada shall not be employed in the performance of the work contracted for. Contractors must be ready to begin work within thirty days after the date they have been notified of the acceptance of their tender.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, for five per cent. (5 p.c.) of the contract price, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary.

Department of Public Works,
Ottawa, May 21, 1913.

Newspapers will not be paid for this advertisement if they insert it without authority from the Department.—42227.

WANT HUGE FORTUNE

Ontario and Montreal People Claimants for Millions in Holland Bank

Woven around the three hundred millions of dollars which have been accumulating in the vaults of the National Bank of Holland for two and one half centuries, and in the distribution of which several Canadians hope to participate, there is a story of adventure and intrigue substantiated apparently by the soundest of proofs which in dramatic interest rivals the conceptions of Dumas or Balzac.

Link by link, the descendants of Paul Wertz, soldier of fortune, East Indian adventurer, lieutenant of Gustavus Adolphus and field marshal of Holland, have riveted a chain which proves that the will produced after his death in 1676, by his housekeeper, Johanna van der Planken, was a forgery and that the millions he acquired trading in the Dutch East Indies are the lawful property of the descendants of his step-brothers, and step-sister, Peter, Heinrich and Anna.

These early banded themselves together to secure justice and have battled against varying forces to secure their rights. The last attempt was made in 1874 when the Dutch courts declared that he will which purported to leave everything Wertz had acquired during his career of adventure to Johanna van der Planken and the child whose parentage she endeavored to fasten on the dead general was a forgery. Lack of funds then resulted in the case being dropped, but now three Wertz family associations are unitedly striving to reopen the case and wrest from the Dutch banks the money which they tacitly admit they cannot legally hold an admission contained in an offer to restore thirty-two million dollars made sixty years ago.

Negotiations carried on with the Dutch government by W. J. Snyder of Chicago and his wife, who is a direct descendant of a nephew of the Field Marshal give the highest hopes that the claim will succeed, for the Netherlands government offered to compromise the case again.

Mr. Snyder, who is a son of the late George C. Snyder, of Wales, Ont., and whose mother resides with her daughter, Mrs. Frank Morgan of Montreal, is also a Wertz descendant through a maternal ancestor of his father, and Mrs. George Snyder, and her daughter are therefore entitled to a share of this long sequestered treasure.

COMING OF AGE IN PRINCE'S CASE

It is commonly said and supposed that a Prince of Wales "comes of age" on his eighteenth birthday. In point of fact he does, and he does not. The occasion has been well described as "a contingent coming of age," for the words are only applicable to the prince as heir to the throne, while they are not applicable to him in his private capacity. From and after the completion of his, or her, eighteenth birthday, the heir is qualified to succeed to the full possession of the throne on the occurrence of a vacancy, as was actually the case of the Princess Victoria, who became queen less than a month after her eighteenth birthday. Had William IV. died a year earlier a Regent would have been necessary; but as it happened, and as we all know, there was no question of anything of the kind, and Queen Victoria presided at her first council with all the authority of a reigning queen. In the case of the death declared incapacity of the sovereign, the heir, having reached the age of eighteen, becomes king or regent as the case may be. In this sense, then, "full age" means eighteen years. But in all others the minority of the Prince of Wales continues.

THE PITCAIRN ISLANDS

Interesting People Descendants of Noted "Bounty" Mutineers.

H.M.S. Algerine, Commander Brooker, sailed from Esquimalt, B.C., for the South Seas, with clothing, books, etc., for the Pitcairn Islanders, the descendants of the Bounty mutineers, who have few visitors.

The residents of Pitcairn Island are a most interesting people. They are of a light copper color, being descendants of Englishmen who intermarried with natives. Their houses, mostly small cottages of three rooms, are built of lumber sawn by hand from native trees, some of the boards for finishing being secured from passing ships and tools from kindly ship carpenters. The men tend their gardens, build boats, fish, etc.

Some grain is grown, but not enough to supply the demands of the islanders and is threshed rudely with flails. The people are of a very religious turn of mind. They built a church many years ago in which is an organ sent to the island by the late Queen Victoria.

The population is about one hundred and fifty in number, and the families are so intermarried that the majority of weddings are between cousins. The oldest man on the island is Governor; he is the executive, legislative and judicial branches all in one.

The first settlers were from the ship Bounty. The vessel left Spithead in 1787, and in the spring of 1789 Fletcher Christian and three companions broke into the captain's cabin and bound him and gagged him, and the master and mates were set adrift in an open boat. They eventually reached land, and the mutineers after various vicissitudes reached Pitcairn Island and founded the colony which now occupies the little isle.

A Tour Through Canada

It was barely a year since I had left the shores of Canada behind me, but the irresistible magnetism of the Dominion, which is causing not armies but peoples to mobilize and trek in tens of thousands to its soil, drew me as a magnet, and once more I visited the nine great provinces which stretch from ocean to ocean. Again I heard the roar of a great "nation factory" and saw the bustle and activity of a mighty people in the making. New towns had sprung up. Cities had raced along to adolescence. The prairie had yielded up yet more of the isolation and had blossomed into fruitfulness. Railways had spread yet further their ramifications of steel. Business had grown. Manufactures had increased. Records had everywhere gone by the board, and everywhere the country throbbed with increasing energy and faced the future with growing optimism. Yes, optimism is the dominant note in the nine provinces. There is a belief in Canada's destiny which nothing will shake—a belief soundly based. For it rests upon the knowledge of the natural wealth which has simply been poured into Canada's lap. The soil, the mine, the river, all proclaim indeed the bounteousness of Nature, and point to a future beside which the present and past sink into sheer insignificance. Despite the grand movement of peoples from all points of the compass, and the vast increases in the products of the soil, boundless unbroken areas still await the plough.

To-day Canada is looming larger and larger not only in our economic outlook, but in our political calculations. This rise of a stalwart nation is going to transform the prospects, perhaps shift the centre of gravity of the British Empire. The country is calling for men and women from home to accept its gifts of fertile soil and the facilities for the profitable employment of capital in trade and manufacturing enterprises.—Leo Scheff, in Lloyd's Weekly News.

THE NORTH BOUNDARY

Line Between Alaska and Canada Ends at Arctic's Shore

The last of the long chain of bronze monuments that mark the Alaskan boundary between the United States and Canada in as straight a line as the broad red line that is ruled up the map was planted within a few feet of the Arctic ocean, at the land end of the 141st meridian, and nine miles east of Demarcation Point and 40 miles west of Herschel Island.

Contrary to the common idea of the Arctic, the last boundary monument was planted in a meadow that is a mass of bloom in summer. Huge California poppies, lupines, daisies, Johnny-jump-ups, blue bells and most of the common field flowers bloom in bright patches about it. Close by is a low-cut bank which is the beach of the almost tideless ocean.

The monuments are set approximately four miles apart, and some of them are in almost inaccessible spots in the rugged, barren Arctic range. When pack horses could not reach the points, monuments, materials and tools had to be carried on men's backs up the towering cliffs.

Discovered Eighteen Comets.

Dr. Lewis Swift, the astronomer, who died at Marathon, N.Y., at the age of 92 years, was regarded as the greatest astronomical discoverer of the nineteenth century. He discovered 300 nebulae, eighteen comets and received nine medals. Dr. Swift was blind for the last few years of his life. He came into prominence in 1862, when he discovered the great comet which took his name. In Rochester he set up on the roof of Duffy's cider mill the first observatory in the United States, and from this humble laboratory he discovered more comets and nebulae than any other man in the world.

WORKERS FOR CANADA

Suggested They Stay Here Only for Summer—Vague View of Winter

That a partial solution of Canada's labor problem may be found in sending to the Dominion large numbers of workmen from Great Britain who would work during the spring and summer and return to the Old Country in the winter, is the belief of Sir Charles Hunter, M.P., as expressed after returning home from a trip to Canada.

The Canadian winter is still a bugbear to many people in Great Britain. Sir Charles is quoted saying that for five or six months the thermometer is down to 35 to 40 degrees below zero, and that the cold is almost intolerable, especially to women.

MAPLE SUGAR INDUSTRY

Care in the Process of Manufacture Necessary for Good Results.

From the time the earliest explorers discovered Indians making sugar from the maple tree until the present day the production of maple sugar has been an important industry in Canada and the United States. These two countries are the only ones in which the industry flourishes. In a Farmers' Bulletin issued by the United States Government it is stated that maple sugar and maple syrup are not now produced in such quantities as formerly. "But," the Bulletin goes on to say, "within the last six or seven years there has been a renewed tendency towards the production of a better grade of maple products.

"Maple syrup or maple sugar prepared by the best methods is a light-colored, pleasant-tasting product. Contrary characteristics are the result of uncleanly methods and possibly sour sap in 99 cases out of a hundred, and were manufacturers to take greater care in their methods their results would show improvements. This better grade may not appeal to many people who have been accustomed to the dark,stronger grades."

In relation to the present growth of the sugar maple the bulletin states:—

"Within its wide range the sugar maple appears as a predominant tree only in the New England States, New York, Southern Canada, Northern and Western Pennsylvania, and in parts of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, and Minnesota. In the southern Appalachians it occurs in scattered bodies where climate conditions are similar to those of the North. In the extreme northern part of New York State and the adjacent district of Quebec the forest growth is often almost pure maple, and even considrably further south, where beech and birch become associate trees, the sugar maple holds its own as the dominant species. In Northern Pennsylvania, at an altitude of over 1,000 feet, the mixture is much the same as it is in New York. In Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois a similar condition is found, but as the hilly country disappears the maple retreats to the richer and damper soils, leaving great areas to the oaks and chestnuts."

What's the Use?

A man who saw how the farmers were cheated
Showed them the game and how they could beat it;
Some of them laughed and others looked grim,
But all asked, "What is there in it for him?"

At last he got sick of his foolish campaign,
Since no one would act there was nothing to gain;
Then the farmers all wakened and started to scoff.
"Just what we expected! They've bought him off!"

And the man who had tried to fight their fight,
To stop the cheating and get things right,
Laughed and said as he turned to his plow:
"You can't help a farmer anyhow!"

Something About Ears.

The thin, angular ear is said to denote bad temper and cruelty.

Small and thin ears usually denote delicacy and refinement.

As age increases the ear becomes more angular and marked.

People with musical tastes generally have large and prominent ears.

Abnormally large, thick ears are associated with a sensual and coarse nature.

Great philosophers and statesmen have been noticed to have large and sloping ears.

Curious Epitaphs.

Here lies Thomas Williams, no wonder he's dead,
For the wheels of the wagon went over his head.

Beneath this stone our baby lies,
He neither cries nor hollers;
He lived just one-and-twenty days,
And cost us forty dollars.

Deep in this bed there lies the clay
Of Arabella Young,
Who on the 23rd of May
Began to hold her tongue!

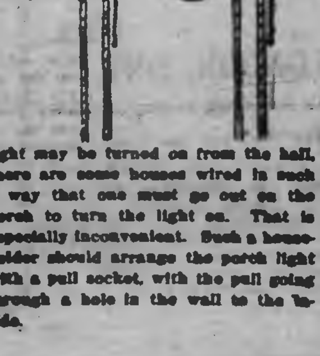
Turn on Outside Light

Electric light companies maintain that porch lights are great protectors of the home and that burglars will not venture to attempt an entrance in any part of a house that has an outside light.

While most houses having porch lights are wired so that the outside light may be turned on from the hall, there are some houses wired in such a way that one must go out on the porch to turn the light on. That is especially inconvenient. Such a householder should arrange the porch light with a pull socket, with the pull going through a hole in the wall to the inside.



KEEPING RUBBERS ON

Button Them to the Shoes by a Simple Device

One of the annoyances of muddy slushy streets and roads is the difficulty to be found in keeping overshoes on the feet. An old shoe might fit very well, but it also has a tendency to stick in the road when the ground is the least bit boggy. A good way to keep the shoes on is to fasten a small tongue to the back and have a button sewed on the shoe onto which this tongue can be fastened. If the button hole in the tongue is carefully made the tongue will last as long as the shoes.

Tenders will not be considered unless made on the forms supplied, and signed with the actual signatures of the tenderers.

Combined specification and form of tender can be obtained on application to the Secretary, Department of Public Works, Ottawa. Tenders must include the towing of the plant to and from the work. Dredges and tugs not owned and registered in Canada shall not be employed in the performance of the work contracted for. Contractors must be ready to begin work within thirty days after the date they have been notified of the acceptance of their tender.

A separate cheque for each place for which a tender is submitted must accompany the tender. This cheque must be equal to five per cent (5 p.c.) of the amount of the tender, based on the approximate quantities set opposite the name of place, but in no case must the cheque be for a less sum than $1,500. The cheque must be accepted, on a chartered bank, and payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary.

Policeman in Tree Top

At Ystrad, Wales, a number of young miners were fined sums ranging from $2.50 to $5.00 for gaming with cards on Sunday. Concealed in a tree-top, a constable watched through a telescope a number of card-players having a game in a hollow on the mountain side.

Tobacco Annuity to Workhouse

A somewhat singular bequest was made to the inmates of the Carnarvon Workhouse. Ten shillings were bequeathed by a man named J. W. Williams, a native of Llanrug, as an annuity to provide the inmates with tobacco.

Black Always Good Taste

When a woman can have only one evening dress a season, unless black is exceedingly unbecoming to her, it would be very good judgment for her to select a gown of some sort of black material for it. The one shown above is charming, of black liberty satin, veiled in black maline embroidered with jet. The tunic is finished by two ruffles of accordeon pleated chiffon. Over one shoulder there is a cord of jet, which is finished with a tassel as it swings nearly at the bottom of the dress. The sleeves are of black maline. This sort of a gown is very beautiful for a young matron.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Cooling Jellies

To cool jellies stand the jelly mold in a bowl of water in which a handful of salt and the same of soda has been thrown.

Saves the Roller

If a piece of sheeting or blanket is sewn tightly round the worn roller of a wringing machine, it saves the clothes from being marked or torn.

Use a Cork Knob

Should the knob come off a pan or kettle, a screw can be slipped through the hole with the head inside the lid. Screw a cork onto the protruding end. This knob will not get hot and can be replaced.

Skim the Fat

After boiling a piece of ham or bacon, the liquor should be allowed to stand until cold and then skimmed for the fat. Press the water from the fat. It can be used for making pastry.

Coax Your New Kid Gloves

Before wearing new kid gloves, if they are laid between the folds of a damp cloth for an hour, they will be found much easier to put on. The damp causes the kid to become more pliable and to stretch to the shape of the hand without splitting or cracking. If rubbed with a piece of stale bread every time they are taken off, it will be necessary to send them to a cleaners much fewer times.

Seven Hundred Pounds of Mud

Calgary and Edmonton, the two principal cities of the Province of Alberta, are 220 miles apart but that fact tells nothing of the difficulty of making the trip in an automobile. H. H. Kerr, of Calgary, states that on his arrival at Edmonton in a car driven from Calgary more than 700 pounds of mud were scraped and washed from the wheels and axles. Mr. Kerr had four heavy men and a quantity of baggage with him but his car pulled through with no trouble in spite of the fact that she was "over her hubs in the soil" a good share of the time.

Dear Sirs.—

It is just one year ago that we put in the first stock of SANOL and SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES CURE, and we wish to state that we have been amazed at the remarkable sale of these remedies. We have had many repeat orders in both our stores and have sold retail $1000.00 worth of these remedies. In spite of all these sales we have yet to hear of one dissatisfied customer, while many have come back to tell us of the wonderful cures resulting from the Medicine.

Another striking feature of this business is that so many customers come in stating that SANOL has cured Mr.—— their intimate friend, and they wished to try it for themselves.

Wishing you continued success, we are, Yours truly,

By Randall Parrish.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER [illegible] Major Lawrence, son of Judge Lawre[illegible] of Virginia, whose wife was a Loy[illegible] nt on a perilous mission by Gen. Wa[illegible] ston, just after the winter at Valley [illegible] rge.

CHAPTER [illegible] —Disguised in a British uniform arriv[illegible] within the enemy's lines.

CHAPTER [illegible] I—The Major attends a great fete an[illegible] saves the "Lady of the Blended Rose" [illegible] rom mob. He later meets the girl at a [illegible] rilliant ball.

CHAPTER [illegible] V—Trouble is started over a waltz, and Lawrence is urged by his partner, Mist[illegible] ss Mortimer, (the Lady of the Blended [illegible] se), to make his escape.

CHAPTER V—Lawrence is detected as a spy by Captain Grant of the British army, who agrees to a duel.

CHAPTER VI—The duel is stopped by Grant's friends and the spy makes a dash for liberty, swimming a river following a narrow escape.

CHAPTER VII—The Major arrives at the shop of a blacksmith, who is friendly, and knows the Lady of the Blended Rose.

CHAPTER VIII—Captain Grant and rangers arrive and search the blacksmith shop in vain for the spy.

CHAPTER IX—Lawrence joins the minute men who capture Grant and his train.

CHAPTER X—Major Lawrence is made prisoner by an Indian and two white men.

CHAPTER XI—Lawrence's captors lock him in a strong cell, where he meets Peter the jailer.

CHAPTER XII—Peter advises Lawrence not to attempt escape as "some one" will send for him.

CHAPTER XIII—Grant's appearance adds mystery to the combination of circumstances.

CHAPTER XIV—Lawrence again meets the Lady of the Blended Rose, who informs him that he is in her house and that she was in command of the party that attacked and captured him.

CHAPTER XV—The captive is thrust into a dark underground chamber when Captain Grant begins a search of the premises.

CHAPTER XVI—After digging his way [illegible] Lawrence finds the place deserted. Evidences of a battle and a dead man across the threshold.

CHAPTER XVII—Col. Mortimer, father of the Lady of the Blended Rose, finds his home in ruins.

CHAPTER XVIII—Capt. Grant insists that Lawrence be strung up at once.

CHAPTER XIX—Miss Mortimer appears, explains the mystery and Lawrence is held a prisoner of war, and is again locked in the strong room.

CHAPTER XX—Lawrence escapes through plans arranged by The Lady and sees Grant attack Miss Mortimer.

CHAPTER XXI—Grant is knocked out by Lawrence, who comes to Miss Mortimer's relief, and then makes his escape.

CHAPTER XXII—Captain Grant's base villainy revealed.

CHAPTER XXIII—Lawrence returns to Valley Forge, where he learns more of Grant's perfidy.

Lightning flashed, the thunder unremitting, the rain a flood, water leaped down the side of the hill cascades, and, blinded, I drew my horse back into the slight shelter of the wood, and waited, gripping him by the bit. Men ran back down the hill, seeking shelter from the fury of it, and I bent my head, soaked to the skin. For the first time I realised how tired I was, every muscle aching with the strain of the long night's march, my head throbbing from the awful heat of the early morning. I sat down in the mud and water; my arm through the bridle rein, my head against the trunk of a tree, which partially protected my face from the beating rain. But there was no sleep possible.

My mind pictured the field of action, reviewed the events leading up to this hour, and, as surely, reverted to Claire Mortimer. I had almost forgotten the sturdy downpour so intensely was I thinking, when a courier came spurring forward, blinded by the storm, yet riding recklessly. He must have seen the group of men huddled at the edge of the grove, for he drew up his horse, calling my name.

"Major Lawrence, I come from General Maxwell," he shouted between the crashes of thunder. "You are given command of the right of the line, and will press on regardless of the storm until the enemy is met in force. Dragoons have been seen two miles east. You understand, sir?"

"Yes," leading forth my horse. "Come on, lads, it's the top of the hill! What about the artillery?"

"We may not be able to move the guns," he answered, "but you are to keep your powder as dry as possible and hold Clinton to the road. Dry powder will be sent as soon as the storm breaks. That's all, sir."

I could scarce see the fellow as his horse whirled, and went splashing down the slope. Through the mist of rain the men gathered about were mere blotches.

"All right, you water-rats, come on!" I sang out cheerfully. "We'll give the Red-coats the butts of our guns anyhow."

There was a faint cheer as the drenched figures sprang forward racing after me. Twice we ran up against small parties of horsemen, exchanging shots, but these fell back, leaving the road clear. By dark we were at Englishtown, hungry and thoroughly worn out, and there we halted, sleeping upon our arms. All I had in my haversack was a single hard biscuit, after munching which I lay down upon the ground and fell instantly asleep.

CHAPTER XXV.

The Fight at Monmouth.

The next day—Sunday, the twenty-eighth of June, 1778—dawned with cloudless sky, hot, sultry, the warmest day of the year. Not a breath of air stirred the leaves, and in the tree branches above us birds sang gleefully. Before daybreak we, who had been permitted to sleep for a few hours, were aroused by the sentries, and, in the gray dawn, partook of a meager breakfast. A fresh supply of ammunition was brought up and distributed among the men, and, before sunrise, we were in line, stripped for a hot day's work, eagerly awaiting orders.

I can make no pretense at describing in any detail, or sequence, the memorable action at Monmouth Court House, but must content myself with depicting what little I saw upon the firing line of Maxwell's brigade. We advanced slowly eastward over a gently rolling country, diversified by small groves. In advance was a thin line of skirmishers, and to left and right were Dickinson's and Wayne's men, their muskets gleaming in the sunlight. Early the rumor crept about among us that Lee had come up during the night with fresh troops, and assumed command.

Who led us was of but small consequence, however, as there was now no doubt in any mind but what battle was inevitable. Already to the south echoed a sound of firing where Morgan had uncovered a column of Dragoons. Then a courier from Dickinson dashed along our rear seeking Lee, scattering broadcast the welcome news that Knyphausen and his Hessians, the van of the British movement, were approaching. With a cheer of anticipation, the soldiers flung aside every article possible to discard, and pressed recklessly forward. Before we moved a mile my horse became so lame, I was obliged to dismount, and proceed on foot. Never have I experienced a hotter sun, or a more sultry air. Rapid marching was impossible, yet by nine o'clock we had passed the Freehold meeting house, and were halted in the protection of a considerable wood, the men dropping to the ground in the grateful shadow. Maxwell came along back of our line, his horse walking slowly, as the general mopped his streaming red face. He failed to recognize me among the others until I stepped out into the boiling sun, and spoke:

"What is that firing to the right, general? Are the Jersey militia in action?"

He drew up his horse with a jerk.

"That you, Lawrence? Can't tell anybody in this shirtsleeve brigade. What's become of your horse?"

"Gave out yesterday, sir. Have been on foot ever since. Is it going to be a fight?"

The grip of his hand tightened on the saddle pommel, his eyes following the irregular line of exhausted men.

"Yes, when Washington gets up; you need never doubt that. We'd be at it now, but for Charles Lee. I'd like well to know what has come over that man of late—the old spirit seems to have left him. Aye! it's Dickinson and Morgan out yonder, wasting good powder and ball on a handful of Dragoons. Wayne has been ordered forward, and then back, until he is too mad to swear, and I am but little better. By the Eternal! you should have heard Lafayette, when he begged permission to send us in. 'Sir,' said Lee, 'you do not know British soldiers; we cannot stand against them; we shall certainly be driven back at first, and must be cautious.' Returned the Frenchman: 'It may be so, general; but British soldiers have been beaten, and may be again; at any rate I am disposed to make the trial.'"

We Were but a Handful—a Single Thin Line.

"'Tis not like General Lee," I broke in. "He has ever been a reckless fighter. Has the man lost his wits?"

Maxwell leaned over, so his words should not carry beyond my ear.

"'Tis envy of Washington, to my mind," he said soberly. "He has opposed every plan in council, imagining, no doubt, a failure of campaign may make him the commander-in-chief. There comes a courier now."

The fellow was so streaked with dust as to be scarcely recognizable, and he wiped the perspiration from his eyes to stare into our faces.

"General Maxwell?"

"Yes; what is it?"

"Compliments of General Lee, sir, and you will retire your troops toward the Freehold Meeting House, forming connection there with General Scott."

"Retreat! Good God, man! we haven't fired a shot."

"Those were the orders, sir. It that Scott, over yonder?"

Maxwell nodded, too angered for words. Then, as the courier galloped away, turned in his saddle.

"By heaven! I suppose we must do it, Lawrence. But what folly! What asininity! We've got the Redcoats hemmed in, and did you ever see a better field? Pray God I may hear Washington when he comes up. I'd rather be dead then, than Charles Lee."

We gave the orders, and the men fell back sullenly, swearing fiercely as they caught the rebellious spirit of their officers. Scarcely able to breathe in the hot, stagnant air, caked with foul mud to the waist, we attained the higher ground, and dropped helpless. Even from here the enemy were invisible, although we could see the smoke of their guns, and hear distant crackle of musketry. I sat up, staring through the heat waves toward the eminence on the left where Wayne's men remained, showing dimly against the trees. A group of horsemen were riding down the slope, heading toward our line. As they came into the sandy plain below and skirted the morass, I recognized Lee in advance, mounted on a black horse flecked with foam. Twice he paused, gazing across the hills through leveled field glasses, and then rode up the steep ascent to our rear. Maxwell met him not twenty feet from where I lay.

"What does this mean, sir?" Lee thundered hoarsely. "Why are your men lying strewn about in this unsoldierly manner, General Maxwell? Are you unaware, sir, that we are in the presence of the enemy?"

Maxwell's face fairly blazed, as he straightened in the saddle, but before his lips could form an answer, a sudden cheer burst out from the crest of the hill, and I saw men leaping to their feet, and waving their hats. The next instant across the summit came Washington, a dozen officers clattering behind, his face stern-set and white, as he rode straight toward Lee.

"What is the meaning of this retreat, General Lee? My God, sir, how do you account for such disorder and confusion?" he exclaimed, his voice ringing above the uproar, his angry eyes blazing into Lee's face. "Answer me."

The other muttered some reply I failed to catch.

"That's not true," returned Washington, every word stinging like a whip. "It was merely a covering party which attacked you. Why did you accept command, sir, unless you intended to fight?"

"I did not deem it prudent, General Washington, to bring on a general engagement."

"You were to obey my orders, sir, and you know what they were. See! They are coming now!"

He wheeled his horse about, pointing with one hand across the valley.

"Major Cain, have Oswald bring up his guns at once; Lieutenant McNeill, ride to Ramsey and Stewart; have their troops on the ridge within ten minutes—General Maxwell, these are your men?"

"They are, sir."

"Hold this line at any cost, the reserves will be up presently."

As he drew his horse about he again came face to face with Lee, who sat his saddle sullenly, his gaze on the ground. Washington looked at him a moment, evidently not knowing what to say. Then he asked quietly:

"Will you retain command on this height, or, not, sir?"

"It is equal to me where I command."

"Then I expect you will take proper means for checking the enemy."

"I shall not be the first to leave the ground; your orders shall be obeyed."

What followed was but a medley of sight and sound. I saw Washington ride to the left; heard Lee give a hurried order, or two; then I was at the rear of our own line strengthening it for assault. There was little enough time left.

Under the smoke of several batteries, whose shells were ripping open the side of the hill, the British were advancing in double line, the sun gleaming on their bayonets, and revealing the uniforms of different corps.

"S[illegible] Steady!" voice after voice caught up the command. "Hold your fire!"

"Wait until they reach that fallen tree!" I added.

Every [illegible] us had a gun, officers, all. Coat[illegible] though we came from the haying field, the perspiration streaming down our faces, we waited. The rifle barrels glowed brown in the sun, as the keen eyes took careful sight. We were but a handful, a single thin line; if the reserves failed we would be driven back by mere force of numbers, yet before we went that slope should be strewn with dead. Crashing up from the rear came Oswald with two guns, wheeling into position, the depressed muzzles spouting destruction. Yet those red and blue lines came on; great openings were ploughed through them, but the living mass closed up. They were at the fallen tree, beyond, when we poured our volleys into their very faces. We saw them waver as that storm of lead struck; the center seemed to give way, leaving behind a ridge of motionless bodies; then it surged forward again, led by a waving flag, urged on by gesticulating officers.

"The cavalry! The cavalry!"

They were coming around the end of the morass, charging full tilt upon the right of our line. I saw that end crumble up, and, a moment later, scarcely realizing what had occurred we were racing backward, firing as we ran, and stumbling over dead bodies.

Maxwell rallied us beyond the causeway, swearing manfully as he drove us into position behind a low stone wall. Again and again they charged us, the artillery fire shattering the wall into fragments. Twice we came to bayonets and clubbed guns, battling hand to hand, and Wayne was forced so far back upon the left, that we were driven into the edge of the wood for protection. But there we held, out front a blaze of fire. It seemed to me the horror of that struggle would never end. Such heat, such thirst, the black powder smoke in our nostrils, the dead under foot, the cries of the wounded, the incessant roar of the guns. Again and again it was hand to hand; I could scarcely tell who faced us, so fierce the melee, so suffocating the smoke; I caught glimpses of British Grenadiers, of Hessians, of Queen's Rangers. Once I thought I heard Grant's nasal voice amid the infernal uproar. Stewart and Ramsey came to our support; Oswald got his guns upon an eminence, opening a deadly fire; Livingston's regiment charged, and, with a cheer, we leaped forward also, mad with the battle fever, and flung them back, back down that deadly slope. It was not in flesh and blood to stand; we cut the center like a wedge, and drove them pell-mell to where Lee had been in the morning. Here they rallied, flanked by thick woods and morasses. Too exhausted to follow, our men sank breathless to the ground.

It was already sunset, and our work done. The artillery still already, and I could see long lines of troops—Poor's and the Carolina brigade—moving to the right. Night came on, however, without more fighting, and, as soon as we had recovered sufficiently, we devoted ourselves to the care of the wounded.

CHAPTER XXVI.

The Road to Philadelphia.

It must have been 10 o'clock, and, if I had slept at all, I was scarcely conscious of it. All about me the men lay outstretched upon the ground, still in their shirt-sleeves, as they had fought, their guns beside them. The night was clear and hot, scarcely a breath of air moving. Here and there against the sky-line passed the dark silhouette of a sentinel. There was no sound of firing only an occasional footfall to break the silence of the night. The wounded had been taken to the field hospitals at the rear; down in our front lay the bodies of the dead, and among these shone the dim lights of lanterns where the last searching parties were yet busy at their gruesome task. I was weary enough to sleep, every muscle of my body aching with fatigue, but the excitement of the day, the possibility of the morrow, left me restless. I had received no wound, other than a slight thrust with a bayonet, yet felt as though pummelled from head to foot. The victory was ours—the army realized this truth clearly enough; we had repulsed the red-coats, driven them back with terrible losses; we had seen their lines shrivel up under our fire, officers and men falling, and the remnant fleeing in disorder. It meant nothing now that a force outnumbering us yet remained intact, and in strong position. Flushed with victory, knowing now we could meet the best of them, we longed for the morrow to dawn so we might complete the task.

I reviewed the vivid incidents of the day, looking up at the stars, and wondered who among those I knew were yet living, who were dead. I thought of others in those lines of the enemy, whom I had known, speculating on their fate. Then along our rear came a horseman or two, riding slowly. A sentry halted them, and I arose on one elbow to listen.

In his annual report as school medical officer for Cardiganshire, Dr. R. W. Rees stated that corsets are almost universal among infants and girls, and produce injurious effects by hampering the movements and development of the body and counteract the beneficial effects of organised physical exercises. Clogs are not often worn by the children. They are undoubtedly the best footgear for country children, the report said, and should be more generally adopted.

No More Asthma A Cure Discovered That Really Does Cure

Thousands Testify to the Lasting Benefit Derived by This Marvelous Preparation.

The country is simply wild over the wonderful cures of chronic asthma that are being made every day by Catarrhozone. It is a scientific surprise, a perfect marvel the way it brings old chronics back to health. You will say so yourself after you have used it once, say so after the very first time. Ever since people first began to have asthma, Catarrhozone is certainly the best remedy discovered.

Creighton E. Thompson, well known in Calgary writes: "Nothing too strong can be said for Catarrhozone. I suffered four years from asthma in a way that would beggar description. I went through everything that man could suffer. I was told of Catarrhozone by a clerk in Findlay's drug store and purchased a dollar package. It was worth hundreds to me in a week, and I place a priceless value on the benefit I have since derived. I strongly urge every sufferer to use Catarrhozone for Asthma, Bronchitis and Catarrh.

The one-dollar package last two months; small size, 50c; sample size 25c; all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

$6.90 a Crack.

As J. B. Guerin was working at a machine at the C.G.E. Works, David Gribe, from jealousy or some unknown cause, landed on Guerin's dome of thought with a clenched fist. Gribe, not content with this, first crack, "came back" and landed another on Guerin's ear, later on. The last blow caused Guerin to fall on his machine. Guerin did not seem to relish such forcible familiarities and had Gribe summoned. At yesterday's police court, the two blows cost Gribe just $6.90 each. Guerin might have lost his life when knocked against the machine.

INDIGESTION, GAS OR SICK, SOUR STOMACH

Time It!—"Pape's Diapepsin" makes your upset, bloated stomach feel fine in five minutes.

"Really does" put bad stomachs in order—"really does" overcome indigestion, dyspepsia, gas, heartburn, and sourness in five minutes—that—just that—makes Pape's Diapepsin the largest selling stomach regulator in the world. If what you eat ferments into stubborn lumps, you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food and acid; head is dizzy and your insides filled with bile and indigestible waste, remember the moment "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. It's truly astonishing—almost marvelous, and the joy is its harmlessness.

A large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin will give you a hundred dollars' worth of satisfaction or your druggist hands you your money back.

It's worth its weight in gold to men and women who can't get their stomachs regulated. It belongs in your home—should always be kept handy in case of a sick, sour, upset stomach during the day or at night. It's the quickest, surest and most harmless stomach doctor in the world.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES

A SERUM FOUND TO CONQUER DIPHTHERIA

Injected Into Healthy Persons Makes Them Immune To Disease.

London, May 23.—The Congress of Medicine at Wiesbaden has closed with an important statement by Prof. Behring on diptheria prophylaxis. Prof. Behring's serum has for some time past been injected into healthy persons to render them immune against diphtheria, but experience has proved the method is not very satisfactory, because, although immunity is undoubtedly secured, the prophylatic effect of the serum is not of long duration.

Prof. Behring appeared before the Congress and announced that he had discovered a new prophylactic substance, consisting of a mixture of diptheria poison and antidote. Dr. Hahn, of Madgeburg, reported that he had treated prophylactically with this substance several persons who ran a risk of contracting diphtheria.

SUBSTANCE INNOCUOUS.

In the first place, he stated, the substance proved to be perfectly innocuous, and in the second place proof that real protection was afforded was given by the fact that a sufficiently large quantity of protective matter was found in the blood of the inoculated persons, none of whom contracted the disease.

Dr. Matthes, of Marburg, reported that he had made similar observations, and added that from one particular case he had transferred the serum to another child, this being the first time that passive immunity theria serum. Experience proved had been produced with human diphthat immunity could be secured for a much longer time with this substance with animal serum.

In the course of the discussion Dr. Weinstraud, of Weisbaden, stated that he had injected the serum into the vertebral canal of the patient who was in an extremely critical condition, and thereby saved his life. Dr. Rumpel reported that during a recent serious epidemic in Hamburg, the mortality was very high in spite of the serum.

MORTALITY REDUCED.

Dr. Lennhoff, on the other hand produced statistics which show that since the introduction of the serum into Berlin the sickness and morality figures had fluctuated, but that the proportion of deaths to cases of illness had fallen to one-half. This meant, he added, that one-half of the persons who formerly would have died were now saved, though perhaps in severe epidemics not so many.

Prof. Behring described the progress of his latest work, and stated that he was now ready to place his material at the disposal of clinics, on condition, however, that the most careful and accurate observations were made and registered. It was pointed out that the results of further treatment must show whether it would soon be possible to safeguar many healthy persons from danger of infection in diphtheria epidemics.

GIRLS, EXERCISE!

The Best Dowry on Your Wedding Day is Health

Physiologically girls need exercise as much as boys. They need it under proper direction and in reasonable "doses." They need it as they do food and sleep. As a rule mothers take every care that their little daughters look well as to dress. But do they all remember to consider that a girl as well as a boy must lay the foundation of the future strength and happiness of health while she is still growing up?

The best dowry a girl can have on her wedding day is health. From the age of 10 to 14 a girl should be carefully built physically if her body is to be strong and wholesome in after years. Girls should be encouraged to romp, not boisterously, but in a whole-souled way which will bring every muscle into action and cause the blood to circulate well. And if the mother is wise she won't be deeply troubled if some other mother calls her happy, healthy, natural child, a "tomboy."

In order that growing girls may have as much freedom as possible it is a step in the right direction to dress them in romper costume as long as it is at all feasible. If this custom were popularized and adopted for use among larger girls in schoolrooms and on the playground the age of self-consciousness would be postponed and the cause of health enhanced.

The vision of life depends very largely on the physical condition. If you would have your daughter grow into womanhood with a happy, wholesome vision start her on the right road by giving her proper exercise when she is growing. Let her learn to breathe the fresh air as a regular diet. Let her find out the wisdom of sleeping out of doors in fair weather and with plenty of fresh air in her sleeping room in stormy weather. Teach her how to breathe.

Let her learn to exercise regularly in a hearty, natural way. Dress her simply in a fashion which will make it possible for her to grow.

The chances are that the habit of exercise and fresh air breathing formed when she is young will be second nature when she is grown.

Don't make the mistake of supposing, because she is a girl, that your sole duty is to make a "perfect lady" of her while her health takes care of itself.

THE ST. LAWRENCE INVESTMENT & TRUST COMPANY.

was incorporated by act of the Quebec Legislature, 5 Ed. VII, Chap. 75, in 1905, having for its object the extending and absorption of the St. Lawrence Investment Society. This Society, formed in 1895, carried on a successful business on a small scale, paying regular annual dividends varying from 5 p.c. to 15 p.c. and the assets gave the shares of the Society a value of about $150 at its absorption. The Charter under which the new Company is organized is a valuable one, it being difficult to obtain a Charter of like character. The powers conferred by it are wide and give an opportunity for the transaction of a profitable business.

FUTURE OF THE COMPANY.

The new Company will do business on a much larger scale than the old Company, will operate largely in the owning of, buying and selling of well selected real estate, in the development of tracts of land in the City and its suburbs by selling same as Factory Sites and building lots, and in the purchase of agreements of sale, a business very profitably engaged in, in Toronto, Winnipeg, Calgary, Vancouver and other Cities. The purchasing of agreements of sale has not, to any extent, been carried on in Montreal, and it is intended that this Company pay particular attention to this Branch, which shows even better opportunities of profit, with a larger margin of safety, than those of the West, inasmuch as the values of Real Estate in Montreal are more firmly based.

FIELD OF OPERATION

The operations of the Company will be confined chiefly to the City and District of Montreal and there is no city which offers the same advantages to Investors seeking safety with large returns. Montreal's commercial supremacy in the Dominion is universally known. The population in 1901 was 266,826, and in 1912 611,397. The assessed valuation of Real Estate in 1912 showed an increase of $125,000,000 over the previous year. Montreal is an Island, therefore its area is fixed. Real Estate values, though increasing, are still low, and leave room for great expansion. The City proper covers an area of 16 square miles, the smallest area of any city with the same population in either Canada or the United States.

MANAGEMENT

The Company have appointed Findlay & Howard, Limited, Managers. Mr. Findlay is recognised as one of the foremost judges of Real Estate in Montreal, and the Firm's success is shown in the results of the following companies managed by them, which in addition to placing substantial amounts to reserve have paid dividends as follows:—

Applemount Land Company, Limited,	Incorporated	1909	paid	55 p.c.
Birnam Realty Company, Limited,	"	1910	"	80 p.c.
Drummond Realties, Limited	"	1912	"	33 1-3 p.c.

LOCAL MEN HOME FROM WESTERN TRIP

Mr. Frank Montgomery, proprietor of the local hotel of that ilk, returned yesterday from a visit to his ranch at Vonda, Sask. The ranch is operated by Mr. Montgomery's son Will. Will intends planting some 20 acres in oats and barley. It seems that wheat, by the time it is shipped eats up all profit in transportation and elevator charges. Whilst our west Mr. Montgomery, with a sigh and a shrug, said "I'm about killed with work on building wire fences. I built over two miles whilst away. The fence posts, six inches in diameter, of hemlock, are cut by Galcians and cost 15 cents each. Vonda is 30 miles from Saskatoon and Mr. Montgomery's ranch is 4 miles from Vonda. Will, his son, rides in daily for his mail on a gas propelled bicycle.

KING GEORGE, LIKE FATHER, IS AN ADVOCATE OF PEACE

His Majesty Spoke Earnestly Though Briefly at Function in Berlin—Guest of Embassy; There for Luncheon.

Berlin, Mal 23.—King George, of Britain, at present the guest of Emperor William on the occasion of the marriage of Princess Victoria Luise to Prince Ernest August, of Cumberland, spoke earnestly, but briefly today on the necessity of the maintenance of peace in the world, in replying to an address presented to him by the British residents of Berlin gathered at the British Embassy. His Majesty said: "The preservation of peace is my fervent desire as it was the chief aim and object of mydear father's life."

This is the first and only political note sounded during the wedding festivities of Emperor William's only daughter, for which three Emperors and many Princes are gathered seems, according to the opinion expressed in influential circles, to epitomise the chief significance of the Royal and Imperial visits as a demonstration of the peaceful and friendly relations existing between the three powerful dynasties.

King George and Queen Mary afterward were the guests at luncheon of the British Ambassadors, the others present including Imperial Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg and a number of the diplomatic corps.

At the same time Emperor Nicholas of Russia was the guest at luncheon of the Russian Ambassador at the Russian Embassy.

For the gala opera to be given tonight the first act of the Lohengrin has been selected by Princess Victoria Luise.

The festivities to mark the Royal wedding were brilliantly inaugurated by a state dinner in the famous white hall at the Royal castle last night at which were privileged to attend two hundred and fifty guests, including nearly one hundred royalties gathered round the quadrangular table which ran the full length of the banqueting chamber.

REFORM THE SENATE

Upon the Senate a decisive judgment must be pronounced. The nominated Upper Chamber is condemned by every page of Canadian history since Confederation. Like the House of Commons, it must be made responsible to the people. If at the command of the Senate a Government with a decisive majority in Parliament must submit its legislation to the people then the people must also be required to declare whether or not the Senate as now constituted should continue to exist. Undoubtedly the result will be that domination by a single Province and domination by an unrepresentative Chamber will perish together. The sooner the bet-

PETERBOROUGH'S FINEST NEW OFFICE BUILDING

The former Crown Hotel property, recently purchased by Mr. W. H. Hill, is approaching completion as regards both internal and external improvements. This building, centrally located was for many years occupied by the late Mr. William Croft as a hotel.

Mr. [illegible] C. Ephgrave, the local builder and hardwood expert has the contract for improving and modernizing the building for its recent purchaser. To a critical observer, the place has undergone a complete transmogrification. The whole exterior has been treated to a coat of paint. The window sills and doors have been modernized. The main entrance from Water street has been given a new doorway of stone and cement stucco-work. This leads to handsome double doors of antique oak and plate-glass. As one enters, one comes into a room, with newly plastered walls and metal ceiling, some 30 x 40 feet. This room is to be subdivided into offices for the Sun Life Co., Mr. Hill's pet idea in business life. The partitions will be of quartered oak and plate glass. To the north of this main office is Mr. D. H. Moore's office. These offices are the highest and brightest in the city, with their big plate glass windows. Two new burglar and fire proof vaults have been built on the ground floor.

To the east are the splendid furnished offices of the Western Estate offices, and, further east are flats on the upper stories.

proof vaults have been built on the new quarters of "Farm and Dairy." On the third floor is a big dwelling flat. All the flats are now occupied. Both Mr. Hill and Contractor Ephgrave are to be congratulated on the splendid work accomplished.

MOVIES MUST OBEY THE LAW

Crowding of Aisles and Approaches Must be Stopped at Once

It would seem that the Times is the only local paper that cares a straw whether or not the public is protected in the moving picture houses. We have no quarrel with the moving picture houses as such. Whilst a percentage of the films, though technically passed by the Ontario Board of Censors, are not of a class to stimulate clean moral thought in the minds of women and children, there are hundreds of films of great educational benefit shown. Pictures of travel in foreign lands, representations of court and civic functions are often presented.

What we do complain of, and have constantly called attention to, is the absolute disregard for protection to human life displayed in a hungry seeking for the nickles. These places are largely patronized by children. The owners of the "movies" are forbidden to crowd the aisles and approaches. This is to prevent death from panic, a too frequent incident in such places. Several fines have been imposed here on the proprietors for their greedy disregard of human life. It seems that a misunderstanding has existed regarding crowding of the out side lobbies, the key to death in case of an internal panic.

To ascertain just how far the law covers the crowding of this part of the "movies," the Times wrote the Department, and received a reply, which in part, reads as follows, "Replying to yours of 17th inst., would say that section 9 of the Regulations certainly does refer to all approaches to the theatre to the street line continuous, and a lobby is beyond doubt an approach."

Now that this misunderstood interpretation of the Act has been definitely settled, Chief Thompson will, hereafter see that the law is observed in its entirety for the safeguard of the public.

ROUND TRIP.

To-day, May 24th, The Peterborough Radial Ry. Co. open air cars will commence their round trips. One hours' ride for five cents.

CAPITAL OF JAPAN IS HUSHED AS THE EMPEROR IS ILL

Tokio, May 23.—Official report that the Emperor Yoshitito is ill with pneumonia, the constant attendance upon him by one or more of the eight court physicians and the vigil which the Empress Sadaka kept at his bedside all last night, make it appear that his condition is more grave than the public surmised from the first bulletins. The whole Japanese Empire is to-day depressed with the reports.

The bulletin issued this morning only announced briefly that the Emperor's condition was unchanged. The high fever of last night, when his temperature ranged from [illegible] to 102.92 fahrenheit, apparently was unabated.

The Imperial patient is at the Aoyama Palace, on whose immense parade ground he contracted a cold while reviewing the troops last Sunday. It had been intended to remove him at once to the newer Chiyoda Palace, but the sudden serious turn of inflammation of the lungs necessitated abandonment of the plan.

Great Shock to People.

The issuance of the first bulletin yesterday announcing the Emperor's illness came as a great shock to the people and as it gained circulation through extra editions of the newspapers a sorrowful hush fell upon the city and great crowds silently assembled in front of the Royal Palace. The people knelt and prayed fervently for the speedy recovery of their sovereign.

"DEBORAH" AN IMMORAL PLAY AND PERFORMANCES FORBIDDEN

Carlotta Nillson and Her Company Appear Before Police Magistrate.

Toronto, May 23.—There was a buzz in the corridors outside the Women's Court this morning, and inside the room was filled with ladies, who had gained an early admittance and listened unmoved to the evidence that was presented in the usual ghastly early roll call of this court. They had not come to hear these cases, but they stayed through them rather than miss a seat for the "Deborah" trial.

The corridors outside were packed long before the case was to be called and round the little knot of actors who were to be tried were a great crowd of curious people. Across the corridors was a knot of black coats, the Rev. John Coburn and his aides de camp. The glances that passed between the two groups showed that here at all events, the church and the stage were not in accord.

A Sort of a Social Affair.

"Oh, you are here, are you?" exclaimed one excited lady in the corridor to another. "It seems to me everybody is down for this case."

For the first time since the Woman's court was inaugurated the male reporters were admitted and the "Deborah" case was called.

"Is Marie Day here?" called Magistrate Denison—"Marie Day, Marie Day."

"She's outside," volunteered someone.

"Oh, then we had better have her in," laughed the magistrate, while the call went down the corridor and Marie Day, a dignified grey-haired lady, was admitted.

Miss Nillson Amused.

The others were called forward, one by one, Carlotta Nillson herself wearing a smart blue tailored suit and a little French hat, smiling in an amused fashion to her friends among the onlookers.

The five fashionably dressed women were seated on a long bench awaiting proceedings and at their side the men of the company, one with an eye glass, gauntily set in his eye.

Proceedings then began and Carlotta Nillson leaned forward, all smiles and dimples, so as not to miss anything that might be said.

SIR GEORGE ROSS

It will be interesting, in view of the attitude of the Liberals in the Senate on the navy bill, to read the following: "While I am not much impressed with what is called the German scare, I think the duty of England is plain, and our duty is equally plain; for the conquest of England means the conquest of Canada. Let the British throne totter; let London be in the possession of the enemy; let her ports be filled with foreign seamen and foreign men-of war, and Canada would be blotted from the map as an English dependency and her autonomy would be forever destroyed. And although I do not think the emergency is great, still I think it is sufficiently great for us to be guided by the judgment of the Admiralty of England to prepare ourselves for all possible contingencies."—Sir George Ross in the Senate, 20th April, 1910.

To Observe Victoria Day

Despatches from all parts of the Dominion indicate that there will be a general observance of Victoria Day—the day set apart by Canada in memory and honor of the late Queen Victoria. The anniversary falling on a Saturday affords an opportunity for a double holiday and thousands of persons will take advantage of the occasion for a vacation trip out of town

OPEN DIVISION THREATENED WITHIN THE ANGLICAN CHURCH

Refusal of Canadian Bishops to Endorse Movement for Church Union May Result in Schism—Latitudinarian Section of Church Favors Final Unity With Protestantism and Non-Episcopal Bodies

Toronto, May 23.—Behind closed doors at a meeting yesterday in the Church of the Redeemer, from which the reporters of the press were expressly excluded in the afternoon and tacitly understood to be absent from the evening sitting, a league was organized for the membership of which "all members of the Church of England in Canada, male and female, above the age of twenty-one years are eligible.

It was the private meeting, publicly heralded in the press of the signatories, lay and clerical, of the famous circular letter issued some months ago by the latitudinarian section of the Anglican Church and directed towards intercommunion and final unity with the Protestant non-episcopal bodies.

This account is given by an eye-witness, but the official statements and reports handed out to the press do not convey the difficulties under which the meetings were held. The Canadian Bishops have refused to set their seal upon or give their blessing to the projects of the signatories, and at the present time the title of Patron of the Church Unity League is in abeyance until the Primate of All Canada allows the use of his name in that connection. The second reason for the private meeting lay in the fact that the signatories did not think it wise or expedient to give as yet too much opportunity for the criticism of the High Churchmen of the city.

Schism Imminent.

The fact that the League is open to all Anglicans of age throughout Canada does not conceal the fact that yesterday's meeting showed the determination of a large section of the Anglican church to break with that party in the same Church which holds, in its own words, "Catholic faith and practice," and that and open division between the two parties must come about if the League is successful. High Churchmen are firm believers in Christian unity, but they insist equally upon some basis of reunion. Ultimately and effectively to exclude all possible ground of union with the Roman Catholic Church and the Communions of the East, who together form an overwhelming majority of Christians throughout the world, is the supreme objection put forth by High Churchmen.

The meeting was one of the most reverent and best conducted ever held in Toronto.

LIGHTS AND BUOYS ON TRENT CANAL

The routes along and between Lake Simcoe and Lake Couchiching are having lighthouses installed and made so that the veriest tyro of a captain or pilot can easily steer his course. Hon. Mr. Cochrane, Minister of Railways and Canals, and Mr. W. H. Bennett, member for East Simcoe, are displaying great interest in this section of the canal. The course has also been buoyed in a most satisfactory manner. Whilst these improvements have been made the pity is that vast changes will have to be effected to the whole route of the canal, to eliminate blunders made in its construction in past years.

THE WEATHER.

To-day—Fair; temperature unchanged.

ST. THOMAS AGAIN WINS IN A HARD FOUGHT GAME

Quite a large crowd of fans were present yesterday at Riverside Park the fair sex being well represented. It was the second game of the series between the Petes and St. Thomas. The weather was fine and the ground was in fairly good shape.

The teams are very evenly matched and a classy exhibition of ball was put up. There seems to be horse shoes with the St. Thomas aggregation. They again scored in the first innings, but the Petes held them down to 1—1, and it took ten innings for them to win, although a good many of the Petes reached 3rd, none were lucky enough to get over the plate.

Some very fast, spicy playing was pulled off by both teams, but as usual the Jinx roosted on Davis's pen but the games to-day promises to put a crimp in Mr. Jinx.

Tracey, pitching for the Petes, put up a good game, as did also Catcher McNeal, and in fact the whole team worked hard. "No Hit" Baker was tapped for only eight hits, still they did not come in the right time and consequently counted for nothing.

THE SCORE.

ST. THOMAS	1 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 2---3

PRINCE ALBERT, THE HEIR TO BRITAIN'S THRONE, HERE

Grossly Exaggerated Reports of "Tennis" Incident Bring a Correction—Admiralty is Given a Scare.

Halifax, N.S., May 23.—Grossly exaggerated reports of the decision of Prince Albert, heir presumptive to the British throne, in playing tennis instead of going to Government House, having been cabled to English newspapers, an official explanation of the incident, which seems to have caused the Admiralty grave alarm, is handed out.

It appears that there was a miscalculation by Government House officials here. Instead of following the usual procedure, Lieut.-Governor McGregor called on Captain Smith first, and the official call of the Cumberland's commander was delayed for some days in consequence.

It had been expected that Prince Albert would accompany Captain Smith when the latter made his return call, and an intimation to that effect was given out from the Government House.

Just Like Other Cadets.

The King's special orders, however were that Prince Albert was to be treated exactly as any of the other sixty cadets on the training ship, and as a garden party had been arranged at Government House for Saturday, it was decided that the Prince should only call on Lieutenant-Governor McGregor in company with his brother cadets.

Intercepted a Message.

Yesterday the wireless operator on the Cumberland, the vessel to which the young Prince is attached, intercepted a press message describing how the heir presumptive had "flouted" the Lieutenant-Governor of Nova Scotia. Later the Admiralty officials in London asked for an explanation of the report which had been cabled to England.

FOR AGED MINISTERS

Toronto, May 23.—The Bishop of Toronto has written to the clergy and laity of the diocese on behalf of the superannuation fund of the Anglican Church, which the committee hope to increase to $50,000. This sum is needed to give sufficient remuneration to those members of the clergy who are no longer able to be active, having given the best of their lives in the service of the Church. The Bishop in his pastoral, points out that many of our older clergy who have served in the sacred ministry for years have been unable out of a miserably small remuneration to lay aside anything for the future, and have, therefore, been compelled to remain "in harness" long after the time when they might have been expected to retire.

PRINCE ARTHUR IS [illegible]

London, May 23.—The story circulated that Prince Arthur may succeed his father in Canada is extremely improbably. Prince Arthur is much too useful just now on special missions to be spared for an extended term away from England, and several other circumstances make it unlikely he will be seen at Ottawa.

There! I wasted my sweetness on the desert air.

NUGENT'S SARSAPARILLA—PRICE FOR large bottle, 100 full doses, 25c. and well worth it, too. It's better to take no medicine at all than to depend upon cheap concoctions that are compounded to sell at low price and a big profit just because there is a large demand for certain remedies at certain seasons of the year. There are so-called Sarsaparillas offered to us to sell to our customers at 75c a bottle that would bring us a larger profit than Nugent's Sarsaparilla sold at 25c. Nugent's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, arouses the torpid liver, drives out all impurities, cleanses and tones up the system, and helps Nature throw off the dullness that comes from indoor life of winter. It arouses energy, brightens the eye, clears the brain, gives buoyancy to the movements. Nugent's Sarsaparilla is not the only thing you will find in this drug store. We make a specialty of Nugent's Remedies. Nugent Drug Co., [illegible] George St., directly opposite Cressman's store.

THE POOREST OF ALL PEOPLE

Natives of the Arctics Who Have Enough to Eat Are Considered Very Fortunate.

I have not known so poor a winter during the whole of my stay among the Eskimos (now 22 years), says a writer in the Christian Herald. While the coast is ice-bound, the days short, snowstorms frequent and the thermometer often 40 degrees below zero. It is not possible for the Eskimo to do much to secure a living. One way for the women to produce something was to cut holes through the sea ice, which reaches a thickness of six feet, and there they stood fishing for rock cod, most days securing only between five and ten fish. The mission endeavored to help, but poverty was so general that all resources were taxed to the utmost.

An outsider has no idea of what poverty among the Eskimos means. At the best of times the wants of an Eskimo are few and his food consists of the coarsest of substances. Seal walrus and whale meat form a large part of their diet, and the blubber of these animals serves in the place of pork or butter.

In China the famished inhabitants subsisted on roots or some inferior vegetation, but here the vegetable kingdom has nothing to offer. The earth is frozen and deeply covered with snow and ice; the birds have gone south and one might walk for miles without seeing a living creature. At the same time it is of interest to know even these primitive people have for ages found a kind of substitute for food somewhere. Along the beach, which is known to have plenty of seaweed, holes are cut through the thick ice and the seaweed and mussels pulled up through the holes, and it is on record that the [illegible] have sustained life on this, one might say, refuse of the sea, during the long winter months.

The Eskimo has no word for "God" in his language, and it has been fitly marked that the very austere aspect of life may have helped to exclude the conception of a superhuman benevolent Being from the beliefs and superstitions of these people of the Arctic.

Those Who Attend the Cows Should "Keep Cool"

No branch of agriculture requires the operator to "keep cool" more than dairy farming. No hot-headed individual should be allowed to attend the cows. The attendants, to get the largest possible flow, must "keep cool"—that is, must never lose their heads, use loud talk, or be rough. The milk must be kept at a low temperature to be wholesome. Cream must be kept cool. To do this, ice or very cold water is necessary. Butter or cheese—in fact, all dairy products—must be kept away from the heat. "Keep cool" is always seasonable in dairy work. From the stable to the consumer everything in connection with the dairy business gives best results when it is kept scrupulously clean and at a low temperature.

NERVOUS, LIFELESS·
DEBILITATED MEN

YOUNG MEN AND MIDDLE-AGED MEN, the victims of early indiscretions and later excesses, who are failures in life—you are the ones we can restore to manhood and revive the spark of energy and vitality. Don't give up in despair because you have treated with other doctors, used electric belts and tried various drug store nostrums.

Our New Method Treatment has snatched hundreds from the brink of despair, has restored happiness to hundreds of homes and has made successful men of those who were "down and out." We prescribe specific remedies for each individual case according to the symptoms and complications—we have no patent medicines. This is one of the secrets of our wonderful success as our treatment cannot fail, for we prescribe remedies adapted to each individual case. Only curable cases accepted. We have done business throughout Canada for over 20 Years.

CURABLE CASES GUARANTEED OR NO PAY

LARGEST CLOCK IN THE DOMINION

Huge Time-Piece in Vancouver Guaranteed to be Accurate—Twenty-two Foot Faces

The clock that claims the title of the "largest in Canada was installed in the tower of the Vancouver Block on Granville Street, Vancouver, B.C. The four faces of this clock are each twenty-two feet in diameter. The glass contained in the dial weighs four one, and is seven-eighths of an inch in thickness. The minute hands [illegible] feet long, and the hour hands about eight feet.

The clock is controlled by a master clock, which is situated on the ninth story of the building. This master clock transmits its time to the large clock in the tower. It is fitted with a pilot dial, which shows at all times the exact position of the hands in the tower piece. The master clock in turn receives its time through a synchronising attachment, which delivers McGill observatory time once every minute, therby assuring accuracy.

Machinery for operating this huge timepiece is all set in the clock tower. It consists in the main of a motor, which propels the hands. This motor is controlled by a magnet attachment which only permits it to run for a period of fifteen seconds, this being the time required for the large hand to travel one-sixtieth part of the circumference of the dial. Thus the hands are still for forty-five out of every sixty seconds.

The current for running the clock is generated by a small dynamo, which is driven from the electric light mains.

Every point of friction in the clock—from the motor to the crown gear and hands—is fitted with ball bearings. The clock can be set either from the office of the superintendent or in the tower.

The hour marks are a single bar ten inches wide and about four feet long. They are left blank, no numerals being painted on them. The dial is constructed of strucural steel and not, as in most of the older clocks of the country, of cast-iron. The minute divisions of the clock are five and one-half inches wide and about one foot long. The hands are made of aluminum.

The clock was erected at a cost of more than $10,000.

LOST IN MOUNTAIN GLACIER

A Fall of Ice Reveals the Body of a Man

A guide recently came into Kandersteg, from the Loetschenthal, Switzerland, and brought the news that a fall of ice from the Loetschen Glacier had revealed the body of a mountaineer and a hat supposed to belong to another man. The guide believed he had solved the mystery of the two Englishmen, Messrs. Cohen and Henecke, who were lost on the glacier in 1895, when they were surprised by a snowstorm and fell into a crevasse. A later report, however, states that the body is that of a Swiss who disappeared in 1899. The discovery was due to the abnormal melting of the ice owing to the great heat. The discovery of the body came about as follows: A guide went with a lady over the Loetschen Pass towards Kandersteg. Instead of the usual way over the Loetschen Glacier the lady expressed a strong inclination to take another path, and they came across a very little used track, on which they found the body

EDITORIAL NOTES

The season is approaching when the ill-starred young man in the yellow linen suit goes to the picnic and sits down on the blackberry pie.

The year of 1913 will have a long list of sins to answer for. The world has already suffered devastating floods and tornadoes, but, as if this were not enough, Vesuvius and the English suffragettes are in eruption at the same time.

Motorboats are used extensively in Bordeaux, France, not only in sports, but in commerce as well. Fishermen, discarding old methods have found it decidedly better to install motors in their boats, make a quick run to the fishing grounds at the break of day, and return with greatly increased catches.

Some one suggests to The Times that we should have a Father's Day, and were it not for the general fear that the old man might celebrate it by going on a razzle-dazzle jamboree and losing himself for a day or two, it might be in order.

The United States Department of Agriculture's investigation, resulted in the discovery that not less than 12,000,000 pounds of glucose and Epsom salts are sold annually to the American people in the form of leather, the "loading" being done to increase the marketable weight of the leather. Now it is up to the people to demand a pure shoe law, unless they prefer to walk around in glucose and Epsom salts.

DECEIVING THE PUBLIC

The Liberal Opposition at Ottawa has been playing with the time of Parliament and seeking to deceive the public. The Carroll amendment to the naval bill is a case in point. This amendment, designed to produce some local political advantage in the constituency of the mover, was brought before the Committee during the last stage of the consideration of the Naval Bill by the Committee. Either Mr. Carroll had not thought of moving this amendment before or he had kept it locked up in his desk for days and days while he and his friends were blocking the progress of the Bill. His amendment could have been moved even on the last day if his friends had chosen to make way for it. They did not choose—instead they waited till the Prime Minister had made his motion that the Bill be reported out of Committee. Then they tried to get the Carroll amendment in and made a big row when they found themselves barred by the rules. These sort of tactics have been characteristic of the fight against the Naval Bill.

PROTESTANTISM.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Knowing that your paper takes so deep an interest in Protestantism, will you kindly let me know what the word Protestant really means and oblige.

Enquirer.

Reply.—The term "Protestant" is derived from the protest on behalf of religious liberty at the Diet of Spires in 1529, by a large body of German princes and Imperial cities. It then became associated with Lutheranism in Germany, and with Anglicanism in England. It afterwards developed a negative sense, and generally means simply "non-Roman Catholic," and so can be rightly used of any Christian body outside the Roman Church. —Ed.

ARE WOMEN TREATED BETTER HERE?

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—"Error lies in generalities," as an old Latin saw has it, the present application there, being to an editorial contribution, dated London, May 10, on the antics of the "suffragettes" or "wild women" of England, published in your paper.

It is asserted that "in Canada the women are better treated, have greater privileges, and are neither backward in making known what they want, nor wanting in skill and intelligence to obtain it. They do not beat against a blank wall of prejudice and privilege." Would it not have been more instructive to set forth, at least in outline, the specific grievances under which English women are thus alleged to labor? No statement of that kind would have been complete without a reference to the other side of the ledger—to those matters in which English women possess privileges hitherto denied to the great mass of their American sisters. Among these are the equality with men in local government, not only in the exercise of the franchise but also in the qualification for election to the various local bodies.

There are elected women members on the London county council today; women can sit on provincial municipal councils, both as aldermen and councillors, there have even been women mayors within the last half-dozen years. The presence of women is especially appropriate and acceptable on boards of poor law guardians dealing with in and outdoor pauper relief, but the fact remains that few are found willing to embrace the wide opportunities offered by the "man-made laws," against which Mrs. Pankhurst so vehemently protests.

Again, when English "class privileges" are dealt with, it would be no more than fair to note that these—grotesquely exaggerated as they usually are in Canadian references—do not apply to females alone. Anomalies will continue to exist in national and parochial institutions until the day, whose advent I should be pained to witness, when idiosyncracies and traditional characteristics are obliterated by the march of a "civilization" which I am often tempted to characterise by another and less boastful substantive.

JUST ONE MORE WOMAN RISES

TO TELL HER SISTERS THEY CAN FIND RELIEF IN DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

Mrs. John Cabot, After Six Years' Suffering, Tried Dodd's Kidney Pills and Found New Life and Energy.

White Head Perce, Que., May 23.—(Special).—One more woman has risen to tell her suffering sisters they can find relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills. That woman is Mrs. John Cabot, well-known and highly respected here, and she expresses her enthusiasm in these words: "I certainly recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills. There is nothing better."

Asked to give her experience, Mrs. Cabot continued: "My trouble started in a cold, and I suffered for six years. Rheumatism, neuralgia, stiffness of the joints, cramps in the muscles and heart flutterings were among my symptoms, and finally Bright's Disease developed. It was then I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills, and they helped me almost from the start. After taking four boxes I feel like a new woman."

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure the kidneys. Healthy kidneys strain all the impurities and poison—all the seeds of disease—out of the blood. Dodd's Kidney Pills not only cure the disease but by ensuring good blood give new life and energy to every part of the body.

That Terrible Fatigue Can Be Overcome

A Simple Home Remedy Now Cures Lack of Energy, Loss of Ambition, and a Feeling of "Don't-Care."

Successful in Nearly Every Case.

That miserable nervousness and half-sick tired-all-the-time condition is due nine cases in ten to a clogged-up system. You grow irritable and despondent, you lack ambition, energy seems all gone. Surest road to health is by the frequent use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they will make you feel like new all over in a short time.

Writing from his home in Barcelona, Mr. Frederick G. Mayer states: "I think no one ever suffered as severely as I did for nearly six months. So many serious symptoms were developing as a consequence of this evil condition of my system that I realized I must find a remedy. The strong pills of various kinds I tried seemed after their first effects were over to make me far worse and I did not know which way to turn for relief. I saw Dr. Hamilton's Pills advertised, and the first box used satisfied me. I found a true remedy. Instead of griping with undue activity, Dr. Hamilton's Pills acted as naturally as if physic had not been taken. I never had to increase the dose, and, indeed, within a month I reduced it, and when the system finally acted of its own accord as a result of Dr. Hamilton's Pills, I took a dose twice a week only, just to make sure the old condition would not come back."

No other remedy cures constipation and billiousness so easily or safely as Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they are an ideal family remedy for all disease of the stomach liver and bowles. Sold in 25c. boxes, five for $1.00, all druggists and storekeepers or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

BONFIRE BURNED ON HISTORIC SPOT

The property upon which a bonfire was built to celebrate the annexation of the town of North Toronto by the City of Toronto was the site of Montgomery's Hotel, an old land mark that figured in the rebellion of 1837. The lot lay vacant ever since the historic tavern was burned by the Government forces on December 7, 1837. It was the scene of a sharp skirmish and bloodshed. Sir Allan McNab, who came from Hamilton several days before, attacking the rebels at a point on Yonge street just south of the hotel. As the Government forces were reaching the top of the hill a horse came galloping out of the fields. A man named Wideman who caught and mounted the animal was shot. While a group was standing around his body someone raised the cry of fire, and smoke was seen issuing from Montgomery's Hotel, which was gutted.

SOAP DRIVES A BOAT.

A writer in Science tells of an ingenious little skiff, about two inches long, which he constructed and provided with a piece of soap for the motor. The boat was of wood paraffined to repel the water. The soap formed the sternboard of the skiff. The boat was placed on still water in a bathtub, and began to move as soon as the water came in contact with the soap. After gathering headway it reached a velocity of two inches a second. The power was derived from the potential energy of the surface water film set free by the diminution of surface tension, this reduction being due to solution of the soap.

COAST INDIANS ARE SEMI-ASIATIC

Father Fortin, a Jesuit Priest, Believes He Has Proof of Their Coming Ages Ago.

It was a tale of stern hardship and strange adventure in the "eternal twilight" of the "Barren Lands," that was told by the Rev. Father Fortin, in Montreal upon his arrival from the West where he spent twenty years in a Jesuit Mission to the Indians of Northern British Columbia and the Yukon.

As a result of long contact with the Indians of the North Country, Father Fortin has evolved an original theory with regard to the origin of the Coast Indians. It is his firm conviction that these Indans are not an indigenous race of this continent, but that they are semi-Asiatic and semi-Esquimaux. The main argument advanced by the missionary in support of his theory is contained in an extensive investigation of the folk-lore and traditions of the various tribes of the Coast that have managed to maintain their integrity. The results of his research led Father Fortin to determine approximately the date of migration of the ancestors of those tribes.

About ten thousand years ago, Father Fortin believes, there was a terrible revolution in northern Asia and Siberia—one of the periodic outbursts of pent-up savagery such as desolated Europe in the fifth century of the Christian era. A harried remnant of a semi-Asiatic Siberian tribes, driven helplessly before some vast horde of pillagers, found its way across the Behring Straits and settled on the Pacific coast of America.

Father Fortin says he found unmistakable evidence of this migration in the form of tradition which bear close resemblance to the traditions of the so-called Mongolion tribes of Southern Siberia. Probably the most remarkable point of Father Fortin's theory is that these migrated tribes brought with them a distinct and advanced civilization which practically disappeared in the course of many generatons amidst a new environment.

"I am confident," said Father Fortin, "that a close analysis of physical characteristics shows that these nondescript tribes are from the same parent stock as the Japanese. Probably the Japs themselves were driven to their Island Kingdom by similar disturbances on the continent. The fact of the greater degree of enterprise and national consciousness being shown by the Japs can be ascribed almost entirely to a more congenial and vigorous environment."

WEALTH OF FOREFTS.

Outside of the agricultural lands, those under water, covered wth snow, or still unexplored, it is estimated that there is in British Columbia an area of 65 million acres capable of producing merchantable timber. Mr. R. E. Benedict, of the Forest Branch, stated that the amount of wood annually added to the standing forests through the natural process of growth, is 100 feet per acre. Hence it would appear that 6 1-2 billion feet of timber is being added as interest to the wood capital every year. Mr. Benedict places the value of this growth roughly at $100,000,000 per annum, but benefits in excess of this amount will certainly accrue. At the present time, when only one-quarter of the annual growth is being cut, the returns to the community are over $25,000,000 a year.

SPORTING NEWS

RING.

New York, May 24.—Johnny Dundee does not intend to return to New York until he gets the other half of the feather championship, according to a letter received here from Scotty Monteith, who is looking after Johnny. Dundee is training hard for his fight with Ad Wolgast July 10 and on July 4 will meet Tommy Dixon at Albuquerque, N.M. A match has also been arranged for him at Butte, Montana, Dundee's opponent in the latter bout is yet to be settled.

Gloucester, May 24.—Sandy Ferguson of this city was awarded the decision over Jeff Madden of South Boston in a 10-round bout at the Lenox Athletic Club last night. Many of the crowd thought it should have been a draw. There was a frequent hissing of the Chelsea strong boy, who did but very little fighting.

Kid Reagan of Gloucester beat Jack O'Neil in six rounds. Young Bush of Lynn and Young Sullivan of Boston fought four rounds to a draw

BASEBALL.

First Baseman Konetchy of the St. Louis Dardinals has made only one error in something like 400 chances thus for this season. That one error was the dropping of a foul fly, with two out in the ninth, a hit following immediately thereafter, and costing St. Louis the game.

Announcement was made in Atlanta last week that Catcher DeVoght of the Braves had been secured by that club. How the story started, no one seems to know. DeVoght went to Buffalo, not to Atlanta.

Bridgeport, May 24. — Bridgeport baseball fans are making elaborate plans for a "Keating" day in New York on June 5, when every loyal Bridgeport man will journey over the Metropolis and to the Polo grounds to do honor to young Ray Keating, just at present the premier pitcher with the Highlanders. Keating is a Bridgeport boy, although making his first reputation as a ball player with the Lawrence club of the New England League, and he always spends his winters here. Subscription papers are now being circulated and already 500 have agreed to take tickets on the "Keating" special, which will carry the local party to New York and return.

Clark Griffith who has just secured Pitcher Mullin from Detroit, refused to waive on the veteran when Detroit was thinking about getting rid of him last season, just before George put in that sensational pitching stunt down in St. Louis.

Boston, May 23.—The work of the Yale baseball team with its fifteen straight victories continues the feature of the season among Eastern colleges.

The team has set a record for consecutive victories in intercollegiate competition, and has an unquestioned lead for the unofficial championship.

Brown, regarded as Yale's most serious contender for championship honors, will meet the blue again this week. A close contest is expected with Brown trying to retrieve a previous defeat.

Aside from the Yale-Brown game probably the most important game of the week is that at Philadelphia Monday, when Harvard and Pennsylvania will play their contest, postponed from Saturday.

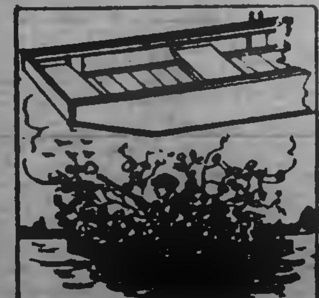
FOR DUCK HUNTERS

How to Successfully Deceive the Elusive Bird

Every duck hunter requires a blind so that he can go out into the open and wait for the elusive bird. The man who hasn't a blind can easily construct one by using a flat bottomed boat or punt as a basis for his structure. The one shown in the illustration is an excellent shape to follow. It is 15 feet long, 4 feet wide and about 20 inches deep in the centre and can be rowed from either end with the additional advantage of having plenty of room for the hunter to lie down. The sides are made with board held together with battens on the inside of the boat near the ends and at the middle. Two pins are driven in the top of each side board to be used as row locks. The bottom is made of matched boards 5 inches wide nailed to the side pieces and to a keel strip which runs the length of the boat inside, with galvanized nails. These boards should be placed as closely together as possible, with white lead liberally applied to the joints. Before nailing, place strips of lamp wick between them and the side boards.



On the inside of the boat along the tops of the side boards nail a narrow strip of wood, lathing will do, held away from the side with small cleats. A similar strip should be placed near the bottom.

When ready to be placed in commission as a blind, reeds or weeds similar to those growing in the river or pond frequented by the ducks should be stuck under these strips all around the boat, [illegible] a complete screen. It is well to anchor the blind out in the river and keep it there for some time during the duck season so that the ducks can become accustomed to seeing it.

Modern Egg Tester

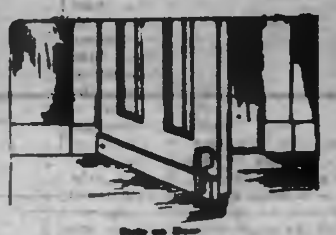
An egg tester employing an electric lamp is so arranged that the light is switched on only when an egg is in position, thereby saving current.

TO STOP DRAFTS

How to Keep the Wind From Beneath the Door

When the wind is whistling under the doors there is more or less trouble in keeping drafts out of the house. This is especially true in case of a house where the floor is a little out of plumb through the uneven settling of the house. A strip nailed on the door often projects too far down to allow the door to be opened wide, because the floor rises slightly away from the sill.

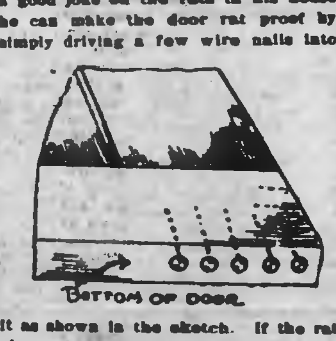
This can easily be cared for by fastening a strip of wood three-quarters of an inch thick and three inches wide, with one screw to the inner edge of the door and making a small bracket to go on the outer edge into which the wooden strip is placed. Then when the door is opened the strip simply rises with the unevenness of the floor in the manner shown in the sketch.



Strip on Door

ANTI-RAT-NAIL-FENCE WILL KEEP RATS OUT

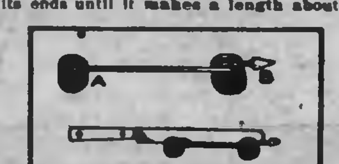
It is a peculiarity of rats that when they gnaw a hole through a door they usually select one of the corners and most times this is a lower corner. If the owner of the door wants to play a good joke on the rats in his house he can make the door rat proof by simply driving a few wire nails into it as shown in the sketch. If the rat plague is very bad in his house he can extend the row of nails all the way across the bottom of the door and up the side as far as he thinks the danger lies. Rats have very sharp teeth, but there is no rat yet discovered that can gnaw through a fence of nails. The door will not be marred in the least by this operation.



POTATO PARER

Here is One That Will Fit Any Knife

There are many economical housekeepers who weep at the losses they suffer through the improper paring of vegetables and yet insist that the patent parers are not nearly so good for the purpose as the old fashioned knife. Here is a way to fix an ordinary knife so that it becomes a potato parer of the highest order. Secure a length of steel wire and coil its ends until it makes a length about 1 inch shorter than the blade of an ordinary table knife. When finished you will have a hard straight piece of wire connecting two coils. Push the blade of the knife between the coils near the straight piece and you have a parer. If you care to leave an end of the wire out and can shape it to a point, you also have a handy tool for removing the eyes from potatoes with little loss.



THE POULTRYMAN

Should be Conscientious and Careful, a Good Student and Observer

The man managing any business enterprise is really responsible for the success or failure of that enterprise. Successful poultry keeping is no exception of the rule. It is a business of details, and an efficient poultryman should be careful of paying close attention to details. It is lack of this one quality more than of any other which has doubtless caused most of the numerous failures in this work.

The poultryman should be conscientious and careful in this work and a good student and observer. He should make a close study of the habits and conditions of his various flocks, and should try to make the individual as much as possible the unit of study. He should be willing to try new ideas, and to profit by the experience of others.

Poultry keeping is to-day in its infancy as an art when compared with the other branches of animal husbandry, and new thoughts and improved methods of feeding, housing, and breeding are constantly being brought forward. [illegible] are [illegible] making progress," and pro[illegible] makes greater profit.

It is important to remember that success in a business requiring constant thought and attention to the various details of management calls for a natural aptitude or liking for the occupation. With this natural love for the work, and a good practical training the production of market eggs should bring a satisfactory return on the money invested. Phenomenal profits should not be expected.

GRACE'S SACRIFICE

Girl Cashier Starts Misguided Office Boy on Street Called Straight.

BY FRANK FILSON.

Fifty dollars missing! Grace Boyce, cashier and secretary of the downtown office of the Allen Manufacturing company, stood staring in a dazed way into the money drawer of the high screened desk that was her post of duty.

All her pride and esteem went down in a kind of a crash at this, the first blow in her pleasant business career. Never before during her two years' service with the company had her cash been short. The mysterious thing about it was that she could not explain the circumstance.

She had tallied off her cash balance at noon the day previous. Then she had gone to the bank. She had returned and filled the pay envelopes for the factory hands. At four o'clock, as was usual, young Alden Morris, son of the president of the company, had arrived to take the pay roll to the factory in his automobile.

Grace very distinctly remembered that incident. A slight flush tinged her fair cheeks as she thought of it. Whenever the young man visited the office life seemed to brighten up. Then after the day's work Grace had placed the cash box in the safe and had gone over the books.

"I never let the handbag out of my sight from the bank to the office," she reflected. "Then I placed it for a moment on Jerry's desk while I put my wraps away. Oh, yes, I remember—the bag snapped open. But it was only a minute, and I gathered it up and took it into the cage with me."

Because of the minute she tabulated Grace mechanically walked over to the little desk that was the post of the office boy, Jerry Lang. She stood racking her brain anew, trying to figure things out. Suddenly she gave a start, leaned over, and from the tiny ink tray on the desk took up a long, thick pin.

"A bank pin!" she fluttered—"not another in the tray like it, and—oh, dear, I'm afraid I see it all!"

Grace made a spasmodic dive for a crumpled-up wad of paper lying among the litter of cards and penholders. She opened it, smoothing out the conventional bank strip used in binding packages of currency together. It had "$50" printed across it, the date of the day previous, and the initials of the bank where the company did business.

He Looked Wretchedly Worried.

It was all plain to Grace now. She grew quite pale. Then she almost cried. Then she kept watching for the arrival of Jerry. He slouched in half an hour later. He looked wretchedly worried. Something was wrong with him—Grace saw that at a glance.

"Jerry," she called, and beckoned him past the doorway of one of the inner offices. He darted a frightened glance at her, but obeyed her call. "Sit down," she said, closing the door. "I have something to say to you."

"I can't do any errands," blurted out Jerry. "I—I'm going to leave, Miss Boyce. You see—"

"No, Jerry," interrupted Grace, "you are not going to leave until you tell me all about the fifty dollars you took out of my handbag yesterday."

Jerry tried to face his accuser defiantly. Then he broke down. He gulped, writhed and sobbed.

"I didn't take it out of your handbag," he declared. "It rolled out on the floor. Oh! I wish I was dead. I don't know what I did it for."

"What did you do with the money?" inquired Grace.

"I met some fellows. I went with them to a pool room. I lost it all, and—don't send me to jail!" he pleaded, falling to his knees. "Don't tell my mother—it will kill her! Give me a chance. I'll slave, dig, work nights to pay it back—"

"Not here, Jerry," said Grace softly, but sternly. "You cannot be trusted where there is money around. Jerry, I have thought out what I am going to do for you. I shall get you another place. I shall have to pay that fifty dollars out of my own little savings. What will you promise if I make this sacrifice for you?"

Jerry moaned and bawled. Here and there amid his incoherent sobbings a streak of the real Jerry came out, and Grace ended up the interview in a brief talk. At the end of it the contrite office boy declared she had saved him from an abyss and [illegible] would be "true blue!"

Jerry went back to his desk. Grace with a sigh drew a check against her little savings account, [illegible] Mrs. Lang, and hoped she was acting for the best. She was a little surprised when young Mr. Morris entered the office a few minutes later. They chatted for awhile. Then Grace asked him to give Jerry a place at the factory.

Two months went by. Every Saturday evening Jerry called upon Grace at her boarding house. On each occasion he had humbly offered her a [illegible] of his salary, which she declined [illegible] will soon be better able to [illegible] something if you keep on as [illegible] as you have started," she encouraged him.

"How do you know that I am, Miss Boyce?" he asked.

"Mr. Morris tells me about you whenever he comes to the office," explained Grace.

"He's good as gold, he is," stated Jerry, enthusiastically. "He's always just glad to advise me and show me how to do things. He advanced me last week. And he always speaks of you, Miss Boyce, as gentle like and interested," and Grace had to turn away her head to hide the hot, quick blushes that came to her face.

The last day of the fiscal year a letter was handed to Grace by the office manager. It was from the president of the company, and it inclosed a check for two hundred dollars—"for faithful services," the letter read, "the amount to be duplicated as an advance in salary for the coming year."

Grace was regarding it, dreaming over what the unexpected windfall would mean to her, when a smiling face pressed close to the netted wire.

"I heard about that," spoke Alden Morris. "You deserve it, Miss Boyce."

"What will I ever do with so much money?" inquired Grace in pretty, affected dismay.

"Will you let me advise you?" asked young Morris, quite earnestly, and stepping into the cage.

"I—I should be glad—why, yes," stammered Grace, something in the impressive manner of the speaker setting her heart in a strange flutter.

"Then," said Alden, lowering his voice to a tender whisper, "buy yourself a wedding outfit."

"A wedding outfit?" repeated Grace in a gasp.

"That is," smiled Alden, "if you will have me for a husband. Listen, Miss Boyce—Grace. You and I have been sharing some work together. I mean Jerry, you know. I was in the inner office the day you so nobly sacrificed your little earnings to save the boy. I have been co-operating with you ever since. He is going to be a credit to both of us. Won't you continue the delightful partnership, dear?"

Grace could not say him nay, and the guest at the wedding who congratulated them with honest tears in his eyes, was the misguided boy they had started on the street called Straight.

TESTS OF COURAGE

The custom of courage tests at initiations originated away back in the Dark Ages when the average secret society had for its main purpose the extinction of some particular individual, or set of individuals. It put the personal courage of every candidate to the test. It was necessary that he be courageous, that he be capable of withstanding everything from the thumbscrews to the gallows. The revelation of a society's secrets a few hundred years ago would have meant death to every member of the organization. Brave men were essential. "Riding the goat" is nothing more or less than a test of courage. To the spectators, it is funny; to the candidate, serious. The spectators know the goat isn't apt to create any wide havoc; the candidate does not. He has only external evidence by which to judge. The goat may stumble sometimes—in fact, it does. Only in the more ritualistic orders does "goat-riding" in all its various forms still retain a certain solemnity of purpose. The idea is to test the candidate's confidence in his fellow-members. He is assured, first of all that no harm will come to him. Then he is plunged into the midst of seeming danger. He is allowed to touch a huge steel shield, with sharp spikes projecting from it at a hundred points. The shield is laid on the floor. The candidate is led to a platform six feet above it, and told to jump down—on the shield. He does. The shield proves to be rubber. All is well. The candidate has proved his faith in his fellows. Again—The candidate is bound hand and foot. A hot iron is brandished in front of him. He is informed that it is to be stamped on his back. He feels it. He smells burning flesh. He protests, perhaps—and is shown a chunk of ice, together with a piece of burned beefsteak.

DROP INDIAN NAMES

English and Scotch Cognomens Used By Manitoba Red Men.

Mr. J. K. L. Ross, who went on a hunting expedition into the wilds some 150 miles north of Winnipeg, Manitoba, says that the Indians of the Fisher River reserve are those who were removed north from Selkirk some twelve or thirteen years ago, and they appear to be doing very well, fishing and farming. Most of them, although they appear to be full-blooded, have English and Scotch names; some of them explaining that they had been adopted into families of Old Country origin.

For instance, Mr. Ross met a man at the Fisher River mission named Andrew Macpherson, who lives in a house, teaches school, and is an Anglican by religious faith. Two others, whose respective names were Robert Ross and Jacob Thomas, appeared to be about as nearly full-blooded as could be expected.

Window Washing

Windows must be washed and there is nothing quite so chilling as the water that runs down from the window brush when the outside of the panes is being washed in the winter. Let the window washer secure a disk of leather cut from the sole of an old shoe, or a piece of rubber from a tire casing, or anything that is stiff enough to [illegible] the broom handle. Make a hole in [illegible] disk that will permit it to fit tightly around the broom handle and slide it up to a point about 10 or 12 inches from the brush. This will deflect the water and keep the remainder of the handle dry.

LEAV[illegible]ON CHURCH

Anglicans at Victoria Abandon Old Landmark of Pioneer Days

A notable event in the history of the Anglicans in the west is the passing of the old "Iron Church" of St. John, at Victoria, B.C. The building which the congregation left for a magnificent new Church of St. John, is indissolubly connected with the memory of that charitable woman, the Baroness Burdett-Coutts. She it was who presented the Church, the iron pieces of which were brought to the west by Bishop George Hills, who travelled around the Horn and arrived in Victoria only to find that the Hudson's Bay Company had been before him and had built a church on what is now [illegible] Cathedral Hill, and which had received the dignified title of Cathedral.

The bishop thereupon surrendered the church for [illegible] purposes. A lot was bought from the Hudson's Bay company for the small sum of about $300. Recently the same site passed back into the hands of the Hudson's Bay Co., but this time for the slightly different sum of $150,000.

The sacred edifice was consecrated by Bishop Hills on September 13, 1860, receiving the name of St. John the Divine. The first rector of the church was Rev. R. J. Dundas, who remained in charge from 1860 to 1865.

TENDERS.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for purchase of site and buildings, Peterborough, Ont.," will be received at this office until 4.00 P.M., on Thursday, June 5, 1913, for the purchase of site and buildings thereon, situate on south-east corner of George and Charlotte streets, and having an approximate frontage on those streets as follows: 80 feet on George street, and 114 feet on Charlotte street, Peterborough, Ont.

The party whose tender is accepted must make payment as follows: $5,000 cash down when offer is accepted and balance in two equal instalments at intervals of six (6) weeks each, with interest of 6 p.c. per annum.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque for $100 on a chartered bank payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into an agreement as before mentioned.

Possession of site and buildings to be given by 1st September, 1913.

Intending purchasers will receive all necessary information on application to the undersigned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the highest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary.
Department of Public Works,
Ottawa, May 17th, 1913.

SEPARATE SEALED TENDER addressed to the undersigned, will be received until 4.00 p.m., Monday, June 23, 1913, for the following works on the New Barracks property Long Branch, near Toronto, Ont., viz.—

(1) Water Works pipe laying. (2) Sewer pipe-laying. (3) Pump House, Filter House and Reservoir. (4) Foundations for Water Tower. (5) Steel water tower and supports. (6) Water Works Intake Pipe and Well. (7) Sewage Pumping Station. (8) Sewage Disposal Works. (9) Bridges or Viaducts.

Each tender must be sent in a separate envelope and endorsed "Tender for Waterworks pipe laying, New Barracks, Toronto, Ont.," "Tender for Sewer pipe laying, New Barracks Toronto, Ont.," etc., as the case may be.

Each person or firm may tender for any number or all of the above works but a separate tender must be submitted for each work. (No bulk or conditional tender will be entertained.)

Plans, specification and forms of contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained at the office of Messrs. Chipman and Power, Engineers, Mail Building, Toronto, Ont., and at this department.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent (10 p.c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary.

BRITAIN LEADS IN NAVAL POWER

Line-up of the Six Great European Powers Shows Her Apparently Safe Position

There is much food for reflection and many interesting comparisons to be drawn from figures contained in a return issued by the British Admiralty regarding the naval resources of the six leading European Powers. In carefully prepared tables is set down the exact effective sea fighting strength of Great Britain, Germany, France, Italy, Russia, and Austro-Hungary.

Exclusive of dreadnoughts, battle cruisers, armored, protected, or unprotected cruisers on the stocks, and without including 20 torpedo boat destroyers and four torpedo vessels in the yards of the builders, England's mighty fleets, according to the report, totalled 557 ships of all classes, every one of which was ready for sea at once or at least within a few hours' notice.

There were 55 battleships and four battle cruisers of the Indomitable class, "mystery ships," as they are termed, 34 comparatively fast armored cruisers, 18 protected cruisers of the first class, 38 protected cruisers of the second class, 16 protected cruisers of the third class, five unprotected cruisers, eight scout vessels, 26 torpedo vessels including special vessels such as depot ships, 179 torpedo boat destroyers, 109 torpedo boats and 66 submarines.

Ranged up alongside the British figures in the report were those of Germany which was shown to have 23 completed battleships, 2 battle cruisers, 9 armored cruisers, 36 second class cruisers, 11 of the third class, 6 unprotected cruisers, 109 torpedo boat destroyers, 80 torpedo boats and 13 submarines, the entire fleet of the Fatherland aggregating 289 vessels not including 50 building to the 75 vessels in the hands of British shipbuilders.

France's Big Navy

It will perhaps come as a surprise to the majority of people to learn that the war fleet of France is just over 60 per cent. larger than that of Germany, the Republic being credited with 21 battleships, 21 armored cruisers, 5 protected cruisers, 4 second class armored cruisers, 6 third class cruisers, 2 torpedo vessels, 66 torpedo boat destroyers, 161 torpedo boats, nearly as many as Great Britain's and Germany's combined, and 55 submarines.

HE'S CALLED TOM

Finance Minister's First Name Not Familiar to Many

Hon. W. T. White was not elected in Leeds: at least, Wesley Thomas White was not. This amusing and somewhat interesting mistake has come to light.

Mr. White was christened Wesley Thomas. Somehow, his name on the electoral lists of Leeds appeared as William Thomas, and the minister was gazetted as William Thomas, and his name is recorded as such in the parliamentary guide. Now it has been discovered that the name is Wesley not William.

Mr. White was the first to discover the curious mistake.

In regard to the sale of SANOL & SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES, might say I have been handling the goods for about three months. I was obliged to put in SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES to supply one of my customers, who is now completely cured, and whom, I believe, has sent a testimonial to your office. Another customer ordered SANOL and I was obliged to stock it. This gentleman was so well satisfied that he has sent bottles to his friends. Up to this time I had never really taken much interest in the preparations but when customer after customer would come in and tell me about what SANOL had done for them, I came to the conclusion it would be worth my while getting behind SANOL and recommending it to my customers. This I have done and I have heard nothing but words of praise for SANOL and SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES, I am,

Manitoba Grain Elevators

One hundred and seventy-two grain elevators scattered throughout Manitoba, at present the property of the provincial government, will probably pass under the control of the Grain Growers' Association, the farmers' organization which for a number of years past has been active in the grain business. Title to the elevators will continue to be vested in the government, and the company will pay $90,000 a year as rental charges.

MY LADY OF DOUBT

By Randall Parrish.

CHAPTER XVIII—Capt. Grant insists that Lawrence be strung up at once.

CHAPTER XIX—Miss Mortimer appears, explains the mystery and Lawrence is held a prisoner of war, and is again locked in the strong room.

CHAPTER XX — Lawrence escapes through plans arranged by The Lady and sees Grant attack Miss Mortimer.

CHAPTER XXI—Grant is knocked out by Lawrence, who comes to Miss Mortimer's relief, and then makes his escape.

CHAPTER XXII—Captain Grant's base villainy revealed.

CHAPTER XXIII—Lawrence returns to Valley Forge, where he learns more of Grant's perfidy.

"Lawrence? Yes, Sir, Major Lawrence is lying over there by the scrub oak."

I got to my feet, as the first rider approached.

"This you, Lawrence?" asked a voice I instantly recognized as Hamilton's. "You fellows all look alike tonight. Where is your horse, major?"

"I have been on foot all day, sir," I answered saluting.

"Ah, indeed; well, you will have need for a horse tonight. Wainwright," turning to the man with him, "is your mount fresh?"

"Appears to be, sir; belonged to a British dragoon this morning."

"Let Major Lawrence have him. Major, ride with me."

We passed back slowly enough toward the rear of the troops, through the field hospitals, and along the edge of a wood, where a battery of artillery was encamped. We rode back to boot, and Hamilton spoke earnestly.

"The battle is practically won, Lawrence, in spite of Charles Lee," he said soberly. "Of course there will be fighting tomorrow, but we shall have the red-coats well penned in before daybreak, and have already captured ammunition enough to make us easy on that score. Poor, and the Carolina men, are over yonder, while Woodford is moving his command to the left. At dawn we'll crush Clinton into fragments. Washington wants to send a despatch through to Arnold in Philadelphia, and I recommended you, as you know the road. He remembered your service before, and was kind enough to say you were the very man. You'll go gladly?"

"I should prefer to lead my own men tomorrow, sir."

"Pshaw! I doubt if we have more than a skirmish. Sir Henry will see his predicament fast enough. Then there will be nothing left to do, but guard prisoners."

"Very well, colonel; I am ready to serve wherever needed."

"Of course you are, man. There should not be much danger connected with this trip, although there will be stragglers in plenty. I'm told that Clinton lost more than three hundred deserters crossing Camden."

Headquarters were in a single-roomed cabin at the edge of a ravine. A squad of cavalrymen were in front, their horses tied to a rail fence, but within Washington was alone, except for a single aide, writing at a rude table in the light of a half-dozen candles. He glanced up, greeting us with a slight inclination of the head.

"Pardon Me, Sir, but There Are Horsemen Ahead."

"A moment, gentlemen."

He wrote slowly, as though framing his sentences with care, occasionally questioning the aide. Once he paused, and glanced across at Hamilton.

"Colonel, do you know a dragoon named Mortimer?"

"I have no recollection of ever having met the man, sir. I have written him orders, however; he is a scout attached to General Lee's headquarters."

"Yes; I recall the name. He is the one who brought us our first definite information this morning of Clinton's position. I remember now, you were not with me when he rode up—young, slender lad, with the face of a girl. I could but notice his eyes: they were as soft and blue as violets! Well, an hour ago he came here for a favor; it seems the boy is a son of Colonel Mortimer, of the queen's rangers."

"Indeed; Wayne reported the colonel killed in front of his lines."

"Not killed, but seriously wounded. The son asked permission to take him home to a place called Elmhurst near Laurel Hill."

"I know the plantation, sir," I said, my interest causing me to interrupt. "It is on the Medford road."

"Ah, you have met the lad, possibly, major," and he turned his face toward me. "The boy interested me greatly."

"No, sir; I endeavored to find him at Lee's headquarters, but failed. I have met his father and sister."

"A lovely girl, no doubt."

"To my mind, yes, sir."

His grave face lighted with a sudden smile.

"I sometimes imagine, Colonel Hamilton," he said quietly, "that this unhappy war might be very pleasantly concluded if we could only turn our young officers over to the ladies of the enemy. Would such a plan meet with your approval, major?"

"I should prefer it to the present method."

"No doubt, and Mistress Mortimer? —But let that pass, until we hold council of war upon the subject. Just now we shall have to be content with the more ordinary plans of campaign. I gave the boy permission to remove his father, and they are upon the road ere this. I would that all the British wounded had homes close at hand. You have informed the major of his mission, I presume, Hamilton, and there is nothing I need add."

"He understands clearly, sir."

"Then I will complete the letter. Be seated, gentlemen."

He wrote for several minutes steadily, once pausing to consult a map, signed the paper, and enclosed it in another sheet, across which he scratched a line of address.

"You will deliver this to General Arnold in person, major; do not spare horse-flesh. You were in the action today?"

"With Maxwell's brigade."

"That was a hard fight along the stone wall; you came out unhurt?"

"A slight bayonet wound, sir; nothing to incapacitate me from duty."

"Very well; take ten dragoons as escort. Hamilton will write you an order. I have told Arnold our victory is practically complete. Clinton may slip away in the night, for he is a wily old fox, but he has lost his power to injure us in the Jerseys. I hope to bottle him up before morning, so that any retreat will be impossible, but even if he succeeds in getting his army to the transports at Sandy Hook, he has lost prestige, and the victory is ours. Good-bye, major, and the Lord guard you on your journey."

Ten minutes later, mounted on a rangy sorrel, my dragoon escort trotting behind, I rode south on the Plainsboro road, as swiftly as its terrible condition would warrant.

The evidences of war, the wreckage of battle, were everywhere. Several times we were compelled to leap the stone walls to permit the passage of marching troops being hurried to some new position; several batteries passed us, rumbling grimly through the night, and a squadron of horse galloped by, the troopers greeting us with shouts of inquiry.

We took to the fields, but, as there seemed no end to the procession, I turned my horse's head eastward, confident we were already beyond the British rear-guard, and struck out across country for another north and south road. We advanced now at a swift trot, the sound of our horses' hoofs on the soft turf almost the only noise, and, within an hour, came again to parallel fences, and a well travelled road.

This was the road running a mile, or so, to the west of Elmhurst. It led as straight as any, toward Philadelphia, but whatever stragglers the British army had left behind would be found along here. However, they would probably be scattered fugitives, unwilling to interfere with as strong an armed party as this of mine. If I was alone it would be safer to turn aside. Then, it was a strong temptation to me to pass thus close to Elmhurst. It would be after daylight when we reached there; I might even get a glimpse across the apple orchard of the great white house. Would Claire be there? It seemed to me quite probable, as Eric was taking the wounded colonel home for nursing. The girl's face rose before me against the black night, and my heart beat fast. When I came back, I would ride to Elmhurst—surely she would be there then.

The sergeant touched my arm.

"Pardon me, sir, but there are horsemen ahead."

"Indeed? I was lost in thought, Conroy. Coming this way?"

"No, sir, they seem to be traveling south slowly. I noticed them first as we turned the corner back there; I could see outlines against the sky."

"How large a party? They form merely a lumping shadow to my eyes."

"Not more than three or four, sir, with a covered rig of some kind. They're halted, now; heard us coming, I reckon."

I could perceive the little group, but merely as a black smudge. Then a mounted figure seemed to detach itself from the darkness and advance toward us.

"Halt your men, sergeant," I said quietly. "I'll ride forward and learn what the fellow wants."

CHAPTER XXVII.

The Escort.

The figure of the man approaching was hardly distinguishable, as he appeared to be leaning well forward over the saddle pommel, yet my eyes caught the glimmer of a star along a pistol barrel, and I drew up cautiously, loosening my own weapon.

"Who comes?" he questioned shortly, the low voice vibrant. "Speak quick!"

"An officer with dispatches," I answered promptly, "riding to Philadelphia—and you?"

"We are taking a wounded man home," was the reply, the speaker riding forward. "Are you Continental?"

"Yes. Major Lawrence, of Maxwell's Brigade."

"Oh!" the exclamation was half smothered, the rider drawing up his horse quickly. I could distinguish the outline of his form now, the straight, slender figure of a boy, wearing the tight jacket of a dragoon, the face shadowed by a broad hat brim.

"Unless I mistake," I ventured cordially, "you must be Eric Mortimer."

"Why do you suppose that?"

"Because while at General Washington's headquarters he mentioned that you had asked permission to take your father—Colonel Mortimer, of the Queen's Rangers—to his home at Elmhurst. You left, as I understand, an hour or two ahead of us. Am I right?"

"Yes, sir; this is Colonel Mortimer's party."

"Then we will pass on without detaining you longer, as we ride in

"Merely That I am Claire Mortimer," and Lifting the Hat, the Young Rider Was Revealed as My Lady.

haste. I met your father once; may I ask if his wound is serious?"

"Serious, yes, but not mortal; he was shot in the right side when Monkton fell. His horse was hit at the same time, and the animal's death struggles nearly killed his rider. The surgeon says he may be lame for life."

I reached out my hand, and with just an instant's hesitation, he returned the clasp warmly.

"My father is suffering too much for me to ask that you speak to him, Major Lawrence," he said a little stiffly. "Perhaps later, at Elmhurst—"

"I understand perfectly," I interrupted. "I am very glad to have met you. We shall ride within a short distance of Elmhurst. Shall I leave word there that you are coming?"

"Oh, no," quickly, his horse taking a step backward, as though to a sudden tug of the rein. "That would be useless, as there is no one there."

"Indeed! I thought possibly your sister."

The lad shook his head, glancing toward the carriage. The slight motion made me think again of the wounded man we were detaining, and reminding me as well of my own duty.

"Then, good-night, sir. Sergeant, we will trot on."

The lad touched my sleeve, even as I pricked my horse with the spur, and I drew the rein taut in surprise.

"What is it?"

"Could you send your men forward, and ride with me a moment? You could catch up with them easily within a mile or two. I—I have a word I wish to say to you—alone."

The voice was low, tremulous; the request one I saw no reason to refuse.

"Why, certainly. Sergeant, take your men down the road at an easy trot. I will join you presently."

They went by us like shadows, leaving a cloud of dust behind. The boy spoke a brief word to those in charge of the carriage, and it also began to move slowly forward.

"We will go ahead," he said, suiting the action to the word. "What I wish to say will not take long."

Within a minute, riding side by side, our horses walking rapidly, we were out of sight of the lumping shadow of the ambulance. I glanced aside curiously at my companion, noting the outlines of his slender, erect figure, wondering vaguely what his message could be. Had Claire spoken to him of me? Was he going to tell me about his sister? We must have ridden a quarter of a mile before he broke the silence.

"Major Lawrence," he began, and I noticed the face was not turned toward me. "I am sure you are not deceived, although you act the part well."

"I hardly understand."

"Oh, but I am sure you do. I—I could not permit you to go away despising me."

"But, my boy, this is a mystery—"

"Do you mean to insist you do not know—have not recognized me?"

"I—what can you mean?"

"Merely that I am Claire Mortimer," and lifting the hat, the young officer was revealed in the dim light as my lady. "Surely you knew?"

"But I did not," I insisted, earnestly, recovering from my surprise, and leaning forward to look into her face. "Why should I? General Washington told me it was Eric who came for his father. Why should I suspect in this darkness?"

"I—I represented myself as Eric," she stammered.

"And was it you also who rode into our lines yesterday, telling of Clinton's whereabouts?"

"Yes," hesitatingly, her eyes lifting to my face.

"But you must listen to me, Major Lawrence; you must learn why I did so unwomanly an act."

"First answer one question."

"Gladly."

"Is there an Eric Mortimer?"

"There is," she answered frankly; "my brother. It was for his sake I did all this."

A moment I sat in my saddle silently, our horses walking side by side through the night, while I endeavored to grasp the meaning of her confession. I knew that she was riding bareheaded, her face turned away.

"Go on," I said at last, "tell me the whole story."

"I will," firmly, her head uplifted. "I was tempted to do so at Elmhurst, but something seemed to seal my lips. There is now no longer any excuse for silence. I—I wish you to know, and, then, perhaps, you may feel more kindly disposed toward me."

"Your father is aware—"

"No, not even father. He is scarcely conscious of what is going on about him. Peter knows, and Tecumseh," with a wave of her hand into the dark shadows.

"They are with you, then—keeping guard over him?"

"Yes; they have known from the beginning; not everything, of course, for that was not necessary. Peter is an old servant, silent and trustworthy. He would never question an act of mine, while the Indian has reason to be grateful and loyal to me. Whatever indiscretion, Major Lawrence, I may have been guilty of, I have gone nowhere unaccompanied by those two. You will believe that?"

"Yes, and whatever else you tell me."

"That, now, must necessarily be the entire story. As I proceed you will be convinced, I think, that only a true confidence in you would enable me to speak with such frankness. I—I know of no one else in whom I could confide, and—and the time has come when I must have help—the help of a friend. I should have explained to my father—indeed intended to do so —but now he is helpless to aid me. There is no one else I feel able to trust, I—I—you were in my thoughts to-night; I—I am not sure I did not even pray for your coming, and—and then God sent you."

My hand sought hers, and held it against my horse's mane.

"Tell it in your own way, dear," I whispered.

She flashed one glance into my face, leaving her hand in mine, while our horses took a dozen strides.

"It will not take long," she began, in so low a voice, that I leaned forward to listen, "and you already know many of the characters and can judge their motives. I have been strangely situated since the commencement of this war, only, surely ours is not the only family divided in its loyalty. My father was a King's officer, and felt it his duty to serve the crown. While he has said little, yet I know that down in his heart his sympathies have been with the Colonies. Those of my brother were openly from the start, and my father has never attempted to interfere with his actions. They talked it all over together, and Eric chose his own course. Only Alfred Grant made trouble, presuming on what he termed our engagement, and endeavored to force my brother to join the King's troops. The two quarreled bitterly, and Eric, a hot-headed boy, struck him. Grant has never forgiven that blow, nor Eric's influence over me. To the latter he attributes my dislike—yet this was not true; it was because as I grew older I realized the ill character of the man."

She paused a moment, gathering the threads of thought more closely. I did not speak, preferring she should tell the story in her own way.

Fifty Years Without Illness

Mr. Andrew Masterton was honored by his firm, A. Jeffrey & Co., engineers and shipbuilders, Alloa, Scotland, on the occasion of his having completed fifty years' service as a ship carpenter. Mr. Masterton, who is a native of Newburgh, in Fife, was presented with a gold watch, and seal, with suitable inscription. Mr. Masterton, who is still in charge of the graving dock, is hale and hearty, and during the fifty years he has never lost a day through illness.

Result of Police Court Case.

An old gentleman of this city who is not distinguished for his affability and good nature, and who recently charged a respected citizen with assault, was in a local bar yesterday. He ordered ale and laid his historic walking stick on the counter. As his glass was served, he picked up the cane with a flourish. Two citizens standing near him ducked for cover. However, the old gentleman was only anxious to put the ale out of sight so the others escaped.

The Fox Too Foxy for Christie.

A Havelock despatch says : After catching a beautiful silver grey fox, Mr. Thos. Christie, who resides two miles east of Indian river in Asphodel township, placed it in a cage but apparently not secure enough, for the next morning when he went out to see his newly acquired pet, the animal had escaped during the night. Mr. Christie had traps set for some ground hogs and on Sunday on going to see if he had caught any, found the fox. He was quite elated at his catch, but his chagrin and disappointment can easily be imagined when he found that the animal had made good its escape. A silver grey fox alive is worth from $1,000 to $10,000.

GIRLISH COMPLEXION NOW EASILY ACQUIRED

"A skin of blended snow, cream and rose" is the way an Ohio correspondent describes her newly acquired complexion. She is one who has adopted mercolized wax in place of cosmetics, massage, steaming and other methods. Many who have tried this marvelous wax report that its effects are quite different from those of any other treatment. It produces a complexion of exquisite girlish naturalness, rather than one bearing evidence of having been artificially "made over." One that is indeed "Nature's own," the result of gradually absorbing dead particles of surface skin, permitting the younger, healthier skin beneath to show itself and giving its pores a chance to breathe. Mercolized wax, procurable at any drug store in original one ounce package, is put on at night like cold cream and washed off in the morning.

I have also had many favorable letters from those who have tried the wrinkle-removing face bath which I recommended recently. If any have mislaid the formula, here it is: 1 oz. powdered saxolite, dissolved in ½ pt. witch hazel.—Julia Orff, in The Clubwoman.

The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon from the family residence to the Sacred Heart Church and to St. Peter's cemetery.

Blinding Headaches From Catarrhal Irritation Now Quickly Cured

The New Inhaler Breathing Treatment Does Away With All This Sort of Thing.

"A stuffy cold in the head, or an old fashioned attack of Catarrh are simply ancient history to me nowadays," writes G. Nathan Smith, from Cornwall, Ont. "I used to have the worst kind of splitting headaches. They were torture to me on damp days when my catarrh was bad. I would still perhaps be suffering but for the fact that I saw a friend inhaling Catarrhozone with apparent pleasure, and I got the dollar outfit in the Windsor Hotel Pharmacy in Montreal. I could scarcely believe the way Catarrhozone cleared out my head. It let me breathe easier than I had breathed for five years. Catarrhozone has cleared away every vestige of Catarrh from my system. My breath used to be rank—now it is sweet. My digestion was constantly disordered, but since the catarrh is cured I have no stomach trouble. I am a perfectly well man, and Catarrhozone did it all."

For speakers and singers and persons troubled with an irritable throat, bronchitis, asthma, catarrh or la grippe, Catarrhozone is of inestimable value.

The inhaler can be carried in your pocket and may be used at any time or in any place.

Large size, guaranteed, and sufficient for 2 months' use, costs $1 ; smaller size 50c. ; sample size 25c. ; all storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

MAKING THE TELEPHONE LOOK AFTER THE BABY

A Frenchwoman was anxious to have baby sleep in the open air in its carriage, and at the same time she was too busy attending to her household duties to stay by the carriage and be on hand when the child awoke or cried. She secured an old telephone transmitter and connected it with the line running into her house.

She put the transmitter in the carriage so that the baby could not make a sound without transmitting the cry over the line to the house. Then the mother went about her regular duties, pausing once in a while to take down the receiver of her house 'phone to listen to baby.

If only the regular breathing was heard she continued her task; if there was a cry or a crow she was ready to go to the youngster.

Curious Scientific Prediction.

Many people are familiar with the story often told of the great naturalist Cuvier, to the effect that, given a single bone, he could reconstruct the animal to which it belonged. That a somewhat similar law of organization runs through the various species that form families in the animal world is indicated by a quaint case of scientific prediction to which attention has again been called.

It appears that Ehrenberg, when engaged in a study of the minute animals called diatoms, found that many species were distinguished by the number of rays they possessed. In the series of specimens that he had, however, he could find none having, respectively, 27, [illegible], 30, 31, 37, 39, 41, 42, 44, 45, 46, 48 and 49 rays. Still he predicted that the missing species would some day turn up. This prediction has been verified; for ten of them have since been discovered, leaving only three to be accounted for.

Well Worth Holding.

A corner lot on Queen street west, Toronto, was sold after having been more than sixty years in the Millichamp family possession. The Millichamp family got the property about 1851 at less than $5,000, and the sale price was just a trifle under $200,000. The property has a frontage of 32 feet 11 inches, with a depth of 130 feet.

Findlay & Howard, Limited, 211-213 Notre Dame Street, West, ... Montreal

THE ST. LAWRENCE INVESTMENT & TRUST COMPANY.

was incorporated by act of the Quebec Legislature, 5 Ed. VII, Chap. 78, in 1905, having for its object the extending and absorption of the St. Lawrence Investment Society. This Society, formed in 1895, carried on a successful business on a small scale, paying regular annual dividends varying from 5 p.c. to 15 p.c. and the assets gave the shares of the Society a value of about $150 at its absorption. The Charter under which the new Company is organized is a valuable one, it being difficult to obtain a Charter of like character. The powers conferred by it are wide and give an opportunity for the transaction of a profitable business.

FUTURE OF THE COMPANY.

The new Company will do business on a much larger scale than the old Company, will operate largely in the owning of, buying and selling of well selected real estate, in the development of tracts of land in the City and its suburbs by selling same as Factory Sites and building lots, and in the purchase of agreements of sale, a business very profitably engaged in, in Toronto, Winnipeg, Calgary, Vancouver and other Cities. The purchasing of agreements of sale has not, to any extent, been carried on in Montreal, and it is intended that this Company pay particular attention to this Branch, which shows even better opportunities of profit, with a larger margin of safety, than those of the West, inasmuch as the values of Real Estate in Montreal are more firmly based.

FIELD OF OPERATION

The operations of the Company will be confined chiefly to the City and District of Montreal and there is no city which offers the same advantages to Investors seeking safety with large returns. Montreal's commercial supremacy in the Dominion is universally known. The population in 1901 was 266,826, and in 1912 611,397. The assessed valuation of Real Estate in 1912 showed an increase of $125,000,000 over the previous year. Montreal is an Island, therefore its area is fixed. Real Estate values, though increasing, are still low, and leave room for great expansion. The City proper covers an area of 18 square miles, the smallest area of any city with the same population in either Canada or the United States.

MANAGEMENT

The Company have appointed Findlay & Howard, Limited, Managers. Mr. Findlay is recognized as one of the foremost judges of Real Estate in Montreal, and the Firm's success is shown in the results of the following companies managed by them, which in addition to placing substantial amounts to reserve have paid dividends as follows :—

Applemount Land Company, Limited,	Incorporated	1909	paid	55 p.c.
Birnam Realty Company, Limited,	"	1910	"	80 p.c.

VOL. XL NO. 123. PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO, TUESDAY MAY 27, 1913 PRICE, TWO CENTS.

THE SENATE MAY ALLOW THE NAVAL BILL TO GO THROUGH

The Upper House fears the Responsibility of Killing The Measure

Ottawa, May 26.—The fate of the Naval Bill will be decided this week This afternoon Senator Lougheed will move the second reading of the measure and will make a long and carefully prepared speech in support of the Borden proposals. Sir George Ross will move the adjournment of the debate until to-morrow when he will outline the position of the Liberal majority in the Upper House.

While it is the general belief that the Liberals in the Senate have definitely decided to amend the bill so that the Government will be unable to accept it and will be dead for the session, still nothing official has been given out by the Senate leaders and rank and file of the members of the Upper Chamber have evidently been sworn to secrecy. There is not a Liberal member of the Senate who ha(yet been found who will allow himself to be quoted or will give out any interview as to the fate of the measure or the stand which will be taken.

May Not Amend Bill.

There are rumors to-day that there may be a big surprise. All the constitutional authorities at the capital are agreed that by a strict interpretation of Parliamentary law the Senate cannot amend a money bill, which the Naval Bill undoubtedly is. The Senate majority might over ride any such ruling, but Sir George Ross is an old Parliamentarian and one who believes in standing firm by constitutional precedent and it is rumored that he will take this view and will not offer an amendment.

In support of this contention a quotation is being made from Sir George Ross' new book, "Getting Into Parliament and After." He says: "The Senate may criticise the financial management of the Government, it cannot alter the supply bill to the extent of a single dollar, though it may reject the whole bill."

Measure May Pass.

The rumor goes that the bill may be sent back to the Commons not with an amendment, but merely with a recommendation that it shall not become law until approved by the people. The House of Commons in that case would reject the recommendation and it is said that the Senate would not take the responsibility of killing the bill and it would be allowed to pass.

The debate in the Senate, it is believed, will not be long. Three days will probably finish the debate so that the bill will be back to the Commons probably by the end of this week.

Senate Reform at Hand

Ottawa, May 26.—In a recent manifesto, the Prime Minister said: "We declare for such reform in the mode of selecting future members of the Senate as will make that chamber a more useful and representative legislative body."

This gave rise to-day to a question from Mr. Sinclair asking if the Government proposed to introduce legislation to give effect to this policy. In reply Mr. Borden stated that the subject was under the House in due course. nouncement would be made to consideration and an an-

A FLYING BOAT

G. H. Curtiss Gives Heavy Machine A Triumphant Trial

Mr. J. M. Brooks, the Provincial agent of the Curtiss Exhibition Co., Hammondsport, Ind., received the following particulars regarding a new machine invented by Mr. Surtiss The despatch says:

"With seven flying-boats and hydroplanes skimming on and over Lake Keuka yesterday, there was practically a water-flying regatta. Harry McCormick's new flying-boat, piloted by Glen. H. Curtiss, was given its initial run, and the big boat showed up finely. Quite a long run was made with four passengers aboard, and the boat seemed almost as fast as with a lighter load. Special features of the new flying boat are, its light weight of more than a ton, its four feet of free board for water CSCSB feet of free board for rough weather work, eight watertight compartments drained by automatic bailers muffled and the starting of a hundred horse power motor designed by Curtiss. Passengers sit in an enclosed cockpit. A transparent wind-shield protects them from the wind and spray. L. G. Peck, vice-president of the Pennsylvania railroad, rode in one of the flying boats and said he thought they would work a revolution in rapid transit of the future."

Can you tell the difference between white bread and

Grape-Nuts
FOOD

You'll promptly discover the reason why tens of thousands now eat a regular morning dish of Grape-Nuts and Cream as the cereal part of breakfast.

White bread and many of the prepared breakfast foods are made of grains from which three-fourths of the most valuable brain-building and health sustaining elements has been removed.

Grape-Nuts food is made of whole wheat and malted barley, milled under scientific supervision and made into crisp, golden granules, rich in well-balancdd nourishment.

At this time of year a dish of Grape-Nuts and cream, as the cereal part of a meal, is especially valuable in meeting the requirements of body and brain.

BOARD OF EDUCATION DOING GOOD WORK

A meeting took place last night for organization of the Industrial, Technical and Art Committee under authority of the Board of Education at the office of the Central Canadian Loan and Savings Co. This Committee consists of six members of the Board, six citizens, of whom three are manufacturers and three employees.

Mr. Vincent Eastwood was elected chairman. The members of the committee are Messrs. Maj. L. M. Hayes E. G. Patterson, Robt. Anson, David Spence, T. H. H. Denne, John Corkery and John Crane, B. F. Ackerman, Dr. Middleton and Col. Miller.

The object of the committee is to have classes both day time and during the evening formed for the purpose of teaching both industrial and technical art. Dr. Merchant has just returned from an eight months' trip abroad, where he investigated conditions in Europe. He will be invited to speak here.

INQUEST LAST NIGHT ON BODY J. A. LIDDELL

Last night an inquest was opened at Comstock's Undertaking establishment to enquire into the death of John A. Liddell, who lost his life at the C.P.R. station on the night of May 23rd. The following jury was sworn in with Mr. John White elected foreman; Jos. Batten, E. W. Morphet, Robt. Nicholl, N. Bibby, Johnston Greer, Albert Bradshaw, John Drummond, John White, Joe Denno, P. McGuire, Jas. Collins, J. McCann.

The Coroner, Dr. Greer, noted that he had been instructed by the Crown Attorney that where death occurs in the construction or operation of a railroad, street or electric railway, the coroner must hold an inquest. The jury then went to the former home of the deceased, 164 Aylmer street and viewed the remains, on their return, Mr. W. Comstock made the necessary oath of identification and P. C. Meagher sworn as to the jury. The inquest was adjourned until 8 p.m. June 2, in the police court.

LOCAL DOCTOR HAS NARROW ESCAPE

Dr. Carmichael, of Brock and Water streets, had a narrow escape yesterday from death, as he had driven his machine in behind Carey and Moher's garage for the purpose of getting some gasoline. He was backing the car up to the pump, when he lost control and the auto struck the pump, breaking the latter off and kept on until it fell over into the excavation that is being made for the addition to the Murty Building. Man and machine dropped 15 feet and eye-witnesses of the accident rushed down expecting to find Dr. Carmichael badly hurt. He was not injured in the least, but the front wheels of the car were smashed off, It will be remembered that Dr. Carmichael, some months ago, whilst driving his car into his own garage, shattered the rear doors of the building.

CONTRACTS FOR HYDRO-ELECTRIC SUPPLIES LET LAST NIGHT

Amounts So Far to $16176.20 for Central City System --Council Decides to Go Ahead With Work at Once--Rear-of-property Service for Commercial Lighting Adopted

The City Fathers met in special session last night, his worship Mayor W. H. Bradburn presiding. There were also present Aldermen McIntyre, Anderson, Langford, Johnston, Green, Duffus, Gordon, Gillespie, Duncan and Buller.

The meeting was called with a view to reaching a decision as to whether the back lane pole line proposition for supplying electric current for commercial purposes in central city should be adopted or not. Extended discussion resulted as follows:

Moved by Ald. Johnston, seconded by Ald. Langford,—That the Hydro-Electric Commission be instructed to proceed with the construction of the underground system for street lighting and the back lane pole line for commercial purposes as outlined by Engineer Jeffery, and that he procure prices for supplies—Carried on a vote of 6—4.

Moved by Ald. Gordon and seconded by Ald. Anderson,—That the Power Committee have authority to hire men, procure tools and rent a store house for the immediate prosecution of the work of the central lighting system as adopted by Council this evening.—Carried.

CONTRACTS AWARDED.

The tender of the C.G.E. for 100 magnetite arc lamps, two transformers and cut-outs at a total of $9,450 was accepted.

The tender of the Canada Pipe and steel Co., Toronto for ornamental combination trolley and light poles at a total of $1,597.20 was accepted.

The tender of the Ornamental Light and Pole Co. of New York for 14 ornamental pillars at $26 each was accepted.

The tender of the Ornamental Light and Pole Co. for 86 lamp brackets at $20 each, was accepted.

The Wm. Hamilton Co., this city, will do the work for the Ornamental Pole Co.

The tender of the Standard Underground Cable Co. for 14,500 feet (approximately) of cable at 21 cents a foot, was accepted.

The above estimates total up to $16,176.20.

THE DISCUSSION.

Eng. Jeffery reported that in regard to the signing of agreements with property owners for the installation of poles in the rear of their properties in Central City for supplying electric current for commercial purposes, the only serious hitch exists with ex-Mayor Morrow, of the Toronto Savings & Loan Co., who insists that the Corporation assumes the present pole agreement between him and the Peterborough Light & Power Co. Mr. Morrow had also hinted (perhaps not seriously) that a rental of from $20 to $25 per pole paid him for pole privileges might be reasonable. Mr. Morrow had said he did not wish to block the city in any way, and advised the city to go ahead with the work and he would arrange a reasonable agreement. Just what shape such an agreement would take he could not at present definitely state. Neither would he divulge for council or city publicly the existing agreement between he and the Peterborough Light & Power Co for pole privileges, although Mr. Jeffery is conversant in confidence, with the terms.

Mr. Jeffery here corrected the Examiner's statement that should an underground system for commercial purposes be constructed in Central city the estimates voted on by the people would be increased. That is not so, he said. The complete underground system would permit of cluster lights as originally intended, still keeping within the estimates. But the magnetite arc lamp is a vast improvement on the cluster Tungsten and can be erected on top of a combination trolley and light pole, answering two services and providing better illumination. Cluster Tungsten lamps cannot be used to advantage on trolley poles because of the vibration. Hence in order to give the city the latest approved street lighting system at the original estimated expenditure, his proposition is to save about by an overhead back-lane line for commercial purposes, and apply that saving to installing magnetite arc lights on ornamental iron combination trolley and light poles, which comes more expensive than the cluster Tungsten lamp system. (The latter of course would leave the present wooden trolley poles where they are). By adopting the present proposition, Mr. Jeffery said, all the present poles on George and Charlotte streets would be removed the number of poles at rear of properties reduced, the trolley wires be transferred to the ornamental lighting poles, street illumination served from underground cables, stores supplied from the rear, and the estimates not exceeded. Should the original scheme be adhered to, there would be two sets of poles on the streets—light and trolley— and the modern magnetite arc lamp abandoned in favor of inferior Tungstens, unless the estimates are exceeded by $9,000 or $10,000. Even were the back lane pole line system abandoned in 10 years and the pavement torn up to lay more underground wires for commercial purposes, the interest at 6 per cent, on the present saving say of $10,000 by installing a rear-of-property pole line would amount to $6,000.

Ald. Gordon here corrected the Labor Federation that there is delay on the part of the Power Committee in dealing with the Hydro-Electric scheme. There is, he contended, no council committee more active than that of power. The telephone has been freely used in connection with the Hydro-Electric Department at Toronto as occasion arose, and all expedition has and is being used. In regard to the pole situation between the city and the Toronto Savings & Loan Co., he offered that council cannot consistently attempt to assume any pole agreement or enter into any pole contracts until such propositions are referred to the Hydro-Electric Commission for approval or rejection. A pole rental of $25 a year, he considered exhorbitant and not to be considered. He took exception to council being tied up by the Toronto Savings & Loan Co. in any way. He favored the back lane scheme as affecting a saving of $9,500 or more, which could be applied to a better lighting system on the streets and removing of crude trolley poles to be substituted by but handsome combination trolley and light poles.

Ald. Johnston pointed out that the agreement with the people was that all poles should come off George and Charlotte streets and street and commercial lighting to be served from underground, and that system must be adopted. The back-lane pole system might be adopted to advantage, but unfortunately that scheme has been blocked from an unexpected source.

The Mayor replied that he thought the situation in regard to the Toronto Savings and Loan Co. would work out all right in the end.

Ald. Buller here asserted that the city cannot pay one landlord more for pole privileges than another. He would not stand on ceremony with the Toronto Savings & Loan Co., who control two half blocks on the territory affected by the back lane scheme. We shall be the only power sellers in Peterborough and Mr. Morrow must then come to us for light for his two half blocks or go without.

Ald. Anderson expressed his endorsation of the back lane scheme.

Ald. Duncan was sorry that the Trades and Labor Council has been misinformed. He said he was never on a committee which worked so hard as the Power Committee had this year.

Ald. Gillespie was prepared to support Engineer Jeffery's proposition in the best interests of the citizens.

To Ald. Duffus, Engineer Jeffery replied that he had no objection to the underground system other than expense. But he did not believe the underground system the best, only in cases where it could not be avoided. Other cities are adopting the rear overhead system for commercial lighting. "This system would get rid of 107 old trolley poles on your main streets."

Ald. Green still thought the proper place for all wires is underground, although the objection to the back lane system is not as strong in his mind as it was. Still in face of Mr. Morrow's stand, he did not like taking definite action on uncertain lines, as would be the case were the back lane scheme proceeded with until a decisive understanding is arrived at between Mr. Morrow and the city.

Ald. Duffus—"For my part I'd sooner the city pay interest on the extra expenditure for a complete underground system, than as the lighting company, assume the risk of future trouble with property owners in regard to pole rights."

ROAD WORK.

Ald. Langford urged immediate attention be given to Water street north, above the G.T.R. track, also to George street from Smith down town.

Ald. Buller replied that if Ald. Langford will have a little patience this work will be taken up.

In acquiescence with the views of the Peterborough Automobile Association, the members for East and West Peterborough will be requested to interest themselves in the matter of persuading the Dominion Government to put the Warsaw road in passable condition. This road is under the control of the Federal Government.

Dr. Neal notified council that the constant running of water from the stand-pipe (for street watering purposes) opposite his premises interferes with his examination of patients, and asked that it be removed if possible. The chairman of the Board of Works was authorized to have this stand-pipe removed to some place where it will not be a nuisance.

Council adjourned at 11.30.

MOUNTED POLICE CHARGED MOB TO RESCUE SYLVIA PANKHURST

Riotious Scenes In London at Suffragette Demonstration Which Mob Broke Up--Men, Women, and Children Fell in Heaps

London, May 26.—Twenty thousand people gathered in Victoria Park yesterday afternoon at a militant suffragette demonstration, and serious disorder followed when Sylvia Pankhurst attempted to speak. The demonstrators, the majority of whom were women and children, wearing garlands and carrying branches in their hands, marched with flags and banners to the park, where speeches were delivered and fifteen platforms, surrounded by standard bearers bearing aloft the red caps symbolizing liberty.

Miss Pankhurst attempted to address the multitude from a wagon when showers of stones were hurled at her, and water from bottles carried by people splashed her face. She still spoke, however, and a few minutes later the vehicle was seized. The wagon was rushed to the gates, but the mounted police galloped to the rescue and charged among the crowd. Amid scenes of great commotion they succeeded in removing the women to a place of safety. Two other wagons and occupants were treated in a similar fashion. Flags and favors of all descriptions were snatched away and torn into shreds. Some of the women struck at the men who laid hands on the side of the vehicle occasionally with their clenched fist.

Everywhere there were indications of the dread which the enormous crowd inspired. Children, who accompanied the procession, shook with terror. Elderly women sought such protection as they could obtain. The police found it necessary to charge the crowd several times, men, women, and children alling into heaps in the panic stricken efforts to avoid the horses' hoofs. Many women fainted. Snatches of ragtime songs mingled with the screams of women and children. The police Inspector who gave the order to charge was violently attacked by the crowd, and was rescued by the police with much difficulty. Miss Pankhurst during the disorders was belabored by women with almond branches.

THIRTY SIX ARE DEAD AT LONG BEACH

Britishers Were There to Celebrate Victoria Day--Disaster Ends Pageant

Long Beach, Cal., May 26 —Prospective damage suits aggregating probably $1,000,000 or more and a Grand Jury investigation, engaged the attention of city officials to-day as the most imminent outcome of the disaster of Saturday, when thirty-six persons lost their lives in the collapse of a portion of the municipal pier just after the close of the British "Empire Cay" pageant.

The list of dead which numbered 33 last night, was added to by the death of Mrs. Bush, Miss Ethel Wyvel and Mrs. M. P. McDonald, who died to-day.

The list is expected to be further increased before the day is out by the death of Miss Margaret Reed, aged 12, of Long Beach, whose back was broken, and of William Cooper, of Pasadena, one of the two veterans of the Crimean War, who were in the van of the Empire Day parade.

Big Pier Was Too Weak.

Too weak to uphold the burden of nearly 10,000 human beings, assembled for the festivities, the land end of the big double deck municipal pier in front of the City Auditorium collapsed. Hundreds of persons on the top deck were plunged down on the heads of other hundreds crowded on the second deck. The lower deck then gave way, and all were dropped down a chute of shattered woodwork to the tide-washed stands twenty-five feet below

GUELPH TRIMMED PETERBORO AT RIVERSIDE PARK, 6—0

A fair crowd of fans turned out yesterday at Riverside Park to witness the game between Guelph and the Petes in a Canadian League fixture. The weather was somewhat cool although the day was mostly bright. The visitors are a husky aggregation, and they managed to pull one over on the Petes in good style.

The game opened in good style, the first two men hitting out, when the third man successfully reached the base, and also the next, then the fire works started. Sargent spotted our reporter in the grand stand and deliberately threw the ball over the catcher's head at him, letting in the first run for Guelph. Again in the third innings they scored another. The Petes tightened up a little then and did not let the visitors score until the eighth, when they got three more, Sargent again figuring in the scoring—probably took another look at our reporter. Guelph tallied another in the ninth inningmaking the score 6—0. Sterling pitched a good game for the Petes, but was very poorly supported. The Petes got six hits, but could not make home plate. Although the weather affected the boys, the Umps on several occasions was snowblind and some discolored decisions were handed out; in fact base runners were safe in not touching the bags—but Umps couldn't see it.

Anyway, the Petes lost another, and although a few errors were made most of the boys were full of life and played the game for all that was init.

Victoria Day Drunks.

At yesterday's police court Magistrate Harry Rush occupied the rostrum. James Jordan was called, but not present. Gusto Macoo, an Italian was assessed $2 for a similar complaint. Edward Kimball, had also celebrated Victoria Day, $2. John Loucks also contributed $2 for having unloaded too many schooners. Jordan came in later, and was charged with being drunk. Jordan pleaded guilty to sleeping at the park. The chief said Jordan was very drunk when brought to the station—$2. Frank Fountain was also charged with being drunk and driving recklessly, $5. Howard Innis pleaded guilty to being drunk and was set back $2. Herbert Baker was charged with being disorderly, setting off fire crackers in a public place, $5. All fines were paid.

NUGENT'S SARSAPARILLA—PRICE FOR large bottle, 100 full doses, 25c. and well worth it, too. It's better to take no medicine at all than to depend upon cheap concoctions that are compounded to sell at low price and a big profit just because there is a large demand for certain remedies at certain seasons of the year. There are so-called Sarsaparillas offered to us to sell to our customers at 25c a bottle that would bring us a larger profit than Nugent's Sarsaparilla sold at 25c. Nugent's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, arouses the torpid liver, drives out all impurities, cleanses and tones up the system, and helps Nature throw off the dullness that comes from indoor life of winter. It arouses energy, brightens the eye, clears the brain, gives lightness to the movements. Nugent's Sarsaparilla is not the only thing you will find in this drug store. We make a specialty of Nugent's Remedies. Nugent Drug Co., [illegible] George St., directly opposite Cressman's store.

CHRONICLE OF THE SINNER

Being the Story of a Man Mean Enough to Deceive Even His Trusting Wife.

At two o'clock in the morning William Wilberforce succeeded after many efforts in getting his key to serve the purpose for which it had been made. Then he stumbled into the hall and fell over an upturned corner of a rug. This awakened Mrs. Wilberforce, who switched on the electric light.

When she got downstairs her husband was sitting up and staring vacantly at a beautiful picture of Queen Louise of Prussia.

"Why, William!" exclaimed his wife, "what has happened? Where are your glasses? How did you get that cut on your nose? Why are your clothes all covered with mud?"

Mr. Wilberforce put his hands up to his face and sobbed.

"Dearest," Mrs. Wilberforce cried, kneeling beside him, "tell me what is the matter."

"I can't 'm dear," he replied, "it was awful! Horrible!"

"O, William! Is it possible that you have been—"

"No, no, it ain't posshible," he interrupted. "Wash asshaulted by robbersh. Tha'sh wha' happened."

"Darling! Are you badly hurt? Did they rob you of everything?"

"No, 'm only stunned, that's all—only stunned. I licked 'm both. They didn't get my watch, 'n' they didn' get my money. I'm all ri'—jush stunned, thash a'l.

"Shan't I phone for the doctor, dear?"

"No, 'm all ri'. Jush a little stunned—tha'sh all."

Then, believing him, she helped him upstairs and assisted him to get into bed.

Yet there are those who refuse to admit that simple faith is better than Norman blood.—Chicago Record Herald.

HUDSON BAY TIMBER

An Experienced Cruiser, Describes Split Lake Conditions

Interesting observations with regard to the timber of the Hudson Bay region, the southern part of the old district of Keewatin, are found in the report of the Director of Forestry. Mr. J. T. G. Whyte, an experienced timber cruiser and fire ranger, who has since been drowned while in discharge of his duty reported on the conditions of the forest around Split Lake, on an area of about 2,400 square miles. This whole territory was originally covered with forest. The islands in Split Lake still bear Spruce, Tamarack, and Jack Pine large enough for railway ties, poles and lumber. All the rest of the country has been burned over at least once within the past forty or fifty years, and the timber, which dates from the last fire, rarely exceeds three or four inches in diameter. The shores of Split Lake have been burned over, on an average once every season. Fortunately in this district the soil is usually deep, and can always support another crop of trees. The presence of merchantable forest in protected situations proves that the young forest now started will become sufficiently valuable to support sawmill and pulp industries and supply a large population, if it can be protected from fire. Very little of the land traversed by Mr. Whyte is suitable for agriculture. Mr. J. T. Blackford, fire ranger at Oxford House, reported similar conditions on about 5,400 square miles of territory in that region.

PEACE RIVER TIMBER

Proposed Forest Reserves About Lesser Slave to Equalize Water-flow

In his report to the Minister of the Interior on timber conditions around Lesser Slave Lake, D. Roy Cameron, B.A., B. Sc.F., states that "the ever swelling tide of immigration into the Peace River country and vicinity renders it imperative that steps be taken to set aside non-agricultural lands in order that the timber resources of that country be conserved for the need of future generations." Muskeg he found to be omnipresent, associated in some instances with areas of lodge pole pine, black spruce and fir. The aspen, a tree which grows in considerable quantities in the district, is so susceptible to attacks of "heart rot" that 43 per cent. of the total is useless. Figuring on 3.2 cords of aspen per acre which might be used for pulpwood and 4 cords of balsam poplar, Mr. Cameron estimated that the whole area he traversed about the lake would produce 6,750,000, to which might be added about twice that quantity of defective, but not destroyed wood. The aspen and poplar balsam trees average about 8 inches in diameter 4½ feet from the ground.

Along the Swan river, so-called "cottonwood" flats are found where this species grows intermixed with some spruce. Here are found trees growing 100 feet high with 65 feet clear and a diameter at breast-height of from 15 to 60 inches. The average will be about 24 inches. The older and larger trees are mostly defective from heart-rot, but the younger up to 2 inches in diameter are sound and beautiful timber.

"There are large areas of non-agricultural land both north and south of the lake," Mr. Cameron declares in his summing up. "These areas are, in general, more or less elevated regions and form the head-waters of streams draining in every direction. The question of the preservation of the forest cover, so that as even a flow of water as possible may be insured, is an important one in this district because the main drainage streams are navigable rivers. Of late years, the continual denudation of the country containing the head-waters of the Lesser Slave River tributaries by fire has given rise to alternating conditions of very low and very high water, which has proved very harmful to navigation. Indeed, things have come already to such a pass that every bad storm means a miniature freshet, and a week's rain, a swollen torrent, bringing down trees and driftwood of all kinds which is a menace to navigation. The principal rivers causing this are the Moose, Driftpile, Saulteux and Otauwau."

So perfectly are artificial rubies made by chemists that Paris pawnbrokers refuse to take any chances with genuine ones.

An English city is experimenting with granular calcium chloride to combat dusty roadways, applying about half a pound to the square yard.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The language in Japan in reference to the United States dispute is suspiciously like her language prior to the outbreak of the Russo-Japanese war. But most people have short memories.

We are glad to hear from the esteemed New York Tribune that babies are again becoming fashionable in that city. It appears the dogs have had their day.

We judge by the way in which [illegible] has tackled her financial, economic and industrial problems, as well as those of [illegible], the Beef Trust may find itself in the uncomfortable position of the hornet which intruded itself uninvited into a hive of bees.

Andrew Carnegie says that if a man wishes to select the safest life possible let him enter the army and navy. But Andrew overlooks the fact that upon the order of Hon. Col. Sam. Hughes, some of our officers had to undergo horseback riding with the result that they fell off and were injured.

A vaudeville actress, one of whose stunts was kissing a bald-headed man in the audience, happened to kiss the wrong baldie and was thrashed by the victim's wife, who was there. Obviously the moral is that bald-headed men who adorn the front row should be careful to leave their wives at home.

A SHIPMENT OF BEEF FROM AUSTRALIA

Four hundred thousand pounds of chilled Australian beef and mutton—the first shipment of the kind to the Pacific Coast—was landed at San Francisco from the steamship Tahiti last week. The meat was sold in Australia with the understanding that payment of the duty should be made by the buyers and if the agreement is violated the Australian company will ship direct and eliminate the middleman's profit.

These shipments are expected to result in an immediate fall of prices, as California and the other Pacific Coast States eat meat raised east of the Rocky Mountains, and the prices are higher in San Francisco than in Chicago, hence in an effort towards reduction independent dealers arranged for the Australian shipment.

The steamship company that handled the first shipment is so certain that the trade will be permanent that it has placed orders for four refrigerator ships, to be used exclusively on the Australian-San Francisco run. When the Panama Canal is completed shipments of Australia chilled beef ought to find their way to this port, for the distance will be much shorter than that of similar shipments to England.

DISCONTINUES PROMOTION EXAMINATIONS

A few days ago the teachers in the Ottawa public schools received a circular from the Inspector, Mr. J. H. Putnam, informing them that the ordinary promotion examinations are to be discontinued in the Ottawa schools and another method adopted to ascertain the fitness of the scholars for promotion. The Inspector does not think very much of the present system of promotion. He says: "The system of making promotions depend on a formal written examination encouraging cramming, excessive memorizing and superficial teaching at the expense of the development of power. It makes a snap judgment, expressed in marks and percentages and on which a year of the child's life depends, or more value in estimating the child's power than the teacher's intimate knowledge of him. It exposes the child to the whims of examiners—both of those who set the papers and those who examine them—and to the injustice of having to undergo this test when he may be unwell or in a state of excitement and fright amounting sometimes almost to panic. It tends to shift the centre of gravity of the school away from teaching and conduct, its legitimate field of action, to a preparation for examinations, at best a minor and merely incidental part of the work of the school." In the future the teacher will use written tests occasionally, buy they will be set without notice. There is a plan to make it possible to promote a child from grade five to grade seven without passing through intermediate grades. The inspector declares that it is a very serious matter to compel a child to repeat a grade and it should always be avoided if possible. The new plan is to be tried for three years. We believe that most parents, and probably most teachers, will approve Inspector Putnam's course and we believe that the day is coming when both the high schools and the Universities will come to see the folly and waste of too numerous examinations. And yet teachers, like pupils, are slow to learn.

Do Your Looks Quite Satisfy You?

IF YOUR COLOR IS BAD, IF YOU SUFFER FROM PIMPLES, HERE IS GOOD ADVICE.

Fine Results in Two Weeks.

Miss Nettie E. Callaghan, a well-known young lady in Middleton, writes as follows: "I was affected for two years with a rash and ugly looking pimples that spread over my face. My color was poor, and my blood evidently completely out of order. Certainly it was a most despairing sort of a case, because various treatments did but little to help me. A friend of mine in Toronto, Ont., advised me to get Dr. Hamilton's Pills, so I sent at once for five boxes. In two weeks I felt like new—looks improved, spirits rose, and I felt I was getting well. I have used this remedy for a long time, and now wouldn't be without it."

If you are in ailing health, have blood disorders, stomach trouble, or headaches, Dr. Hamilton's Pills will help you quickly. Four Great Sauces.

A Frenchman has declared that "man has created the culinary art! he does not eat like an animal—he breakfasts, dines and sups."

The French are particularly eloquent on the subject of sauces. Among their famous chefs are recognised four great sauces: Spanish, Veloute, Bechamel and German. The Spanish and Veloute were known as far back as the seventeenth century. In the eighteenth they were modified by the masters of cookery, particularly by Careme, who was called "the Raphael of the Kitchen."

The Spanish sauce is composed of juices extracted from a mixture of ham, veal, chicken and pheasant. Veloute is similar, but is not colored. Bechamel is Veloute to which cream has been added, and the German sauce is Veloute plus the yolks of eggs.—Harper's Weekly.

ONTARIO'S WORK IN PRISON REFORM

Men Are Found to be Quite Securely Held Without Bolts, Bars, Cells or Guards

One thing Ontario is doing that bids fair to make her famous, and that is the working out the Prison Farm idea. There are about 440 prisoners employed in the open air, unconfined, and practically unguarded. They are under well defined discipline, it is true, and must respect rules and regulations, but they work in the open air unshackled and free from the inspection of rifle-carrying guards.

Sixty or seventy men worked a whole summer in the open near Whitby preparing the ground for a new Provincial asylum. These prisoners worked just as an equal number of ordinary laborers would have done, although the discipline of the camp was, perhaps, somewhat more definite. No attemts at escape were made, and no trouble of any kind occurred. Near Fort William sixty or seventy prisoners were put to work clearing a thousand acres of land with only four paid men in charge of the party, one of them being the cook. There are no handcuffs, rifles, bolts, nor bars in this prison system. The men are handled by rules and regulations—they are under the control of law and assent to it. If they tried to escape nobody could stop them. Yet each man knows that if he did run away he would be recaptured, and could not be expected to be trusted a second time, but must count upon being locked up behind stone walls. They do not run away. They are not insubordinate. In the open air they work hard, eat well and sleep well.

This method of prison reform is based not on kindness but on horse sense. The object is not to impress upon the men how good, kind, and charitable the State is in [illegible] them so, but they are permitted to discover if they like how sensible the State is in handling them in this way, and how powerful organized society is as against an erring individual, with all locks, bolts, bars, stone walls, and armed guards done away with. To the man who finds himself unconfined, unwatched, yet beyond all question as much a prisoner as if he were walled in a cell, there must come a realization of the futility of fighting against an organized society so powerful and so confident.

KING OF FLAG STAFFS

Victoria, B. C., Has Douglas Fir Over Two Hundred Feet in Height

What is pronounced to be the biggest stick of squared timber in the world was secured by the British Columbia Government for a flag staff in front of the courthouse at Victoria. This king of flag poles is 204 feet high, and its diameter is about two feet ten inches at the base tapering to about one foot at the top.

The "stick" had to be taken in a direct haul from the water to the Court House, as its great length made turnings out of the question. It was taken by the logging railroad to Stillwater Bay and floated in a boom to Vancouver.

"The Douglas fir from which the timber was cut scaled 7,500 feet," said Mr. McKay, provincial timber inspector. "I presume it is the largest single piece wooden staff in the British Empire, or in any Empire, Kingdom or Republic for the matter of that."

More than 3,000,000 passengers are carried each week by London street cars.

MIXED FARMING NEEDED

British Columbia Paper Sounds Note of Warning to Orchard Men

Fruit producers in British Columbia will have a large market in Western Canada. The prairie country is probably capable of growing some kinds of fruit, but other crops are likely to be more profitable. This farm population is increasing rapidly, and the habit of buying green fruit will grow on the people. There is also a provincial market, which is now largely supplied by imported fruit. New traffic routes will be opened. Local growers and packers will soon learn all that the fruit growers of Washington State can teach them.

But it is time to consider whether the attention of the people in the fruit-growing district is not fixed too much on fruit growing. Soil that is good for orchards is good for crops. Fruit may seem to offer large returns, but if the whole of the land that is suitable for orchards is planted in trees the production will in a few years be enormous, and a large part of the population will be dependent on the market for one class of commodities.

If this province is admirably adapted to fruit it is also well suited to dairying, stock raising and all kinds of mixed farming. It is sometimes said that the prairie farmers are giving their attention too much to a single crop. There is that tendency everywhere, and British Columbia with a tempting market for all kinds of farm products has the least need to concentrate on one kind of husbandry.—Vancouver News Advertiser.

TO MISS MAGGIE MIDDLETON,
On Her Departure for the West To Be Married.

You are going, Maggie dear,
Where bright prospects cheer your view,
Leaving tried friends lonely here,
For the untried, strange and new.

We must bid you now farewell,
For the hour has come to part.
Sorrows in our bosom swell,
And the bitter tear drops start.

But 'tis folly thus to weep,
To detain, or urge on stay;
Cruel that fair form to keep,
When your heart is far away.

Soon where fertile prairies show,
Flower decked verdure stretching wide;
To life's unknown weal or woe,
You will go, a blushing bride.

May your lover constant prove,
Ne'er affection's flame grow cold,
Cherish you with changeless love
When your withered, frail and old.

May you journey hand in hand
Up life's steep and toilsome road,
By each other faithful stand,
Sharing every joy and load.

And the smile of Heaven beam,
Cloudless on your peaceful hearth,
Make, beyond your Fancy's dream,
Home the sweetest place on earth.

When the light's declining ray
O'er the sunset's rim has flown,
At the silent close of day,
Oft, perchance, you sit alone

Then some thought will surely stray
Back to each familiar scene,
Where in childhood's careless play,
Free you roamed the woodland green.

To old Warsaw—dearest spot
This, our native land, affords;
Tho' afar fate casts our lot,
Fairest gem in Memory's board.

Tho' this tender last adieu
Comes from hearts by grief oppressed;
Yet we'll say 'Bon Voyage' to Home and 'Hubby' in the West.

Birds That Hold Courts

Ravens, starlings and crows are believed to hold courts of justice to mete out punishment to offenders. Sometimes they assemble in great numbers, as if they would give great dignity to the occasion. The trial sometimes apparently endures for many days. Some birds sit at the conclave with lowered heads, some merely cock their heads on the branches and look grave, while others are most garrulous and fill the air with their complaints.

Naturalists studying these strange proceedings have seen an apparently selected number of birds fall upon one or more of their number at the close of the "trial" and put them to death, after which they dispersed in orderly fashion and went back quietly to their sorts.

New Haven, May 24.—Yale's new English shell was seriously damaged to-day at New York City while being transferred from the trans-Atlantic liner which brought it to America. The boat was being lifted to a lighter when the accident occurred. The shell was partly stove in. Word was immediately sent to the Yale navy, who responded with an order to send the shell immediately to New Haven where expert boat builders can determine the extent of the damage and can make repairs. Unless the damage proves to be very great the boat will not be a total loss. The shell is probably the most valuable ever used by a Yale or a Harvard crew. It was ordered by Coach Kirby, the Englishman who arrived last week, and will direct Yale crew work until the end of the season.

TENNIS.

The Australasian Davis Cup lawn tennis team, S. N. Doust, captain, Horace Rice, A. B. Jones and E. G. Hicks, manager, have arrived in Boston and shortly repaired to the Longwood Cricket Club to prepare for the international matches in New York and the exhibition matches next week at Longwood.

Doust was the only one of the internationalists to practice. He played one set with Harry Johnson, and in defeating the Massachusetts player, the Australasian showed playing form that was at once impressive. It would, no doubt, be an injustice to judge his capabilities from what was seen of him in action in America but he indicated quite enough to satisfy those who saw him play that he will be a formidable foe in the international matches, especially in the doubles. He is extraordinarily active on the courts and demonstrated capacity as getter that is seldom seen. He has a fine back hand; not an especially hard hitter, since it would appear he would rather bring off his strokes precisely than take chances with a hard hitting game. He could not exactly be termed a stylist as compared with several of the low ranking American players, and does not rush to the net on every occasion. Rather he works to it when it is plainly his advantage to do so.

SHORT, PITHY WORDS

Life, death, false, true, foul, love, lust, hate, these are little words that mean great things, and most of the simple notions and essential qualities may be expressed in English by one syllable. And the oldest things with which man is concerned are called mostly by short names. Sword, wife, house, land, and horse and plough, the ox alive in Saxon's field and as "beef" on the Norman's table, wine and bread, friend and grave and God, these all are monosyllables.

So when language begins to deal with primitive life or the most essential human things, the short words grow in number. The English Bible and the noblest hymns are full of monosyllables:

O God, our help in ages past
Our hope for years to come.

And modern literary artistry, knowing how simple things are best expressed with dignity, translates Homer into language nearly Biblical.

As ideas grow complex, words grow longer, and it happens that English owes most of its "higher" and learned words to Latin tongues that know not the Teuton's brevity.—London Spectator.

A BIG CITY'S NAME

Montreal a Corruption of Name Applied to Mountain

When, in 1535, Jacques Cartier visited the Montreal of the future, he was struck with the physical conformation of the place. Ascending the mountain, and surveying the glorious scene which lay at his feet, and the beyond, he gave the name of Mount Royal to the eminence.

The city, when it acquired the semblance of substantiality, was called "Ville Marie," and after the first Mass had been sung by the later band which came out with Maisonneuve, there was solemn dedication of the new city to the Virgin, which makes the statue of the latter on Bonsecours Church, overlooking the river, congruous to original thought and ideal.

But "Mount Royal" easily slid into "Montreal." Always, the long word finds happy abbreviation. The hurry of life ignores the polysyllable; and "Montreal" became the inevitable short cut for "Mount Royal."

In the ancient writings—ancient, as we could count age in a new country—the city is invariably called "Ville Marie," and even to this day, in the back parishes Montreal is referred to as "Ville Marie."

THIS LETTER A FREAK

Ottawa Officials Could Make Nothing Out of Crank's Epistle

Freak letters in the Government mail bag are not unusual but a letter which reached the office of Canada's Prime Minister recently is the greatest curiosity of the kind on record. It arrived by registered mail from New York, in a long envelope addressed to "Excellency the Parliament of Canada" from "Baaar Bernstein, [illegible] West 100th street." From this envelope was extracted a document six feet long and double the width of a foolscap sheet. It was closely covered with writing and pen-printing and decorated with imitations of official seals. The text, the prepartion of which must have entailed extraordinary patience and industry, was an incoherent collection of references, partly in English and partly in Yiddish, to officials connected with the administration of justice in New York to members of the Roosevelt family, to some unexplained grievances in regard to registered mail, and to "the technique and scope of the Hague Tribunal, Qualifications of Governments." Four feet or so from the top of the document appeared the sentence, "the Parliament of Canada stands informed and herewith cited an accomplice of fact."

Officials of the Prime Minister's office struggled for a while with this remarkable production. Then they gave it up as a bad job.

EXPLAINING HORSE-POWER

Some Idea of the Work Done by Huge Marine Engines

The average man is apt to speak very glibly of so many hundred or thousand horse-power, but it is extremely doubtful whether one person in a hundred has a due appreciation of what the phrase really means.

Calculating the strength of twelve men to be equal to one horse-power it would require 840,000 men to produce as much energy as the 70,000 horse-power developed by the turbine machinery of a big Atlantic steamship. Then, if the men were to work on the eight-hour-day system, those figures would give a total of 2,520,000, that being the number of men whose strength would be necessary to drive the vessel across the Atlantic Ocean.

KAISER HARD TO PHOTOGRAPH

Rejects Pictures Unless They Portray a Fierce Look

The reason why snapshot portraits of the Kaiser differ so materially from the elaborate photographs that receive the royal imprimatur has been disclosed. The Kaiser is the hardest man in the world to please with a photograph.

A photographer much visited by his Majesty, who takes him every year, says that at least a dozen negatives have to be made each time, and with the resultant prints brought to the Kaiser, who rejects all save those that present the well-known fierce look.

The negatives have to be smashed in his presence. On one occasion only did his Majesty choose a copy of his photograph bearing a suggestion of a smile, an enlargement of which he ordered for his mother.

LEARNED TO DRAW IN BUSY STREET

Famous Canadian Painter Got His First Lesson From Pavement Artist in London

Prominent among Canadian artists is Mr. Frederick S. Challoner and behind his rise into the front rank of painters in this western hemisphere lies a world of romance worthy of the great days of the past, when the homeless hero went forth penniless into the world with nothing but a stout heart, a strong will and an unconquerable resolve to make his mark.

Mr. Challoner learned his first lessons in painting on the pavement in a busy street in Stratford, London, where an ex-seaman by his artistic skill drew forth from the passers-by a scanty shower of coppers from the busy throng of workmen who then as now passed and repassed in this industrial centre of Britain. Challoner watched with great interest as the old seaman rapidly sketched the Tay bridge disaster, the bombardment of Alexander by the British fleet, and kindred subjects, watched while the well-known facial lines of Gladstone and Disraeli found a place on the city's pavement.

Came to Canada

A little later the British boy made his way to Canada and within a few hours found a niche as office boy in a Toronto place of business. That is nearly thirty years ago, and during practically all those years the artist of to-day has been plying his profession in one form or another, first with amateurish effort with little or no reward, until to-day he occupies a leading position in the Dominion in the fields of mural and portrait painting.

Soon after his arrival on this side of the Atlantic Mr. Challoner secured a position in the artist's department of a lithographic establishment, and in the five years passed there, such progress was made that he decided to establish himself as a painter.

Ability Recognized

The artistic men and women in the locality quickly recognized his genius and worth and he was made a member of the Ontario Society of Artists, a connection which still exists. Then he was elected an associate of the Royal Canadian Academy of Art, and finding a useful as well as a profitable field in the land of his adoption Mr. Challoner has continued to reside on this continent, save when in pursuit of local coloring for European and other eastern work.

FROZEN BY FISH-POWER

A Nova Scotian's Tale of Ice-Cream Making

A New York editor received the following letter:

"I have read an interesting account of singing fish in your paper. It recalled to me the memory of a rather remarkable fish we have in Nova Scotia. It is known as the 'Frost Fish,' because it may be frozen like a lump of ice, but, if placed in water in that condition, it soon thaws out and swims around as vigorously as ever. The natives make use of this property to make ice cream. The fish is caught, frozen, and placed in the cream. In thawing out it freezes the cream, and its movements at the same time beat the mixture, making it smooth."

Here are the editor's remarks:

"Taking them by and large, from Moosehead Lake to Puget Sound and from the upper Mississippi to the Gulf, we have some very capable and industrious fish liars in this country. But we hand the reel and rod over to Nova Scotia. We have talent in this country, but Nova Scotia is the abode

Health and Beauty Aids

BY MRS. E [illegible] MARTYN.

Bessie: I have constantly advised against the use of hair bleaches and dyes.

Clara: I think you are foolish to worry about a few pounds of extra flesh, but if you fear that your waist line will disappear entirely, go to your druggist and get 4 ounces of parnotis, take it home and dissolve it in 1½ pints of hot water. Take a tablespoonful three times a day, before meals. Parnotis makes superfluous fat disappear.

Christina: If your hair is falling out and your scalp scaly with dandruff, apply this home made quinine hair-tonic once or twice a week and watch your hair grow in long and abundant. Dissolve in ½ pint of alcohol 1 ounce of quinzoin and add ½ pint of cold water. Rub well until absorbed by the scalp and hair.

Miss Wood: Plenty of good lather is an essential to the success of any shampoo. Some soaps that lather well make the hair brittle and hard. It is better to use plain canthrox for shampooing purposes. Simply dissolve a teaspoonful of canthrox in a cupful of hot water and stir well until it is all dissolved; then take your shampoo by pouring the mixture on the hair and rubbing in well. It will cleanse the scalp thoroughly, make the head feel good and keep your hair soft and fluffy.

Margie: Indeed, I am always glad to receive a recipe. The wrinkle remover formula which your friend says she read in these columns and found absolute in its action is easily and cheaply made at home by mixing one ounce of almozin with one-half pint of cold water and adding two teaspoonfuls glycerine. Stir and let stand for one day. To remove or prevent wrinkles apply this vegetable cream jelly thickly and leave over night, then wash off and with more of the cream massage thoroughly. I have never found anything to equal almozin jelly-cream to remove wrinkles and keep them away. It contains no oil or fatty substances which might promote the growth of hair. You will also notice by its use not only your wrinkles disappearing but the large pores of the entire face getting much smaller and the skin very soft and velvety.

Mrs. L. E.: No doubt glasses spoil your looks. Probably you would have no need to wear glasses if you would use a good eye tonic. Get an ounce of crystos from your druggist and dissolve it in a pint of water. Drop one or two drops in each eye once or twice a day. This is wonderfully strengthening to the eyes and will not smart or burn, but makes dull-looking eyes bright and clear. It is just fine for dull, tired inflamed or weak eyes and for granulated eyelids.

Dora H.: Buy a small, original package of pyroxin and with forefinger put some on eyebrows occasionally. This makes them grow thick and silky. Stubby, straight eye-lashes will come in long and curly if peroxin be applied at lash-roots with thumb and forefinger. Use care so as not to get any where no hair is wanted.

Youngwife: Don't be discouraged. A delatone paste will dissolve those hairs and leave the skin smooth and clear. Just get a small, original package of delatone from your druggist and make sufficient paste with the powder and water to cover the hairs. Apply and after two or three minutes remove and wash the skin. This is an unfailing remedy.

Forence E.: To prepare a complexion beautifier that will make the skin soft, white and smooth, put 2 teaspoonfuls of glycerine and 4 ounces of spurmax in ½ pint of hot water or witch hazel and let stand until cold. Apply to the hands, forearms and face with the palm of the hand and continue rubbing the skin where applied until dry. Unlike powder, when on it seems part of the skin and does not rub off. Several of my friends have told me that this spurmax wash is particularly effective for sallow, dark and oily skins. It is much less expensive than ready-manufactured face-washes.

Naomi: Don't worry about your condition. Nearly every person needs a blood tonic and liver-invigorator in the spring. Prompt treatment will enable you to rid yourself of those yellow blotches and pimples. Get from your druggist 1 ounce of kardene and ½ pint of alcohol. To these add ½ teacupful of sugar and put into 1½ pints of boiling water. This makes an excellent system tonic that purifies the blood and arouses the liver to healthy action. Take 1 tablespoonful 5 minutes before each meal and before retiring.

JACK "HORNER" A REALITY

Nursery Legend About the Pie Conceals a Real Tragedy

Few people know that the nursery legend of "Little Jack Horner" conceals a real tragedy.

At the Reformation the chief of an abbey in the West of England resolved to surrender, and in token thereof to send the deeds of the religious house to Henry VIII. at Whitehall. For security's sake the abbot placed the documents in a pie dish and covered them with crust. The dish, without saying a word about the contents, he gave to a lout, Jack Horner, with instructions to carry it by road to the King in London.

About half way Jack Horner became ravenous and came to the conclusion that it was foolish of him to starve while he was the custodian of a pie. So he broke the crust and put in his thumb and pulled out—a roll of parchments! The disgusted Jack Horner chucked the lot into an adjacent brook.

The non-arrival of the deeds caused Bluff King Hal to suspect the abbot of contumacy, so his Majesty commanded that the poor cleric should be hanged.

CANADIAN NAMES IN BRITAIN'S NAVY

First Canada Captured French Frigate Without Assistance—King Served on Second

It is worth noting that there have already been ships in the British navy with Canadian names. These are the Canada, Quebec, and Monck. All have battle records.

The first Canada was built at Woolwich in 1764, and was with the fleet at the relief of Gibraltar, and in April, 1782, was with the squadron under Hood which defeated the French fleet at St. Kitt's. On that occasion Canada captured the French "74" Hector alone. Hon. W. Cornwallis was captain. The men refused to serve unless their wages were paid. Cornwallis said: "My lads, the money cannot be paid till we return to port. As for your not firing a single gun, I will clap you alongside the first big French ship we meet, and Satan himself won't keep you from firing whole broadsides." He was right.

The second Canada was a corvette built at Portsmouth in 1881. King George made his debut as a naval officer in her in 1883.

The Quebec Blew up

The H.M.S. Quebec, a 32 gun frigate, was built in 1765, and came to a tragic end in 1779. Under command of Captain Farmer, she attacked the French frigate Surveillante, off Brest. The Quebec took fire and blew up, and all on board perished with the exception of 19. Captain Farmer went down with her. The Admiralty in recognition of his gallant conduct, made his son a baronet, and gave the widow a pension of $1,000, and $125 for each of her nine children, in order "to excite emulation in other officers to distinguish themselves and render Farmer's fate rather to be envied than pitied."

The second "Quebec" captured the U. S. 40 gun frigate South Carolina in December, 1782, and was at the capture of Martinique and Guadeloupe in 1794. She was also in action at Port au Paix, and in cutting out gunboats at the Elbe, 1811.

Second Monck Wrecked

The H.M.S. Monck, a 58 gun ship, was built at Portsmouth in 1659, and was at Barfleur in 1692, and assisted in the capture in 1693 of two French vessels of thirty guns each, having rich cargoes. She captured the French Diligente in 1694, and led an attack on the batteries at Brest the same year. She was present at the capture of Gibraltar in 1704, and at the battle of Malaga the same year. She sustained thirty-six killed and fifty-two wounded. The second Monck, a 50 gun ship, was wrecked in November, 1720, but the crew was saved.

At the upresent time a powerful vessel called the Dominion is in the British navy.

A CANADIAN WONDER

Tunnel Beneath St. Clair River Represents Huge Engineering Undertaking

Comparatively little is known by Canadians of the St. Clair tunnel beneath the river of that name which connects Sarnia and Port Huron, and yet this is one of the notable engineering features of modern railroading. It would at first sight appear almost an impossibility for a railway train to cross a navigable stream by any other means than a bridge. Where a bridge is out of the question a railway ferry is the usual alternative. This is accompanied by more than one drawback. The stream may be choked with ice either floating or solid and there is always the risk of stormy weather. Beyond this the shunting ferry consumes no little valuable time. The necessity of a better method compelled the construction of the St. Clair tunnel, which is in some respects the most remarkable in the world.

The length of the tunnel proper is 6,025 feet and of the open portals or approaches, 5,603 feet, making up more than two miles in all—one of the longest sub-marine tunnels in the world. It is a continuous iron tube, 19 feet, 10 inches in diameter, put together in sections as the work of boring proceeded and firmly bolted together, the total weight of the iron being 56,000,000 pounds. The work was commenced in September, 1888; the tunnel was opened for freight traffic in Octotber, 1891, and passenger trains began running through it in December of the same year.

The work was begun at both sides and carried on until the two sections met in mid-river, and with such accuracy that they were in perfect line. The borings were made by means of cylindrical rams, and as fast as the clay was cut away a section of the iron wall of the tunnel was bolted to its fellow section. The rails of the track rest upon cross ties only six inches apart, laid on stringers, which in turn rest on a bed of brick and cement that fills the bottom of the tube.

SPEEDY JUSTICE HERE

Judge Riddell Contrasts Methods in Canada and United States

"I have been practicing for 30 years and never once has it taken me more than 30 minutes to get a jury and two days to try a case," declared Mr. Justice Riddell of the high court of justice for Ontario in an address at Kansas City, Mo. "What amazes me," continued Judge Riddell, "is the enormous length of time it takes you in the United States to try a case. Once in London, Ont., I tried a murder case, one of manslaughter, two other criminal cases and 27 civil cases. In that time an American judge across the line had scarcely half a jury selected to try a murder case."

Getting Across Line

The latest ruse adopted by foreigners anxious to enter Canada from the United States to Windsor is to provide themselves with a regulation "return ticket" from an American railroad. Thus armed, the aliens attempt to pass the Canadian frontier, boldly telling the usual story of coming into Canada "on a visit," and exhibiting the return portion of their tickets as evidence that they do not intend to remain on this side of the line. The scheme is not often successful.

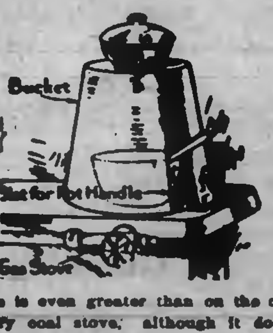
WOMAN FINDS WAY TO USE HEAT TWICE AND CUTS FUEL BILL BY IT

Few people know what enormous amounts of heat are wasted every day in the ordinary methods of cooking and the waste in cooking on a gas stove is even greater than on the ordinary coal stove, although it does not seem to be.

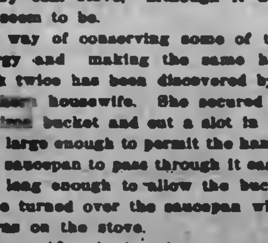


A way of conserving some of this energy and making the same heat work twice has been discovered by a southern housewife. She secured an old iron bucket and cut a slot in the side large enough to permit the handle of a saucepan to pass through it easily and long enough to allow the bucket to be turned over the saucepan when it was on the stove.

Then when she is using a saucepan to stew something she turns the bucket over it and puts something else to cook on the bucket. It might seem like a small saving, but it counts up in dollars and cents in a year.

Mix With a "Querl"

This little thing is called a "querl" and is an egg beater, a potato masher, a lemon squeezer, a batter mixer and host of other useful things. It consists simply of a hardwood handle with a star-shaped piece of wood on the end. The star is attached very securely and rigidly to the handle so that it cannot revolve. It is easily cleaned and is used by twirling it between the palms of the hands, the star being buried in the liquid or materials it is desired to mix. The size of the star is left entirely to the fancy of housekeeper. It should not be made of material more than one-half inch thick, however, and two to three inches is a good diameter for it.



Sale by Tender of Part of Cobalt Station Grounds (excepting minerals) by the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario Railway Commission.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that sealed tenders addressed to the undersigned and endorsed on the envelope "Tenders for Surface Rights, Cobalt," will be received up to 12 o'clock of Saturday, the 31st day of May, 1913, for the purchase of that part of the Cobalt Station Grounds of the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario Railway Commission (excepting thereout the Minerals and mining rights granted to J. P. Dickson and A. Rosenthal by a certain lease dated the 20th day of October, 1908, and now held by The Cobalt Townsite Mining Company, Limited), part of which said lands is at present occupied by The Imperial Bank of Canada at Cobalt, as a site for its bank-offices, containing one-tenth of an acre, more or less.

IN CASE a tender is accepted, the purchase money shall be payable one-third cash, one-third one year, and one-third two years, with six per cent. interest from date of acceptance of tender.

IN CASE the purchaser shall fail to pay the purchase money within the time limited, as aforesaid, the Commission shall thereupon, or at any time thereafter, be entitled to cancel the sale and to retain all moneys paid as and by way of agreed and liquidated damages.

UPON payment of the purchase money in full, the purchaser shall be entitled to a transfer of said lands subject to an existing lease of part of said lands, dated the 30th day of September, 1910, which said last mentioned lease shall be assigned by the Commission to the said purchaser, who shall covenant to assume the same and to observe all the covenants, provisions and agreements therein contained.

Copies of the plan showing the lands to be sold may be seen upon application to A. J. McGee, Secretary-Treasurer, T. & N. O. Railway Commission, 25 Toronto street, Toronto.

The Commission reserves the right to withdraw all or any part of said lands from sale.

The highest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

Further particulars may be had on application to the undersigned.

Dated at Toronto, this 6th day of May, A.D., 1913.

TENDERS FOR DREDGING

SEALED TENDERS, addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for dredging, Collingwood," will be received until 4.00 P.M., Thursday, June 5, 1913, for dredging required at Collingwood, Ontario.

Tenders will not be considered unless made on the forms supplied, and signed with the actual signatures of the tenderers.

Combined specification and form of tender can be obtained on application to the Secretary, Department of Public Works, Ottawa, and plan of work may be seen at the Office of the Assistant Chief Engineer of Public Works, Ottawa, and the Office of the District Engineer, Confederation Life Building, Toronto, Ont. Tenders must include the towing of the plant to and from the work. Dredges and tugs not owned and registered in Canada shall not be employed in the performance of the work contracted for. Contractors must be ready to begin work within thirty days after the date they have been notified of the acceptance of their tender.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted check on a chartered bank payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, for five per cent. (5 p.c.) of the contract price, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Men's Block, New Barracks, Toronto, Ont.," will be received until 4.00 P.M., on Tuesday, June 24, 1913, for the construction of a Men's Block, New Barracks, Long Branch near Toronto, Ont.

Plans, specification and form contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained at this Department and at the office of Mr. Thos. Hastings, Esq., Clerk of Works, Postal Station "F", Yonge St., Toronto, Ont.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent (10 p.c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary.

TENDERS FOR DREDGING

SEALED TENDERS, addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Dredging, Ontario," will be received until 4.00 P.M., Wednesday, June 4, 1913, for dredging required at the following places in the Province of Ontario:—

Cloud Bay, Whitby, Bruce Mines, Hilton, Killarney, Little Detroit, Walker River.

Tenders will not be considered unless made on the forms supplied, and signed with the actual signatures of the tenderers.

Combined specification and form of tender can be obtained on application to the Secretary, Department of Public Works, Ottawa. Tenders must include the towing of the plant to and from the work. Dredges and tugs not owned and registered in Canada shall not be employed in the performance of the work contracted for. Contractors must be ready to begin work within thirty days after the date they have been notified of the acceptance of their tender.

A separate cheque for each place for which a tender is submitted must accompany the tender. This cheque must be equal to five per cent (5 p.c.) of the amount of the tender, based on the approximate quantities set opposite the name of place, but in no case must the cheque be for a less sum than $1,500. The cheque must be accepted, on a chartered bank, and payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary.

THE OLDEST BASEBALL IN A GLASS CASE

The oldest baseball in the world and the one that was used in the first championship game on record is now in the possession of a sporting goods house in Kansas City. After drifting around for 55 years, it has been covered with gold leaf, mounted on a handsome case containing a placard with the history of the ball written on it, and now is an object of interest to the fans.

The ball is 10 inches in circumference, an inch larger than the regulation one of the present time, and is covered with one piece of leather. It was used in the game between the Intermountain team of Boston and the Portland, Me., team, September 9, 1857, the first championship game ever played, which was won by the Portland club, 47 to 42.

It was the first game in which the nine-innings rules prevailed, and the first one in which the ball was pitched instead of tossed. The game was played on Boston Commons.

The ball was formerly owned by Josh Westerhouse of Dunlap, Kas., who, at the age of 13 years, was bat boy for the Intermountain men. He obtained possession of it after the game, and when he moved to Kansas several years later brought the ball with him. Years ago he gave it to P. M. Wilhite of Emporia, who has owned it since.

Several years ago August Herrmann, president of the Cincinnati club, after a search lasting for several years, found a ball which he said was the oldest in existence, having been used in a game in 1860.

ORIGIN OF THE BAGPIPES

Reached Present State of Completeness After Centuries of Evolution

In a lecture in Dublin Mr. B. Kent reviewed the history of the bagpipe and illustrated his remarks throughout with limelight views. He showed the bagpipes to have originated in the simple reed such as children construct from the rushes that grow by the river banks.

The addition in time of a bladder and a few notes to the chanter produced the first rude bagpipe. The chanter developed until various pleasing tones could be produced, and a drone was added. The lecturer showed that the drone was undoubtedly antique but could not explain its origin. From one drone to two or more was a natural and inevitable step. Then the final development of the bagpipes in Europe, with the sole exception of Ireland, was the substitution in certain cases of a bellows for the player's mouth.

Ireland makes a further advance by adding to the chanter and drones a new part known as the "regulator," this being a keyed pipe upon which a skillful player could produce pleasing harmonies. The lecturer showed by means of drawings and sculptural remains that the pipes were a favorite instrument in the fourteenth and sixteenth centuries.

In regard to the sale of SANOL & SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES, might say I have been handling the goods for about three months. I was obliged to put in SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES to supply one of my customers, who is now completely cured, and whom, I believe, has sent a testimonial to your office. Another customer ordered SANOL and I was obliged to stock it. This gentleman was so well satisfied that he has sent bottles to his friends. Up to this time I had never really taken much interest in the preparations but when customer after customer would come in and tell me about what SANOL had done for them, I came to the conclusion it would be worth my while getting behind SANOL and recommending it to my customers. This I have done and I have heard nothing but words of praise for SANOL and SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES, I am,

MARVELS OF RADIUM

Latest Use of Mineral is to Mix it With Water for Medicine

In the medical exhibition at Westminster there is a dark room where an expert, rather bleached in appearance from living so much without light, shows you some of the wonders of radium.

When your eyes have got used to the darkness of his cave he will hand you a commonplace cardboard box and tell you to stare intently at the lid. You do so, and soon the thing becomes luminous, breaks out into shifting radiations as if it contained some wonderfully heartless coal of fire. The expert says it looks like a snowstorm, and so it does, if you can imagine flakes of rosy snow drifting and circling round a center. Then he opens the door and lets in the disillusioning daylight and taking off the lid you find inside the box nothing but a tiny drop of water, a new and fascinating branch of radium therapy.

You can now buy it in bottles—radiogen water—and drink it for the cure of rheumatism, gout and similar ailments.

The theory now is, of course, that the therapeutic virtue of the waters of Bath, Buxton and other wells is mainly due to their radio activity. It has been observed that the workmen in the mines in Bohemia and in Cornwall, where radium ore is dug, rarely suffer from rheumatism or neuralgia. So you can drink radium as medicine as well as use it as a search light in surgery.

MY LADY OF DOUBT

By Randall Parrish.

CHAPTER XVIII—Capt. Grant insists that Lawrence be strung up at once.

CHAPTER XIX—Miss Mortimer appears, captures the mystery. Lawrence is held a prisoner of war, and is again locked in the strong room.

CHAPTER XX — Lawrence escapes through plans arranged by The Lady and sees Grant attack Miss Mortimer.

CHAPTER XXI—Grant is knocked out by Lawrence, who comes to Miss Mortimer's relief, and then makes his escape

CHAPTER XXII—Captain Grant's base villainy revealed.

CHAPTER XXIII—Lawrence returns to Valley Forge, where he learns more of Grant's perfidy.

CHAPTER XXIV—Washington forces Clinton to battle and Lawrence gets a trace of Eric Mortimer.

CHAPTER XXV—The battle of Monmouth.

CHAPTER XXVI — Gen. Washington again starts Maj. Lawrence on an important mission.

CHAPTER XXVII—Lawrence finds Miss Mortimer in soldier's uniform, acting as a scout under her brother's name. Explanations follow.

"The two did not meet after that for many months. The Queen's Rangers, in which regiment my father secured Grant a commission, were in New York, while Eric was stationed up the river with Morgan's riflemen. When New Jersey was invaded, both commands came south, and, because of Eric's knowledge of this country, he was detailed as scout. This reckless life was greatly to his liking; I saw him occasionally by appointment, usually at Elmhurst, and became aware that his old quarrel with Captain Grant was seemingly forgotten. There appeared to be some understanding, some special connection between them. They met once, at least, and I delivered one note between them."

"Perhaps I can explain that later," I interrupted, "from something mentioned at Lee's headquarters.

"You! Oh, I wish you could, for their relationship has mystified me; has made me afraid something might be wrong with—with Eric."

"I think not, dear; say rather with Grant."

"If that be so, then it may prove the key to all the mystery. What made their intimacy so difficult to understand was that I knew the captain's dislike of Eric had in no way diminished. He spoke of him as savagely as ever."

"Perhaps he played a part—his ultimate purpose revenge."

"It might be that—yes, it might be that, and—and the consummation of that revenge may account for all which has occurred. But I must go on with what I had to tell."

I had forgotten the passage of time, the men riding steadily in advance, constantly increasing their distance, even the possible importance of the dispatch within my jacket pocket. The evident distress of the girl riding beside me, whose tale, I felt sure, would fully justify her strange masquerade in male garments, her risk of life and exposure to disgrace in midst of fighting armies, held me neglectful of all else. I realized that, whatever the cause, I had unconsciously become a part of its development, and that I was destined now to be even more deeply involved. Whatever the mystery, I must solve it for her sake. My hand again sought hers, holding it in firm clasp. There was a sound of hoofs on the dusty road behind us.

"It is Peter," she whispered. "What can have happened!"

The rider barely paused, turning his horse's head even as he spoke hastily.

"Captain Grant is with the ambulance, Mistress Claire," he reported. "He came up alone about five minutes ago."

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Before General Arnold.

I felt her hand withdrawn quickly, and the swift intake of her breath, yet there was no sharpness in the voice.

"Captain Grant, Peter? What can the man want here?"

"He claimed to be hunting deserters," returned Swanson, as calmly deliberate of speech as ever. "But that was false. He knew we were on the road, and asked for you."

"For me? And you told him—"

"Merely that you rode ahead to see that the road was clear. Then I left at once, fearing he might join you."

She sat a moment in silence, her head bowed; then looked across into my face.

"This arrival must end our conference, Major," she said soberly. "Captain Grant must not know that you are with me—that would mean fighting."

"Surely you do not wish me to run away?"

"Yes, this time, for my sake as well as your own. If I could have completed my confession you would realize the necessity. However, the fact that you are the bearer of dispatches should be sufficient; your duty to the Colonies is more important than any private quarrel. You will go?"

"Yes—but you? Are you safe with him?"

"Perfectly. I wish I might be clothed in my own proper dress, but with Peter and Tenopah on guard, Captain Grant alone is not dangerous. Besides, I wish to learn his purpose in seeking to join us." She hesitated. "You must not fear for me, but—but I wish to tell you all, and—and I am sure I shall need your help."

"You mean I am to join you again—at Elmhurst?"

"Is that asking too much?"

"Claire," I whispered, bending toward her, so Peter could not overhear, "nothing shall keep me from coming, dear. I will ride back the moment my dispatches are in Arnold's hands. But tell me, first, if you are not afraid of Grant himself, what is it you need me for?"

"Eric," she answered swiftly. "He has disappeared, dead or deserted. Oh, I cannot believe the last is true. It was to save his reputation that I dressed in this uniform, performed the work assigned him. I feel sure Grant knows where he is, what has become of him. I went to him in Philadelphia, but he only sneered, and said the boy had doubtless run away. I know better; that is not like a Mortimer. But I cannot search for him; I must stay with my father. But if I can only be assured you will come."

"You can be assured."

"Mistress Claire," broke in Peter, "some one is riding up the road."

"Yes, Peter, yes. Major, wait here! Don't move. We will go back and meet him."

I held my horse steady, although he made an effort to follow. Voices came back to me through the darkness—Grant's loud enough to be clearly heard.

"What, is this you, Claire?" he laughed gruffly. "By all the gods, I thought it must be Eric. I never expected to find you togged out in this style. By Jove, I wish it was daylight."

"Special Service, Sir! But You Are Not Assigned to My Command!"

Whatever she replied must have sobered the fellow.

"Everything I say you take wrongly. Of course it's all right, for the country is full of stragglers out of both armies. Lord, I don't care what you wear, as long as it suits you. My business? Oh, I explained all that to your putty-faced servant—Saint Anne! that fellow! But I'll review the matter again. I'm drumming up Clinton's deserters, but now I've met you I'm tempted to go along with you as far as Elmhurst."

"Become a deserter yourself?"

"Oh, no, or at least only temporarily. There will be plenty of fighting yet in the Jerseys. Clinton's whipped all right, and is going to have a time getting away to the ships. In my judgment there will be richer picking for a Jerseyman right here at home, than with the army in New York."

There was a moment's silence; then the girl asked, a shade of horror in her voice:

"Surely, you cannot mean to ally yourself with guerillas, Captain Grant? With—with Fagin?"

The man laughed, but mirthlessly.

"That would be horrible, wouldn't it? Well, personally I fail to see why Fagin is any more of a scoundrel than some of these other fellows in gilt epaulets. However, I've not come to that point yet. The fact is I have a private affair to attend to before I leave this neighborhood. Can you guess what it is?"

"I? Certainly not."

"Well, you will know shortly—the ambulance is coming."

I rode my horse slowly forward, keeping at the edge of the road, until assured a sufficient distance separated us. Then I gave the restive animal a sharp touch of the spur, sending him swiftly forward. My escort would have a mile or two the start, yet that was nothing. My thoughts were not with them, or with my military duty, but reverted to the little company around the wounded man. The bearing of the dispatch to Arnold was mere routine, involving only steady riding, but the relations existing between Claire, Grant, and Eric Mortimer were full of mystery. There were connecting links I could not understand; no doubt had the girl been permitted to conclude her story I might fit it together, but as it was I was left groping in the darkness. Yet my mind tenaciously held to its original theory as to Eric's strange disappearance—he had been betrayed by Grant, and was being held prisoner. But where? By whom? And for what purpose?

I pondered on this problem as my horse ploughed forward through the dust, my eyes unconsciously scanning the dark road. Grant could not have known that Colonel Mortimer was being taken home. His meeting with the ambulance party was altogether an accident. Yet I had no faith the man was out seeking British stragglers, for had he been dispatched on such a mission he would have had at least a squad of soldiers with him. Then what? The probability was that he was either riding to Elmhurst, or to some rendezvous with Fagin. Some plan had been interrupted by Clinton's sudden march, by the British defeat at Monmouth, and Grant was risking his commission, braving the charge of desertion, for some private purpose. This might be love of Claire, revenge upon Eric, or possibly both combined. The latter would seem most probable. He would use Eric in some way to threaten the sister, to compel her to sacrifice herself. She was of a nature to do this, as was already abundantly proved by her assumption of male attire to save Eric's reputation. My own responsibility loomed large as I reached this conclusion, and remembered her appeal for help. She, also, must suspect the truth, and had turned to me as the only one capable of unraveling the mystery. She trusted me, loved me, I now believed—and, under God, I would prove worthy of her faith. With teeth clinched in sudden determination I caught up with my little squad of plodding horsemen, and, with word of command, hurried them into a sharp trot.

Riding ahead, boot to boot with Conroy, I thought out a plan for action, and finally, in the gray of the morning, told him enough of the story to arouse his interest. Just before sunrise we passed Elmhurst, the great white mansion appearing silent and deserted. There was no halting, although we turned in the saddle to look, and my eyes swept over the troopers trotting behind us. They were a sturdy lot, their faces bronzed from exposure, their uniforms stained and dust-covered.

"Regulars?" I asked, nodding back across my shoulder.

"Not a man but has seen two years' service," he replied proudly. "Hamilton knows the troop, and he picked us out."

"I may need them for a bit of desperate work."

"They'll do it, sir, never fear."

"Good, sergeant; we'll ride hard, and trust to getting fresh horses in Philadelphia. I'll tell Arnold the story. When we arrive there have your men get all the sleep they can. I'll attend to rations and ammunition. You are simply to have the men rested and ready. Cannot we make better time? The horses seem in good condition."

We passed swiftly over the level country, meeting a few stragglers, but paying them small attention. By two o'clock we were on the banks of the Delaware, and a half-hour later, I swung down stiffly from the saddle in front of Arnold's headquarters on High street.

He was an officer I never greatly liked, with his snapping eyes and arrogant manner, but he was courteous enough on this occasion, questioning me after reading the dispatch, and offering me a glass of wine.

"You look tired, major, and must rest before you start back. I shall have my report ready by sundown."

"General Arnold," I said, standing respectfully hat in hand, "I have a favor to ask—that you will send your report by some other messenger, and give me a detail for special service."

He looked up in surprise.

"Special service, sir! But you are not assigned to my command"

"That is true, general," I insisted, "but the conditions warrant the unusual application"

"What service is contemplated?"

"An attempt to kill or capture Red Fagin, and release a scout whom I believe he holds prisoner."

"You hope to accomplish all this alone?"

"With the assistance of the sergeant and ten dragoons who came here with me. They are in camp now on the Jersey shore."

He walked across the room, stared out of the window, and then again faced me.

"By God, sir, this is a most extraordinary request. Damme, I'd like to get hold of Fagin all right, but I need to know more of your plan, and the reason you have for asking such a detail. It looks foolhardy to my mind."

I went over the situation carefully, watching the effect of my words in the man's face. He sat at the table now, leaning forward eagerly. Arnold had the reputation of a gallant, and my first reference to a young lady aroused him.

"The name, please—you mentioned no name."

"Claire Mortimer, sir."

"Ah! Ah!! I remember her well. Danced with her myself. Now go on, sir; I can appreciate the tale better for my recollection of the fair heroine."

I was not long at it, although he interrupted me occasionally by shrewd questioning. As I concluded he kept silent a moment, looking at me from under his heavy brows.

"It looks like rather a blind trail to me, major," he said kindly, "but I'm no spoil-sport in such an affair. You might have the luck to stumble onto your party, and I'd take the chance myself if I were in your shoes. You wish to start at sunset?"

"Yes, sir."

"You need horses, rations and pistol ammunition for twelve men?"

"Yes, sir."

"Very well, major, the quartermaster will attend these details. Go and lie down. Washington may not approve, but I'll take the responsibility."

He extended his hand across the table, and I felt the firm clasp of his hand.

CHAPTER XXIX.

I Run Across Eric.

I slept three hours, the dead sleep of sheer exhaustion, but felt refreshed and strong when roughly aroused. Before sunset I was across the river, where I found my little squad of dragoons prepared for their night's adventure. Arnold had kept his word, the fresh horses being fine animals, the ammunition in excess of our needs. Conroy was enthusiastic, and somewhat loquacious, but I cut his conversation off rather sharply, and ordered the men into their saddles. With brain clarified by sleep I realized the importance of the work before us, and how imperfect my plans were. I could merely ride forth to Elmhurst, hoping to pick up some clew to aid me. As we rode rapidly along the deserted road leading to Farrell's I reviewed over and over again every remembered detail, only to conclude that I must get hands on Grant, and by threats, or any other available means, compel him to confess his part in the villainy. Dusk settled about us, succeeded by night, as we pressed steadily forward, the men riding silently, the only sound the thud of hoofs, and the slight jingle of accoutrements. As we passed the black walls of Farrell's shop, I recalled the papers found in Grant's coat, and the reference in Fagin's note to a rendezvous at Lone Tree. Probably that was the spot where the two had been accustomed to meeting. If so in the past, why not now as well? Suddenly it occurred to me that it was at a place called Lone Tree that the infamous men had gathered for their attack on Delavan's wagon train.

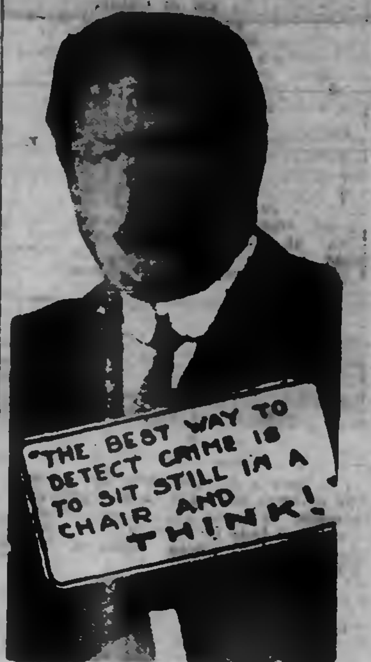
BURNS DISCOURSES ON DETECTIVE ART

The Well Known Detective Says That Honesty at the Bottom of Success

"Be honest, boys!"

William J. Burns shot out those words, and banged his two fists down hard on the table.

It was "Burns the detective." "Be honest—just honest—and that's about all there is to this whole game. Any boy at all who is honest, really honest by nature, can become a successful detective," he added, "if he possesses average keenness of intellect and a trained mind. But with every other quality, if honesty be lacking, he will fail—fail utterly and ignominiously.



"THE BEST WAY TO DETECT CRIME IS TO SIT STILL IN A CHAIR AND THINK!

DETECTIVE W. J. BURNS of International reputation

"A man who is not honest with others—who is a 'crook' by nature—cannot be honest with himself either," Burns declared. "And unless a man is honest with himself, he can't trail a sand-piper along a wet beach! For he will pretend, even to himself, that he is traveling the right route, though not really sure in his heart of hearts that he is!

"And why?"

"Because it is easier.

"Dishonesty always seeks the easy way.

"The entire status of the detective is undergoing a great change," Burns went on. "It is coming at last into it own. It 's the kind of a business that young men are going to be proud to be in in the future, although in the past it has been left too much to crooks.

"I have just taken into my force now several young college graduates. They are learning to be skilled detectives. They find the work fascinating, and besides it appeals to them as service to humanity.

"Whenever I look over a young man as a possible detective, I look for six characteristics. They are:

Honesty.
Resourcefulness.
Observation.
Imagination.
Analytical power.
Perseverance.

"With these qualities any young man can be trained to be a sleuth of the first water.

"A detective uses no uncanny methods for ferreting out criminals. He is only human, after all, you know, and can only call into the quest the common tools of humanity. All he can do is to concentrate and develop to their utmost the six powers I have named.

"The best way to detect crime is to sit still in a chair and think. In a given case the thing to do is to muster all known facts before you consider them carefully, analyse them and then formulate a theory on these facts.

"And that is where the college-trained mind comes in. It has been taught to make logical deductions.

"After the detective has sat on the seat of his swivel chair in his home office and thought and thought long and hard, as any business man would think, then he goes out to test this theory.

"Just as often as the facts seem to change, just so often must the theory change, so as to make it always fit the facts."

VARIOUS HOLY LANDS

Christians call Palestine the Holy Land because it was the birthplace of the Christian religion on earth as well as that of the Saviour whose birth, ministry, and death are inseparably associated with the history of Jerusalem and vicinity. To the Mohammedans Mecca, in Arabia, is the Holy Land, it being the birthplace of Mohammed, the saviour of the followers of that faith.

India is the Holy Land of the Chinese and other Oriental Buddhists, it being the native land of Sakya-Muni, the supreme Buddha. Elis, one of the several divisions of the ancient Peloponnesus, was the Mecca and the Jerusalem of the ancient Greeks. The temple of Olympus Zeus was situated at Elis, and the sacred festivals were held there each year. With Achaia it is at present a part of Greece.

The believers in the Shinto religion make annual pilgrimages to Hime-Kara, the immense stone pillar where their supreme ruler last stood while talking to men.

Cured My Cough In One Night

Relieved Me of a Throat Weakness That Resisted Every Treatment.

"SUFFERERS, FOLLOW MY PLAN"

"After being loaded down with a chronic hacking cough for months, you can imagine my joy at finding even a relief from it," writes Mrs. O. A. Tooker, of Monson, Mass., U.S.A. "I was troubled with an irritable throat weakness and asthma that simply defied every medicine I ever used. I was discouraged until a friend recommended Catarrhozone so strongly that I bought a dollar outfit from my druggist. I breathed in the healing fumes of Catarrhozone very deeply—used the inhaler five minutes every hour. After the first day I was better, and next morning my cough was gone. My asthma is cured, my throat weakness is gone, and I am well. For two years indeed, with the aid of Catarrhozone, I have kept perfectly well. I have also used Dr. Hamilton's Pills for constipation with grand results, and consider your remedies have done wonders for me."

Thousands of wonderful cures are reported every year. Catarrhozone does all that is claimed for it, and is certainly most efficient for colds, bronchitis, throat trouble, asthma and catarrh. The two months' treatment (large size), price $1.00, is guaranteed, smaller size 50c., sample size 25c., at all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

BOYS WANTED.

We have a good opening for a couple of boys to learn to run printing presses. This is a good opportunity for young lads to learn a good trade. Apply at Business Office of The Times.

A PIANO SNAP.

An upright Heintzman piano, slightly used, for sale at a bargain. Must be disposed of quickly as the owner has no room for it. For full particulars apply at Times Bookstore.

A Young Local Athlete.

Wilfrid Stratton, son of Mr. A. H. Stratton, at the annual field day at Trinity College school, Port Hope, won a silver cup for first place in the quarter mile event, and in the 220 yard dash for a silver cup, he was again first. He finished second in the 100 yard dash, and he was given a handsome clock.

Local Girls Succeed.

The many friends of Misses Clara and Hazel Craig, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Craig, Hunter street, east City, will be pleased to hear of their successful graduation at Roosevelt Hospital, New York City where they have been in training for the past two years.

He Made His Base!

A lady member of one of the Churches in Peterborough, is, to use the mildest term, an "ardent fan." On Sunday evening as her pastor was receiving the collection plates he slipped, partly fell and recovered his equilibrium. This lady was heard to audibly whisper, "Safe! He's safe!"

By His Shoes Shall Ye Judge Him!

A Lindsay carpenter has been arrested in that town and locked up as insane. He, according to the Warder, "was tramping the streets wearing a pair of carpet slippers on his feet." Possibly if the carpenter had worn top boots and spurs he would have been shot down as dangerous and running amock!

The Lost Was Found.

Early yesterday morning the two year old son of Mr. W. L. Hunter, of Douro, who had disappeared from the family home on the previous evening, was found almost numb and lying behind a log. The baby's cries attracted the attention of Mr. Arthur Bell, who with others had spent the night searching the whole farm for the missing child.

Company's New Name.

A Montreal despatch says that the Canadian General Electric Company, Limited, who own and control, as subsidiary companies, the Canada Foundry Co., and more recently acquired the Canadian Allis Chalmers Limited, have decided to consolidate and conduct selling organization of both companies under the name of "Canadian Allis Chalmers, Ltd."

Heavy Frost in Monaghan.

Yesterday a prominent resident of North Monaghan called at the Times office and noted that the frost of Sunday night had brought incalculable damage to the small fruits and garden truck in that fair township. He said that the rhubarb was frozen so solid that the sticks broke like glass. Strawberries, beans and other such produce are ruined.

Canadian Club.

The annual meeting of the Canadian Club of Peterborough, will be held May 28th at 6 p.m., in the Bank of Montreal Chambers. Nominating Committee for 1913-14 will present its report and an amendment to the constitution in regard to restriction of the number of past presidents are the executive considered.

Birds in Trouble.

A prominent citizen of Belleville, is going to sue that city because his flock of ducks, after bathing in the Bay of Quinte, return home with their plumage soiled by sewerage from the local gas works. Next thing Peterborough knows, Lindsay will enter action because this city fines her birds of paradise when caught here.

A Schedule for Drunks.

As there are so many requests, mostly without excuse, made by drunks to have their names omitted from the local papers, the local reporters have formed a schedule of prices for such omissions:

Drunk (hobo)	.10
Ordinary drunk	.50
Drunk and disorderly	1.25
Drunk and D. with scrap	2.50

He Sails June 17th

At the Sunday morning service in St. John's Church, the Rector, Rev. Canon Davidson, announced that he would sail on June 17th for a two and a half months' absence in England. He exhorted the congregation to put their shoulders to the wheel so that neither they nor the Church may suffer by his absence. In his sermon, based on the needs of State and Church for better leaders, the Rector said the City of Peterborough is in need of stronger leaders.

Former Local Man Drowned.

Telegrams from Regina, Sask., received by Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons, notify them of the death of Mr. W. C. Davidson, formerly of Peterborough, and manager of their business in that city. It appears that Mr. Davidson, in company with Mr. Hindle, who is a traveller for Turners, took an excursion to Lebret, Sask., where they went out in a canoe. The frail craft upset. Mr. Davidson was drowned, but Mr. Hindle was saved. Up to a late hour the body had not been recovered but diligent search was being made.

Big Day With K. of C.

Victoria Day was a red letter day at the fine new home of the Knights of Columbus, on Simcoe Street. Some sixty members were initiated and given degrees. The morning session was devoted to the giving of the first degree, the second was exemplified in the afternoon and the the third degree conferred during the evening. Many visitors, most of whom stopped at the Oriental, National Snowden and White Hotels, were present from Lindsay, Cobourg and other places. The Knights now have a membership of about three hundred.

Anxious About Relatives.

Dr. McClelland, Brock street, is anxiously waiting news from Long Beach, Cal., where thirty-three Canadians were drowned on Saturday. Mrs. McClelland and the doctor's mother, went to California some time ago and were at Long Beach until some days ago, when they went to Los Angeles. They were to return to Long Beach on Saturday and Dr. McClelland assumes that they would be sure to take in the celebration of the day. Should the Toronto evening papers of last night not contain a list of those dead or injured, the doctor was to have acted on a suggestion made by The Times and send a night telegraphic message of enquiry.

Horse Had To Be Shot.

On Sunday afternoon a horse belonging to Mr. T. Meyers, of the Cereal Co., driven by Messrs. A. A. Perris, of 576 Bethune Street and H. Moore, of 677 Aylmer Street, took fright at an auto driven by Mr. Cunningham, of the Peterborough Music Co. The animal tried to turn and upset the buggy attached, throwing the two men from the latter. Mr. Moore was badly injured about the hip by falling on the hub. The horse managed to break loose from the conveyance and sped on swiftly to the corner of Dublin and Aylmer streets. Here it tried to do a roller skate act on the pavement, slipped and fell. One of his front legs was broken in three places. P. C. Reid, with one shot from his automatic, ended the poor creature's sufferings. The horse was worth $125.

CITY IN PARAGRAPH

The Guelph Baseball Club are guests at the White House.

Among the decorations for Victoria Day was a huge Union Jack from their hall, with the letters "T.A.S."

The Mission Band of St. John's Church met yesterday afternoon for the last time until after the summer holidays. Refreshments were served.

Farmers coming to the city yesterday, noted that the trees and culverts were covered with frost from the cold of Sunday night.

There were some 3,000 people at the ball game on Saturday, several of whom showed signs of being sane at times.

The funeral of the late Joseph McClelland was held to Little Lake cemetery on arrival of the C.P.R. express yesterday.

The adjourned inquest into the death of Roy Bolton, killed by an automobile a few nights ago, will be continued to-night in the Council Chamber at 8 o'clock.

An inquest was held last night at Comstock's Undertaking parlors, on the death of the late John A. Liddell, killed at the C.P.R. station on Friday night.

About 150 members of the S.O.E., on Sunday, held their annual church parade. They attended Murray street Baptist Church, where Rev. Mr. Webb conducted a special service.

Mr. Frank Montgomery yesterday received a night letter telegram from his son Will, at Vondo, Sask., stating that the latter had purchased a important pedigree stallion, at a big price.

Ex-Mayor Rush, who acted as Cadi at the police court yesterday, made a record. He handled eight drunks with eight concomitant fines, and no "kick" in 13 minutes, 27 seconds.

A resident of Monaghan, who had tarried under the city white lights last night, told a Times reporter about 27 pounds of bass he had captured in the Otonabee. As it was the exhibitation of a city visit talking, his name is not mentioned, as this is close season.

Senate To Kill Navy Bill Fate Of Measure Decided

Party Whip Has Been Swung Hard--Sir George Ross Takes Stand Against Bill

Few Disaffections Are Expected--Senator Ellis to Vote With The Conservatives

Ottawa, May 27.—The Liberal majority in the Senate held a final caucus this morning, when it was decided to move an amendment to the Naval Act, which will mean killing the bill. "We agreed at the last caucus," said Sir George Ross at the close, to your correspondent, "to hold another conference after Senator Lougheed's speech. There were new developments and the meeting was very short."

"Will you move an amendment?" he was asked.

"I think so," he replied.

"Along what line will it be?"

Submission to Electors.

"I think you can anticipate that there will be an amendment along the line moved by Senator Lougheed when the Naval Service Act was introduced in 1910, requiring that the bill should be submitted to the people before it becomes law."

Senator Ross' speech is being waited with a great deal of interest, and it is understood that the Liberal leader is preparing to make the effort of his life. It is believed that he will take a strong Imperialistic stand while moving the amendment which will mean the killing of the measure.

Power Questioned.

There are many at Ottawa who still doubt whether the Liberals have any power to move any amendment on account of the bill being a money bill. It is possible the Liberals may get over this by moving the amendment, not to the bill itself, but on a motion of Senator Lougheed that the second reading be now taken up. A fine constitutional point is certain to develop.

Large Majority.

There are persistent rumors that the Liberals are far from united. However, the party whip has been swung pretty hard, and it is not likely there will be many disaffections. Senator Ellis, of St. John, is almost certain to vote with the Conservatives but how many more there will be time alone will reveal. With the swearing in of the new Senators the Liberal majority is now 23.

Startling Disclosures at Ottawa

Ottawa, May 27. — The danger of leaving a Government too long in power was never plainer than in the case of the ords of whose departments Laurier Government, the recs have produced some startling disclosures since this parliament began. "The worst yet" was before the House on Monday, when in reply to a statement of Hon. F. Oliver, a minister arose and said that the books of the department of the Interior were full of allotments of Western lands to Liberal members. The particular one under discussion was that of Cash, M. P., and Martin, M.P., both of whom had had extensive allotments of quarter sections made to them which they disposed of to their own profit. It is unnecessary to say that revelations produced surprises that are painful even to a jaded house such as this is.

A FEW SUGGESTIONS FOR THE FARMER

Mr. Finch Miller, the local Immigration Agent, has received a communication from H. A. McDonnell, Director of Colonization, Toronto, enclosing some valuable suggestions to farmers, to assist them in solving the labor problem. Any farmer interested may see the communications at Mr. Miller's office.

BODY HAS NOT YET BEEN RECOVERED

Nothing further has been received here regarding the recovery of the body of the late W. C. Davidson, manager of J. J. Turner & Sons' branch factory in Regina, and a former local boy, who lost his life on Saturday at Lebret, near Regina, by the capsizing of a canoe.

Instant Postum
Is in thousands of homes where health is valued.

Former tea and coffee users who have felt the pinch of indigestion, headache, heart disturbance, nervous irritation, etc., have written by the score, telling of remarkable benefits following the change from tea and coffee to Instant Postum.

A level teaspoonful in an ordinary cup of hot water dissolves instantly and makes it right for most persons.

A big cup requires more and some people who like strong things put in a heaping spoonful and temper it with a large supply of cream.

Experiment until you know the amount that pleases your palate and have it served that way in the future.

"Thanks for the sample of Instant Postum sent me. I had been drinking coffee for a long time and thought it would be difficult to give it up, but was mistaken.

"While I was drinking coffee I always felt exhausted and I weighed but 112 lbs. After using Instant Postum I soon recovered and now am as healthy as any person can be. I now weigh 120 lbs and am steadily gaining in weight." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Postum comes in two forms.

Regular (must be boiled).

Instant Postum doesn't require boiling, but is prepared instantly by stirring a level teaspoonful in a cup of hot water.

Both kinds are sold by grocers everywhere.

VETO OF NAVY BILL BY SENVTE

Sir. Charles Tupper Says Such Action Would Be Intolerable

London, May 27.—"For a non-elective irresponsible Senate to take advantage of the existence of a temporary Liberal majority in the House to reject a measure of the character of the present Naval Bill, would be unprecedented," said Sir Charles Tupper to a Morning Post representative to-day.

"If their purpose was to force another general election their action would practically amount to taking control out of the hands of the Government, a position which no Government with a loyal majority, fresh from the country would tolerate. If the purpose was to render the bill inoperative by suspending its operation until after another general election had been held, the Senate's action would be equally unconstitutional and equally intolerable.

Serious Consequences.

"But the most serious consequence of this action would be its effect on foreign nations. One of the great object of Mr. Borden's naval policy was to proclaim to the world the solidarity of the Empire in naval defence. If the Senate rejects the bill the very opposite will be proclaimed to the world, and it is inevitable that certain nations who have no particular love for England would interpret the failure of the Naval Bill to pass the Senate as an evidence of the disruption of Imperial defence."

For this reason among others Sir Charles still refuses to believe that the Senate can possibly be guilty of this unpatriotic action.

CORNER'S JURY CENSTRE THE LOCAL STREET CAR HEADLIGHTS

Last night the adjourned inquest on the 14 year old boy, Ernest Roy Bolton, killed accidentally on Park street, near Weller street by an auto driven by R. C. Heard, on May 20th, was held. The first witness heard was Dr. Eastwood who performed the autopsy and then Dr. M. McCullough. Their evidence was strictly technical. The motorman and conductor on the north bound street car, from behind which the boy, on his bicycle, taking the wrong, or west side of Park street, rode to his death.

In a few words, to eliminate the evidence of the other witnesses, except possibly that of an electrical engineer, an eye witness of the catastrophe, which latter is an epitome of general public opinion, all went to prove that the absurd and dangerous head lights of the local street cars should be cut out.

The jury, on hearing the evidence, brought in the following verdict:

"We, your jury, empanelled to enquire into the death of Ernest Roy Bolton, which occurred on the night of May 20th, on the corner of Park and Weller streets, find that by the evidence, that he came to his death by being struck by an automobile driven by Mr. N. C. Heard. Mr. Heard is exhonorated from allblame as he was prevented from seeing Roy Bolton by the strong headlight of the street car, and by Roy Bolton turning directly in front of the automobile. It is strongly the opinion of this jury that headlights of the street car should be reduced." J. M. Brooks, foreman.

The jurymen decided to give their fees of $2 each to the family of the deceased boy.

ANOTHER WAR CLOUD LOOMS BETWEEN BULGARS AND GREECE

Servians Have Thrown off the Mask and May Bring on General War

London, May 27.—The Balkan League is dead and another war is in sight. Servia has thrown off the mask and has addressed to the Bulgarian Government a demand couched in the terms of an ultimatum, in favor of a revision of thetreaty alliance between the two countries. This means that Servia refuses to admit any indebtedness to Bulgaria, whose troops broke the force of the Turkish attack in Thrace, thereby enormously simplifying the task of the Servian and Greek forces in Macedonia.

Sofia Foresees War.

It may be taken for certain that Bulfaria will decline to accept Servia's demand for a revision of the treaty.

In Sofia war is regarded as inevitable. The Government has behind it the full support of the country and the war feeling is rising hourly. Already 8,000 troops are massed in the neighborhood of Sofia, and every day sees the strength of this force heavily augmented. Troops, too, are being hurried forward in Macedonia.

The Bulgarian Government, it is stated, formally has invited Russia to take up the role of arbitrator, which she accepted more than a year ago. The Russian Government has replied that she is ready to abide by her promise, provided the two parties are ready to submit to her verdict, and the Balkan alliance remains intact.

All Eyes on Russia.

To both of these conditions Bulgaria has consented, although neither of them was stipulated when Russia was first approached by the conflicting parties.

All eyes will now be turned toward St. Petersburg. If Russia is determined to act as an impartial arbitrator she could with great influence she enjoys, both in Servia and Bulgaria, easily impose her verdict in this lamentable conflict. Unfortunately there are grounds for fearing that the Russian Government is swayed by influences that have little in common with the mission that lies before it. In diplomatic circles the situation is regarded with intense interest.

LOVE PAYS FOR KILLING HIS WIFE

With Head Erect and Step Walked to Scaffold to Die

Owen Sound, May 27.—Standing on the scaffold at 7.40 this morning in the jail yard at Owen Sound, Charles Henry Love, in a promised confession, gave to the world his dying message, for at 7.52 the trap was sprung and pulsation stopped at nine minutes after the drop.

Love murdered his wife at Ceylon, or Flesherton Station, a small village, on December 9th, 1912. The confession read:

Reads Humanity a Lesson.

"I want Mr. Maloney, my spiritual advisor, to tell the people that I would like them to take warning and when the Spirit of God strives with them that they should immediately yield and not put off salvation until the eleventh hour, and not act as I have acted for twenty-four years—a wasted time—serving the devil, which should have been spent in the service of God. For over twenty years the spirit of God strove with me, but I refused to yield. And look at me now. Even at this late hour God has forgiven me, and I die in peace. But I leave the world with the awful thought that my life has been wasted. He had mercy on my soul, and He is willing and able to save me even now. Read Isaiah i. and 9, John vi. and 57, I John i. and 9, Matthew xi. and 24, and Psalms 23 and 24."

Read by His Minister.

The paper on which the above was written was signed "Charles Henry Love." At Love's request the confession was read from the scaffold by the minister who accompanied him to the place of execution.

With his head erect and his step firm, although he wore a fixed expression, the murderer went to his death without anything interfering with the carrying out of the sentence. The body was cut down 23 minutes later and buried in the cemetery, because relatives did not want the quicklime process, and the county consented to pay.

Albert Holmes of Ottawa, acted as hangman.

THE TRENT CANAL

(Contributed.)

Anyone reading an editorial in the Review of last Friday cannot but think of the expression "damning by faint praise." The article referred to is about the contemplated, in fact assured, completion of the Trent Canal. Earnest advocates of the Canal, who have made a study of this great Canadian public utility, and have urged on the Government for the past thirty years the immediate construction and completion of this water-way as a cheaper means of transporting Western grain to the sea-board, must have said to themselves, on reading this editorial, "Preserve it from its friends." The idea of any sane man asking the Government to spend immense sums of public money on such a public work on the chance that "it would be of immense benefit to Peterborough, though it seems improbable that the Canal will ever get much heavy traffic. But the barging of grain down the Canal from Georgian Bay might profitably be carried on, and this would be of great assistance to the Peterborough mills. It is possible that some excursion traffic might develop . . . . . . for a small yacht party." I defy the editor of the Review to produce from the worst enemies of the Canal any such condemnation of the whole scheme. I can imagine what the late Mr. John Carnegie, former proprietor and editor of the Review, would have said, could he have forseen this article. He would rather have burnt up every issue for a month than have had such an article appear in its columns. Mr. Carnegie was one of the Royal Commission appointed by the Dominion Government to go into the question of this Canal. The Commission travelled all over the continent and examined the Canals, interrogating members of Boards of Trade. After two years' work, the Commission reported, recommending immediate construction of the Canal, on the grounds that it would be a great through water-way. If the Review is as ignorant about the Canal as its editorial would indicate, it should observe strict silence. The Review would thus better serve, and better please the people of the Canal district. I see in a recent issue of The Times that the steamboat men and those directly interested in the Canal are petitioning the Government to have alterations made in the Canal's construction. Among the claims put forth that "the Trent Canal connecting with the large grain carriers of the Upper Lakes will be the most economical route for transportation of the surplus grain of the North-West Provinces to the seaboard." Surely they know more about the possibilities of Canal traffic than the editor of the Review. It is to be regretted that the Review's libel on the Canal's future should have been published.

HANOVERIAN THRONE IS TO BE WEDDING PRESENT FROM KAISER

German Emperor Grants Independent Duchy of Brunswick to His Daughter

Berlin, May 27. — The world's mightiest three monarchs, Emperor William, King George, and the Czar, witnessed an event of dazzling magnificence, probably the event of the most overwhelming splendor in late years—the marriage of the daughter of the Kaiser to Prince Ernest August of Cumberland. Amid pomp and pageantry, the three monarchs flanked the altar, where the "sunshine of my house," as the Kaiser has feelingly described, his daughter, and the youthful Prince were made man and wife.

The ceremony and the brilliant festivities which followed it were worthy of the historic occasion which marks the obliteration of the ancient feud between the house of Hohenzollern and the dethroned Guelphs.

THE WEDDING GIFT.

In an eloquent toast delivered at the marriage feast, the Kaiser made direct intimation that it would not be long before his son-in-law with his bride would be called to higher duties, namely the government of the bridegroom's ancestorial Hanoverian realm. "It will surely 'ere long," said the Kaiser, "be vouchsafed to you both to serve and care for others."

That means but one thing — that the supreme "War Lord's" wedding gift to his daughter and her soldier lover is the throne of the future independent Duchy of Brunswick.

OVERWHELMING SPLENDOR

The matrimonial alliance, sealed in the chapel of the grey old Berlin schloss, is destined, therefore, to be marked in European history in letters of red. It would deserve a niche of its own purely from the standpoint of its overwhelming splendor. No Royal coronation has ever surpassed it in glittering magnificence. No stage manager, however gifted, could produce anything so dramatic. Such a blazing array of jewels and such a riot of color as radiated from a thousand multi-colored uniforms and gowns were seldom seen. It must have satisfied fully the Kaiser's love for dazzling pomp.

GUNS FIRE SALUTE.

The wedding ceremony ended at half-past five o'clock with the exchange of rings between bride and groom. At once the Wannsee battery of artillery outside the castle began to thunder a salute of thirty-six guns to tell the populace that the "little Princess" and the Cumberland's heir were man and wife. Unter den Linden and other streets leading from the castle had been choked with people since early morning. When the echo of the guns had ceased they sent up volley after volley of cheers.

NEW SENATORS TAKE OATH

Sworn in Yesterday Morning and Take Their Seats in The Evening

Ottawa, May 27.—The new Ontario Senators, Mr. E. D. Smith, Col. Mason and Mr. Archie McCall, all arrived in Ottawa this morning and repaired at once to the Senate Chamber, where they took the oath and subscribed to the roll. Mr. J. J. Donnelly, who as member for South Bruce, was at Ottawa, was also sworn in this morning. All four new Senators will be introduced in the House this afternoon before the debate on the Navy commences.

The new Senators were the subject of many congratulations. They are regarded as desired acquisitions to the Upper House. Col. Mason stated this morning that he did not consider his appointment would interfere with his continuing as President of the Home Bank. Mr. Donnely was a very popular member of the Commons during the past two years had proved a very able and energetic whip from Ontario. It is not likely there will be a successor as whip appointed until next session.

It is expected that the writ for the South Bruce election made necessary by Mr. Donnelly's transfer to the Upper House will be issued very shortly.

PRESBYTERIAN CONGRESS

Toronto, May 27.—Delegates are beginning to arrive in the city for the Presbyterian Congress, which opens at Massey Hall on Saturday afternoon. These are from far and near, and by the end of the week there will be a large influx from all parts. The committee in charge of billetting are finding difficulty in securing accommodation for the thousands of delegates, and from information received to-day at the headquarters there are many who have not as yet been placed.

A huge map of the world, stretching across the entire length of the platform and depicting Toronto as the central point from which all mission-lines radiate to foreign fields, will give the interior of Massey Hall a striking appearance when the Congress opens.

NUGENT'S SARSAPARILLA—PRICE FOR large bottle, 100 full doses, 75c. and well worth it, too. It's better to take no medicine at all than to depend upon cheap concoctions that are compounded to sell at low price and a big profit just because there is a large demand for certain remedies at certain seasons of the year. There are so-called Sarsaparillas offered to us to sell to our customers at 75c a bottle that would bring us a larger profit than Nugent's Sarsaparilla sold at 75c. Nugent's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, arouses the torpid liver, drives out all impurities, cleanses and tones up the system, and helps Nature throw off the dullness that comes from indoor life of winter. It arouses energy, brightens the eye, clears the brain, gives lightness to the movements. Nugent's Sarsaparilla is not the only thing you will find in this drug store. We make a specialty of Nugent's Remedies. Nugent Drug Co., 355 George St., directly opposite Cressman's store.

THEIR LITTLE SCHEME

Lovers Take Time by The Forelock and Earn Honeymoon Money.

BY FRANK FILSON.

"But a whole year is an eternity, Muriel," pleaded Frank Crawford, as he bade good-by to his fiancee, Muriel Lee, upon the stoop of her boarding house. "Why have you so strong an objection to getting furniture on the installment plan? There are several perfectly reputable firms and it won't be such a great drain on our income."

Muriel was adamantine. "My dear," she said for the twentieth time, "I won't start married life in debt. We've got to have two hundred dollars to begin to furnish our apartment. Now, you be patient, and I will be, and we'll each save up a hundred during the coming twelvemonth."

Frank went away disconsolate and Muriel went to bed and cried herself to sleep.

But on the next evening Frank was back, jubilant. In his hand he held a copy of the evening paper.

"Look, dearest," he cried, thrusting it before her eyes. "Do you see this? Mumford & Curtis have promised a hundred dollars to the first one of their employes to get married. And Caber & Roche, not to be outdone, have made a similar offer. Now, then!"

"But, my dear boy, you aren't an employe of either firm," protested Muriel.

"No, but don't you know I can arrange to begin my vacation tomorrow morning? And those department firms always want help of some kind. Why, tomorrow morning I can get a position at eight dollars a week as a packer, and we'll get married at noon."

"Suppose they don't pay?"

"Of course they'll pay. Why, the newspapers will be full of the story. They won't dare go back on their agreement."

"But the newspapers!" said Muriel, pouting.

"But a hundred dollars!" said Frank. "Muriel, darling, won't a single hundred do?"

"Well," said Muriel, after an interval of thought, "if you can really get that position I'll—I'll meet you at the marriage license bureau at half-past twelve. Which firm are you going to try?"

"Mumford & Curtis," answered Frank. "I know a man in the packing department. He'll take me on."

"You're sure it won't be Caber & Roche?"

"Sure. Why?"

"Oh, nothing. I just wanted to know," said Muriel. And they spent the evening figuring out what a hundred dollars would buy. Frank Lee left her in high glee at eleven o'clock. On his way home he read and re-read the newspaper paragraph a dozen times, to make sure that he had not deceived himself.

His first act on awakening was to read it again. His second was to telephone to the office, asking that his vacation might be counted as commencing from that morning. To effect this was easy, for he was one of a large force of clerks in the big life insurance office where he was employed, and his work could easily be undertaken by others. Then he put on an old suit and went down to the big department store of Mumford & Curtis, which stands, as everybody knows, at Seventh avenue and Hollis street.

He had intended to apply to his friend, the assistant head of the packing department, but on second thoughts he decided that this might lay him open to suspicion. So he went, instead to the mailing department.

"You want a job?" queried the woman superintendent, "What can you do?"

"I've had some clerical experience," answered Frank. "I need a job in the worst kind of way," he added. "I'm willing to start in at anything so that I can get employment here." He had never spoken more truly.

"Well," said the superintendent, "I believe they want some addressers just now. Write your name on this piece of paper. That's all right. Now I'll take you to Mr. Briggs."

"You Want a Job?" Queried the Woman Superintendent.

Yes, Mr. Briggs could use an addresser. But the pay was only eight dollars a week. However, there would be chances of advancement.

"Would you mind giving me a written engagement?" asked Frank guilelessly. "Just a line to say that I am engaged here, so that I can show it to [illegible], or to anyone who wants proof that I have a position?"

"He fell for it," Frank announced to Muriel later. "He tumbled right in. Well, I worked at full blast till noon. I had to work, Muriel, to keep from jumping up and shouting. And at the stroke of the hour I was up and out of the office and across the square and down town on a surface car—and here I am."

And Muriel, blushing divinely, entered the office of the marriage license registrar with him, and five minutes later they emerged, carrying the coveted paper that gave them the right to me made one, and stood up before the minister and were actually one. And then:

"Come along to Mr. Mumford," cried Frank, seizing his wife round the waist and waltzing down the steps with her, to the amazement of passersby.

Twenty-five minutes later they were in the presence of the head of the great firm himself. Something about Frank's face, something in his attitude, had so impressed his secretaries, door keepers and office boys that he had passed them unscathed.

"Well, sir?" inquired Mr. Mumford, turning round in his chair. "Be seated, madam. What can I do for you?"

"You can hand me a check for a hundred dollars," answered Frank, blithely. "We were married this morning—and here's the certificate." He slapped it down before him.

"Bless me!" exclaimed Mr. Mumford. "This is very sudden. Are you Mr. Percy Higgins in the accounting department?"

"No, sir, I'm Frank Crawford of the mailing deaprtment."

"I never heard of you in my life," replied Mr. Mumford severely.

"I'm surprised at that," answered Frank, solemnly. "Why, Mr. Briggs engaged me to address envelopes this very morning."

"What? What? You were only engaged this morning?"

"I believe, Mr. Mumford, that your offer made no reference to length of service. Of course, if it was not meant I can obtain a position with Messrs. Caber & Roche." And Frank turned on his heel.

"Stop!" shouted Mr. Mumford. "Have you actually had the nerve to—Why, I'll have to offer a hundred dollars again if I pay you—if I pay you. Confound you, why didn't you play this trick on Caber & Roche?"

"I attended to them," spoke up Muriel quietly. "I worked there as a wrapper this morning in the house goods department. We thought we'd get the money from you first and then hurry over there. You see, Mr. Mumford," she said, pleadingly, "we want to start our honeymoon this afternoon."

Mr. Mumford was choking with laughter.

"Jeffreys!" he called to his secretary. "Make out a voucher for a hundred dollars and take this lady and gentleman to the cashier's office. And say, Jeffreys, call up our advertising manager. I want to add something to our notice. And that," he added, turning to Frank, "will make Caber & Roche 'come through.' A happy honeymoon to both of you!"

The process of staking a mining claim in Canada consists in planting a stake—a section of young tree—known as the discovery post—at the real or alleged point where the vein shows. On the sides of this are inscribed the staker's name, or that of the party for whom he is staking, the number of the miner's license, the date, etc. Out from that are planted stakes at the four corners of the claim, 20 chains by 10 chains apart. The usual mining claim is about 40 acres, but upon certain occasions, such as the opening of the Gillies Limit, they have been reduced by a special act to give more people a show.

The police authorities at Scotland yard estimate that our friends the suffragettes have done at least $5,000,000 damage to property during the past three months. At that rate they will do $20,000,000 damage in a year. And yet one year's drink bill would pay for forty years' such damage. And in the publican's case the $800,000,000 is just the beginning of the damage. And yet there is a national outcry against the suffragettes, while the publican's work is tacitly approved.

Stuffy Feeling About the Nose Relieved at Once

Tells How to Cure Hawking and Spitting, and Drive Out Catarrhal Colds.

Isn't it miserable to have [illegible] up feeling in the nostrils, [illegible] scarcely able to draw a full breath. When Catarrh gets into the nose you're bound to know something is radically wrong.

A dead sure cure, and a simple one to use, is Catarrhozone; you just breathe it—that's all. You see Catarrhozone Inhaler sends healing piney vapors through the nose, throat and lungs, and these antiseptic soothing vapors are death to colds or Catarrh.

Thousands testify every year that nothing ever discovered will cure a cold, or help the throat like Catarrhozone. Mr. Everett L. Wasson, of Blair, N.B., writes:—"About five years ago I took a cold in the head, and Catarrh set in. It kept increasing by leaps and bounds. I kept putting off getting anything until at last I found I would have to. After trying several things I heard of your remedy, "Catarrhozone," and procured a bottle and began using it. I was not long in finding out I had struck the right thing. I am recommending Catarrhozone to all who have Catarrh, etc."

THE FATE OF THE SENATE.

Prime Minister Borden, at his Toronto meeting, uttered a thinly veiled threat to reform the senate in the event of that body rejecting the Naval Bill. It is usually the party in opposition that has little use for the senate and from which the demands for reform come. Now we have the government party, whose programme is being held up by the upper house and which says that "if the Senate stands in the way, the Senate must go," or words to that effect.

The reform of the senate or abolition thereof, says the World, is a good programme, but the Senate should be reformed, not because it rejects any particular measure, but because the time is ripe for that reform. There have been several proposals looking to alter the character of the Senate. One is to make it partially elective. In that way there would be an infusion of new blood every four years which would render that branch of Parliament more susceptible to public opinion.

Both parties have used the Senate to reward faithful followers who have passed their stage of usefulness in the more representative body, or campaign contributors who have perhaps never offered themselves as candidates for election. Making the Senate partially elective would still provide opportunities for rewarding party loyalty with positions of honor and involving no great sacrifice of time and labor.

Mr. Borden, whatever the outcome of the navy bill, ought to seriously consider the reform of the upper house. It is unfortunate for the Senate that it appears at this time to be following the behest of a defeated party in the house of commons in opposing a proposition that should never have created the slightest division in Canadian sentiment.

ELECTRIC CURRENT TO NURTURE PLANTS

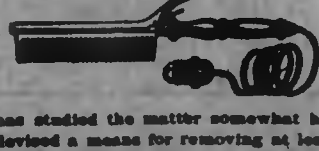
Problem Which is Also Being Worked Out in Canadian Electrical Development

If electric current can stimulate and strengthen the vitality of the human body, why should it not nourish and nurture plant life with equal success. This is the question William Stahl, an Evanston, Ill., electric-gardener, asked—and answered by electrifying his little farm and it is also a question which is being worked out in connection with the development of Hydro-electric power throughout Canada. He raised a series of crops of beans, tomatoes, beets, potatoes, corn, melons and other garden fruit, each and every one of which came to maturity several weeks ahead of those on his neighbors' farms. He even planted a second crop late in the summer and brought it to a successful harvest after the frost had killed off nearly everything else on the surrounding farms. Moreover, the vegetables grown on the Stahl farm were of a size and flavor that no neighboring farmer equaled. His electrical farm does not differ in appearance from other farms save in the poles set in the fields which might be mistaken for climbing poles for vines were it not for their unusual height and the wires connecting them. There is also a network of wires running underground, these being placed at a depth of about a foot and a half beneath the surface, and from 10 to 20 feet apart, while the overhead wires are strung about a foot apart. It along these wires that morning a evening the electrical current is turned on from the main switchboard energizing the soil and making it especially productive. The power is supplied by the city electric lighting plant at from $2.50 to $4 per acre for the crop season. The electrical treatment is started just when the plants begin to come out of the ground, and is continued until the crops are about ready to be harvested. The original cost of the instalation of the electrical machinery is not excessive, and the cost of the current is more than offset by the saving on the cost of manual labor for while the farm must be plowed and otherwise tended in the ordinary way, the gross amount of time expended on it is considerably less than that given to the ordinary farm because of the speedier growth and harvesting of the crops.

WILLIAM STAHL
An Illinois man turns current loose among his vegetables and raises two fine crops in one season.

MAN-MADE LIGHTNING A GOOD HAIR DRIER

"I've just had my hair washed and can't do a thing with it." One of the reasons there can't be a "thing" done with hair that has just been washed is that it has not been dried properly. When it is dried before a fan or in the wind it becomes tangled, and in getting out the tangles the owner of the hair fluffs it up so that it is just a flying mass. An electrician who has studied the matter somewhat has devised a means for removing at least a part of the trouble by designing an electric drier. He has combined with a metal comb an ordinary curling iron that can be used either as an iron or a comb. The tines or teeth of the comb are heated by the electric current and dry the hair thoroughly in combing it out.



A Dual Duct

A subway to carry the mails and serve as a duct for underground wires is planned to relieve London's congested streets.

More than 600,000 men are employed in working the railways of the United Kingdom.

CANADA'S WHEAT CROPS

Only Four Countries of Northern Hemisphere Ahead of Dominion

Canada stands fifth on the list of wheat producing countries in the Northern Hemisphere. Leading the procession is the United States with 621,338,000 bushels; followed by the Russian Empire with 836,404,000; India, with 370,414,000; France with 390,142,000; and Canada, with 224,851,000 bushels. Behind Canada comes Italy and Hungary, with 165,997,000 and 190,243,000 bushels respectively. Great Britain and Ireland raise 64,851,000 bushels. The figures are the latest obtainable.

Sir.—I read some days ago that a young banker of Macon, Ga., lost his life by taking, in mistake, a seven grain tablet of bi-chloride of mercury? If such an amount of this drug can cause death, why are tablets as strong as seven grains made.

Reply—Bi-chloride of mercury is put up in tablets of the strength you mention for making a solution for external use and sometimes for the use of ladies for domestic purposes.—Ed.

RICH WESTERN LAND

The Lillooet District of British Columbia Has Many Attractions

Pioneers who have gone into the country between Newport and Lillooet, B. C., declare that there is nothing that can be grown in the temperate zone which cannot be produced without profit in the territory to be opened up by the Pacific Great Eastern. From tidewater over the summit from Newport, with the exception of the Pemberton Meadows, a dense forest of cedar, fir, pine and spruce stretches all the way to the west end of Anderson lakes. Then there comes a section which only needs irrigation to make it the most fruitful section of the province. The water powers are there, but they are undeveloped.

Between Newport and Lillooet there lies a country which is not only full of agricultural possibilities, but is also a sportsman's paradise, containing trout lakes, great wildernesses full of game, and plover and partridge.

Fruits of all kinds grow in abundance. The only drawback has been the lack of transportation facilities. Lillooet itself is one of the historic places of the province. It had its birth in the Cariboo rush of the early sixties, but the discovery of rich placer ground just north of the townsite checked the rush towards Carriboo, and even to-day remnants of miners' cabins and discarded sluices tell the tale of when Lillooet was a gold camp producing several million dollars worth of gold dust. Even now Chinese and indians make a living by washing the gold out of the river sands, though the result is not sufficient to attract the white miner, though with the opening up of the country hydraulic mining may prove successful and profitable. The Bridge river district has copper, gold, silver and lead in abundance.

Why London Was Chosen

The proposal to hold the Turko-Balkan peace negotiations in London appears to have emanated from the Porte, which, besides desiring that they should take place on some neutral ground, also wished to enjoy the advantages of Sir Edward Grey's advice.

The British Government agreed to the suggestion, and expressed gratification at the confidence shown by the belligerents. The Bulgarian Premier, M. Gueshoff, was especially pleased at the choice of meeting place, and in the course of an interview said: "I spent my youth in England, and studied at an English University, and learned to love and admire the English people."

FENIAN RAID GRANTS

Applications for Fenian raid grants continued to pour into the militia department at Ottawa, and indicate a misapprehension of the qualifications necessary to secure the $100. Included in the thousands who are laying claim to the money are many in the lower provinces where simply the proclamation was read without the troops going to the front. It is estimated there will be about 20,000 claimants. The number actually on service was around 10,000, and a third of them are dead.

SPORTING NEWS

BASEBALL.

Columbia, Mo., May 27.—Miss Georgian Clark, a student of the University of Missouri, suffered a fracture here today. Miss Clark was playing in a practice game when a foul ball struck her.

New York, May 27.—Baseball players are public characters and photographers may take their photographs in action without their consent, according to a rule of Magistrate Butts in police court today. The case decided was brought by the national baseball committee and the New York Baseball Club against a moving picture concern which had taken photographs of games without a permit from the management. The plaintiffs contended that the civil rights law had been violated. The pictures in question were taken during the world's series.

Perhaps it is the fat salaries that is making the big league men play so early in the season. Ten and twelve innings are as common now as they are apt to be toward the latter part of the season when it can be seen that every game counts heavily with the leaders.

GOLF.

New York, May 27.—Local golfing circles are interested in a report from London to the effect that Abe Mitchell, the English "workingman" golfer, may enter the United States amateur and open championship this summer.

Mitchell, who was the runner-up in the English amateur golf championship at Holyoke last year against John Ball, is chauffeur to Sir Abe Bailey, the South African mining magnate. He has played golf all his life, taking his first lessons at Ashdown Forest, where other members of his family have distinguished themselves at the game.

He played for years for the Cantelupe, a workingmen's club, but was unknown until last year, when he got into the final with Ball.

Considerable feeling was aroused over this match, which was won by Ball by one up for 38 holes.

MOTOR.

A most gorgeous addition to the list of prizes for the third annual 500-mile international sweepstakes race, which will be staged at the Indianapolis motor speedway, May 30, is found in a gold and silver punch bowl, valued at $2000, which has been donated for the event by Findelsen & Kropf of Chicago, manufacturers of Rayfield carbureters. The only stipulation which is attached to it is that the winner must be equipped with a carbureter of the firm's make to claim the prize. Besides the bowl, a cash prize of $1000 is offered by the concern, under the same conditions which determine the award of the trophy.

Legal refutation of the claim that the speed of an electric automobile is too low was given recently when Philip E. Whiting of S. R. Bailey & Co., Inc., was fined for overspeeding in his Bailey electric roadster. The trial also brought out the simple control of an electric, Whiting bringing the car to a complete stop, without dragging tires, in less than 20 feet.

RING.

Frank Klaus, acclaimed "Champion of the World" in France after his victories over Carpentier and Papke, must have been having a little fun with the Frenchmen. The following is a paragraph that appeared in "L'Echo des Sports," one of the largest French sporting publications, last week:

"Frank Klaus has returned to America. He declares himself enchanted with his visit to France, and desirous of being matched with no other than the heavyweight champion of his own country, Luther McCarty."

And to add to the above comes "La Boxe et Les Boxeurs," a famous boxing paper printed in Paris. "La Boxe" says:

"Interviewed upon arriving in America, Frank Klaus declared that he had come to fight, not caring which, either of the white hopes, Gumboat Smith or Luther McCarty."

RUSH FOR WEALTH

Broker's Failure in Business Leads to Happiness Through Strange Inheritance.

By GERTRUDE MARY SHERIDAN.

Warren Talcott took a last look at the long counting room that had once been his, but was so no longer. Some men were erasing the sign, "Talcott & Co., Stocks and Bonds," from the glittering plate glass windows. He passed the elevator starter, who halted him by gently catching his arm.

"I've heard of it, Mr. Talcott," he said, his voice quivering. "Sir, my wife didn't sleep all night over it. She says there's a room for you under the roof you helped us save all your life long, if you'll take it."

"Thank you," nodded the broker. "Tell your wife it's such people as you that make a man think there's some good in the world."

Men turned and noted the tall, graceful figure as Talcott passed. There was always something royal in his bearing. Even with "Failure" written that day against his business career, a dauntless courage showed in his kindly, steady eye.

A bootblack whom he had started in business ran after him, winning the ever indulgent smile of the generous broker.

"Mr. Talcott," he said hurriedly, "I've got a savings bank book that says three hundred dollars. I want to loan it out, you see—"

"I see you are a good, loyal friend," interrupted Talcott, placing a gentle hand on the shoulder of the grateful cripple.

The speaker walked rapidly from the business center. Finally he sought the most secluded corner of an humble restaurant and sat down—to think.

Frame and face relaxed as he drew out his pocket book. It contained only a few dollars, all that was left of a magnificent fortune. His mind ran back over the past few months. He recalled the warning of his doctor—overwork. He remembered how he had one day given a wrong order. Another when the floor of the stock exchange had gone all black before him, and he had made a confused error in business judgment and lost over two hundred thousand dollars. Then the verdict of the doctor, nervous collapse, and now—the crash.

"You Are Almost Rich Again."

Anyhow, he had paid dollar for dollar. He tried to think of hard work, a constitution rebuilt, but never again the mad rush for wealth, holding in the end only bitter dust and blight.

Talcott had brought half a dozen letters from the office. He opened them in turn. Five were of no consequence. The last one startled him. It announced that an old pensioner of his, James Gregory, living in another city, had died leaving him his entire estate—"apply at once to Dockkery & Bates, attorneys."

Twenty-four hours later the senior member of that firm escorted the broker to a secluded city court. In the center of a vacant lot stood a large covered wagon. It had windows like a house and was divided into three living compartments. Seated on the grass reading from school books were three small boys. Near by was a young lady of about eighteen. She was sewing and four little girls were copying her industry.

"Mr. Gregory has left you two horses and that wagon, with all hands included," said the lawyer, grimly. "In addition, here is the deed already recorded in your name, to a six hundred and forty acre tract of wild land a hundred miles from here, up near the pineries."

"And this is my legacy!" murmured the perplexed Talcott.

"Exactly. Miss Gregory will explain the details," and the lawyer left him.

Talcott advanced towards the young lady and introduced himself. He fancied he had never seen so kindly and peaceful a face. Her simple story was soon told. Her dead father, an eccentric, had taken in charge, gradually, some homeless orphans. For them and herself he had worked, traveling about the country in the wagon and doing odd jobs as a tinker.

When the broker asked her as to her plans for the future, she only looked helplessly and pathetically at him.

Warren Talcott did some thinking. Then, as if he had suddenly and refreshingly come to the threshold of an odd, new, inspiring life, he realized that his pensioner had made him his legatee, confident that his old friend would work out the problem aright.

They talked for over an hour. Lightly Talcott told of his real situation. He suggested a plan. He needed rest, a change, the doctors had said. Here it was, ready made to order. They would go to "the farm," as he called it. It was their only tangible inheritance. He went away for a time, sold his watch and other jewelry, handed a roll of bills to Miss Gregory, and said:

"There is room for me with the boys. You must be the purse bearer and housekeeper. The motive of your father's life was to save these poor little outcasts. It is a noble purpose. I shall try to continue his plan."

Talcott went to sleep that night feeling the great load of a broken past lifted from his mind. The odd, the new, the unknown life attracted him.

He awoke with a headache the next morning. The reaction had come. By noon he had a fever, by nightfall he was delirious.

For him the next twenty days were a blank. He awoke to find himself, weak and emaciated, lying on a bed in the boys' end of the wagon. He glanced from the window. As far as his eyes could reach was a level emerald stretch—grass, flowers, trees everywhere.

Outside two of the boys were carrying a pail of water. They passed out of sight around to the other side of the wagon. From that direction there came the clang—clang of metal sounds. Talcott tried to arise. He sank back weakly with a groan. Instantly from the wagon living room a light form came into view. It was Miss Gregory.

Wonder-eyed and grateful, Talcott learned how the brave little woman had nursed him, had carried out the plan of the journey to "the farm." Here they were, the children industrious and happy, and oh! such grand fortune, and her eyes danced as she told him of it.

"A railroad is building right through your section," she explained, "and the wagon stands on the new town site. A man has been here daily to see you about selling him some of the property."

The man appeared next day. He looked Talcott over shrewdly. Then he said:

"I see you are a keen business man, so I'll talk sense. I am a land speculator. I'll give you ten thousand dollars for a quarter section, and fifty per cent of what I make on another quarter section selling town lots."

"You mean," replied the broker gently, "twenty thousand dollars and seventy-five per cent."

"I guess I've figured wrong," said the speculator. "You're up to snuff. Well, I'm ready to trade."

"And what is your plan now, Mr Talcott?" asked the motherly guardian of the little coterie of children a few days later. "You are almost rich again."

"I shall build a nice roomy home," answered Talcott, "and we will all grow up with the country. My dear, good nurse and true friend, I have found hope and ambition where I thought there was nothing but despair. I have found love, too. Will you share the new home, as my wife?"

And when the blushing, lovable Audrey Gregory answered "Yes," Warren Talcott felt that he stood at the portal of a veritable Eden.

Little Lies.

I had something of a shock the other day. I told a man something in what I thought was confidence and he immediately went off and told it. When I saw him again I asked him what on earth possessed him! He said he was awfully sorry, simply didn't think. "But I can fix it up," he said. "The next time I see that fellow" (the one he told) "I'll simply say you didn't say it." "But I did!" said I. "Why, certainly," said he. "But I don't think so much of little lies. You simply have to tell them to get on in business." Well, he went on off, and I don't know just what to think about it. But this I do know, that the next time that particular person says such and such a thing is so, I may and I may not believe it. That's the answer, it seems to me, on the subject of lies, big or little. In the last analysis they may or may not be immoral. But they lower at once the credit of the one who tells them.

SOME FAMOUS PEARLS

Largest Is Two Inches Long and Is Worth a Snug Fortune

The pearl is the only gem needing not the hand of man to bring to perfection, and history affords ample evidence of the intense fascination it has always exercised among the people of every age. It is the oldest object of personal adornment.

Indian mythology often speaks of the pearl, attributing its discovery to the god Vishnu, who is said to have caused it to be drawn from the ocean for his daughter, Pandaia. The records of the Romans, Babylonians, Persians and Egyptians also make mention of it. There was the wife of the Emperor Caligula, who, for a betrothal feast, decked herself with pearls to the value of $1,650,000 and Julius Caesar presented Servilia, the mother of Brutus, with a specimen valued at $250,000.

Coming to more recent epochs, we find that Philip II., King of Spain, paid $250,000 for a single pearl known as "Peregrina." Found in Panama, it was pear-shaped and weighed 134 carats. Another King of Spain, Philip IV., purchased one weighing [illegible] carats. It was brought from India.

France, also, owns some exquisite examples; but the biggest pearl known is that which was once the property of the banker Henry Philip Hope. Cylindrical in form, it is two inches long, four and a half inches in circumference at one end and three and a half inches at the other. It weighs 1,800 grains and is valued at $60,000.

It is known that the beauty of the natural pearl sometimes proves evanescent. To retain its shimmering splendor it needs air and light. Acids can affect them, and emanations from the skin can destroy the precious bloom, which, once gone, cannot be revived. Sometimes, too, owing to their comparative softness, they become scratched, and thus a source of anxiety to the owner. There is little wonder, therefore, that possessors of valuable necklaces should seek to provide themselves with duplicates which may be worn without fear and trembling.

COULDN'T KEEP ANY GOODS

Country Storekeeper Pretty Well Discouraged at the Perversity of His Customers.

"Have you crackers of any kind?" asked one of an automobile party as he entered a little store by the roadside nine miles from the nearest town.

"No, I'm just out o' crackers," was the reply. "I had some last week, but a man come along here the other day and bought all I had—darn it all! Seems like as soon as I lay in a stock of anything some one comes along and buys it all o' me, an' I got to bother round gittin' more."

"Have you any sardines?"

"Not a one. I got a dozen boxes a couple o' months ago, but some fellers on a fishin' tower come along the other day an' bought the last two boxes—plague take 'em! Seems as though I can't keep nothin' on hand for my customers!"

"Well, have you any oranges or fruit of any other kind?"

"No, I ain't. I got half a box o' oranges two or three weeks ago an' a auto load o' people came along and grabbed up the last of 'em the other day. I told 'em that if they tuk 'em all I'd jest have to git some more, an' I'd a good mind not to let 'em have 'em."

"My wife wants a spool of white thread. Have you any?"

"Sold the last spool I had Sat'day, dang it all! I tell ye, this keepin' store is mighty discouragin' business. Soon as you lay in a lot o' stuff some one comes in an' buys it all off'n you an' you got to hustle around an' git more. A man come in this mornin' an' bought the last bit o' cheese I had, an' here I was 'lottin' on havin' it last a couple o' weeks yet. It discourages me so sellin' things most as soon as I git 'em on the shelves that I've a good mind to sell out an' go back to farmin' where you ain't pestered the way you are when you keep store. I'm plumb discouraged!"—Puck.

TABLOID INFORMATION REGARDING BALKANS

The area of Montenegro is 3,255 square miles, considerably less than the size of Wales.

The population of Turkey consists of an extraordinary mixture of races. In European Turkey the Turks are about 2,000,000, the Greeks and Bulgarians, 1,300,000, and the Albanians 1,500,000. In Asia the Turks are about 7,000,000, the Kurds 1,000,000, the Greeks 1,000,000 and the Armenians over 2,000,000; while the rest is made up of Servians, Jews, Franks, Gipsies, Tartars, Circassians, etc.

The Balkans is the name given to the Balkan Peninsula, which includes the following countries: Turkey in Europe, with its possessions, Macedonia and Albania; Bulgaria, with Eastern Rumelia; Servia; Montenegro; and Greece.

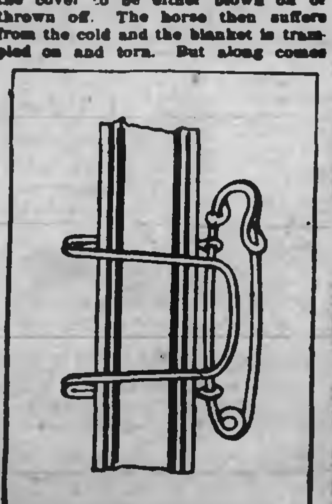
Servia is an agricultural country, where almost every peasant cultivates his own freehold. There is no pauperism in the sense in which it is understood in the West. There are a few poor people in Belgrade, the capital, but neither their poverty nor their number has necessitated an institution like a workhouse.

Bulgaria is a very small country, with a total population of only a little over 4,000,000, or rather less than Ireland, which it only slightly exceeds in area.

HORSE BLANKET CLIP

Hooks Into Breeching and Keeps Cover From Blowing off

No matter how carefully a man may blanket his horse, the wind or the animal's own restlessness may cause the cover to be either blown off or thrown off. The horse then suffers from the cold and the blanket is trampled on and torn. But along comes a man with a simple little fastener that prevents any such mishaps. A piece of wire is bent into a hook that opens upward. At the top is a large safety pin by which the device can be fastened to the blanket in an instant, or it can be left fastened. All that need be done, then, to keep the cover on is to hook the wire under the breeching strap, and no matter how hard the wind blows or how much the horse stamps and switches his tail, there it will stay until the owner unhooks it.



PINS FAST TO BLANKET.

To Clean Bottles

The usual method of cleaning the inside of a bottle is to put some sand or nails in it, partly fill it with water and shake well. A much better way is to take an old key chain and attach it to the cork of the bottle with a small screw eye and put in some water and shake. The chain should be long enough to hang straight down from the center to the bottom of the bottle and reach the side. A chain attached to a screw eye can be kept near the kitchen sink for washing the milk bottles every morning.

Cost of Living in Jerusalem

The inhabitants of Jerusalem are beginning to feel severely the general increase in the cost of living, says a consular report. The scale of wages and salaries is low, and, as elsewhere it adjusts itself very slowly to the advance in the prices of the necessaries of life. For foreigners who desire to live comfortably in the way they would at home, Jerusalem is certainly not much cheaper than the average city of the same size in the Western world. It is estimated that the general increase in the cost of living in Jerusalem in the past ten years has been at least 50 per cent.

(1) Water Works pipe laying. (2) Sewer pipe-laying. (3) Pump House, Filter House and Reservoir. (4) Foundations for Water Tower. (5) Steel water tower and supports. (6) Water Works Intake Pipe and Well. (7) Sewage Pumping Station. (8) Sewage Disposal Works. (9) Bridges or Viaducts.

Each tender must be sent in a separate envelope and endorsed "Tender for Waterworks pipe laying, New Barracks, Toronto, Ont.," "Tender for Sewer pipe laying, New Barracks Toronto, Ont.," etc., as the case may be.

Each person or firm may tender for any number or all of the above works but a separate tender must be submitted for each work. (No bulk or conditional tender will be entertained.)

Plans, Specification and forms of contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained at the office of Messrs. Chipman and Power, Engineers, Mail Building, Toronto, Ont., and at this department.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent (10 p.c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order.

EVERY LITTLE MOVEMENT

In Some Kinds of Business It Has a Cost That's all Its Own

In a large publishing house in Chicago which mails annually millions of circulars, form letters and sample copies the saving of even a single motion in the process of folding, enclosing or addressing means an economy, says a writer in Business, that is well worth thinking about.

When this idea first occurred to an officer of the company he devoted several weeks to a careful and analytical study of the work of the mailing department. The girls who folded and sealed the letters had formerly been allowed to arrange their work to suit themselves. A very little observation of their methods showed that there was much room for improvement.

Experiments were made to determine, in just what order each movement should be made in folding the letter and enclosure, picking them up and inserting them in the envelope. Crude as the first attempt necessarily was, it immediately increased the output of a girl. Further study revealed ways not only of eliminating many motions but of shortening the distance traveled by the hands in the motions that remained.

Finally a plan was devised for arranging and handling the envelopes and their enclosures so that each hand on the completion of one motion, was in the proper position to begin immediately the next motion. The final motion—that of throwing the filled envelope upon a pile—was entirely eliminated by placing a large basket upon the floor directly under the point where the enclosures were inserted in the envelope.

When the enclosures were once inside the girl simply let go of the envelope and it fell into the basket, gravity doing the work formerly done by the girl. After the girls had been taught the new methods of filling envelopes, their output was nearly four times as great as it had been when they were doing their work haphazard in any way that happened to occur to them.

COINS OF LONG AGO

Workmen Find 500 Silver Pennies Beneath Church Floor

On behalf of the Crown claim was laid to some 500 silver pennies of the reign of Henry III., found by workmen employed in removing Steppingly Church, on the Duke of Bedford's Woburn estate.

The coins, which are dated between 1248 and 1272, were concealed five feet below the present chancel floor and one foot below the ancient floor. It is thought that they were a votive offering in recognition of a safe return from abroad and placed before a shrine of the Virgin Mary by Peter di Vitalis, who was rector of the village from 1247 to 1273.

He who does not respect confidence will never find happiness in his path. The belief in virtue vanishes from his heart, the source of nobler actions becomes extinct in him.—Auffenberg.

Big Expropriation Case

One of the largest expropriation cases ever heard of in western Canada came to a conclusion when the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway agreed to pay the Union Iron Works of Calgary the sum of $20,000. The company's right of way went through 100 feet of the iron work's property and under the railway act, only that amount of land could be expropriated. On the amount to be paid for the strip in question the arbitrators could not agree, two of them deciding that $2,000 was a proper sum and the others that $1,400 was sufficient. By the settlement with Mr. Edward Knapp, the owner of the works, the railway acquires the whole property, 175 feet by 122 feet, for $20,000.

Big Fine for Dope Fiend

A record fine for a "dope fiend" was that imposed at Montreal by Recorder Geoffrion on George Gervais. Gervais when arrested had two large packages of cocaine in his possession. He had been previously convicted of selling the drugs, and the Recorder imposed a fine of $500, or six months in jail.

In regard to the sale of SANOL & SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES, might say I have been handling the goods for about three months. I was obliged to put in SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES to supply one of my customers, who is now completely cured, and whom, I believe, has sent a testimonial to your office. Another customer ordered SANOL and I was obliged to stock it. This gentleman was so well satisfied that he has sent bottles to his friends. Up to this time I had never really taken much interest in the preparations but when customer after customer would come in and tell me about what SANOL had done for them, I came to the conclusion it would be worth my while getting behind SANOL and recommending it to my customers. This I have done and I have heard nothing but words of praise for SANOL and SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES. I am,

CHAPTER XXVII—Lawrence finds Miss Mortimer in soldier's uniform, acting as a scout under her brother's name. Explanations follow.

Could this, by any possibility, be the same spot? I drew my horse back beside Conroy.

"Ever heard of a place called Lone Tree?" I asked quietly.

He rubbed his head thoughtfully.

"Not just about here, sir. We camped over east of there once, maybe a year ago, down in a hollow where there was one big tree standin' all alone, kind of an odd-lookin' tree, sir, and seems to me, the guide said the place was called something like that. Say, Tom," to the nearest dragoon, "do you remember that Lone Tree where we camped when we were out huntin' Tarleton?"

"Sure; in east Medford. There was a [illegible] on the side of a hill. I got some buttermilk there."

"Wasn't that what the guide called the place—Lone Tree?"

"Derned if I know, sergeant. Don't recollect hearin' the guide say anythin' 'bout that, but the woman at the house told me her place was called Lone Tree cottage—so I reckon he might."

This was a chance worth trying.

"We will take the first turn to the left, and have a look at the place," I said. "Conroy, you and Tom ride ahead, and keep your eyes open."

We reached the hollow where the big tree stood, about midnight, but found little reward. The house on the hill had been burned to the ground. Near the tree however, we discovered evidence of recent campfires, one not yet cold, and apparently there had been quite a body of men camped there lately. Conroy manufactured a torch, and scouted about, finally reporting:

"I don't know how many were here, sir, altogether, but there was a lot o' horses picketed over near the creek. I reckon the last of them didn't leave until dark tonight, an' they rode north toward the main road. There was maybe a dozen in that party."

We followed the general direction the fellows seemed to have taken, Conroy and I on foot, scanning the trail by aid of a pine knot. The dust lay thick on the clay road through the cut, where we had charged the foragers, and it was easy to see the band had turned east. There was but one conclusion possible; if this was Fagin's gang of cutthroats, as I suspected, then they were either returning to their sand caves in Monmouth county after a raid, or else were starting forth on some new project near at hand. Whichever was true, Elmhurst lay in the direction taken. Determined to learn the truth, we pressed forward, riding rapidly, yet exercising the precaution of keeping two scouts well in advance. It must have been nearly three o'clock when we reached the summit of the low hill within a few hundred yards of the house, and found the two scouts awaiting us.

My first glance across the ravine revealed the outlines of the house above the low trees of the orchard. All appeared peaceable enough, and I felt a sudden relief. There were lights burning on the lower floor, streaming through several windows, while up stairs one window was ablaze. Late as it was, this illumination was not surprising, however, as the care of the wounded man would necessitate night watchers, while, no doubt, Claire would anticipate by reaching there before morning. All this flashed over me, as my eyes hastily surveyed the familiar surroundings. Then I became aware that the elder scout was reporting.

He Give Utterance to One Grunt and Then the Barrel of My Pistol Was at His Head.

"There's quite a bunch of horses picketed down there in the ravine, sir," he said, pointing toward the right.

"How many?"

"Oh, maybe twenty-five or thirty; Joe an' I couldn't get very close, as there's a couple of men on guard on top of the bank. A hundred feet down you can see 'em plain against the sky."

"Wasn't what you saw a cattle herd?"

"No, sir," positively. "They're horses, picketed in line like a cavalry troop, and they've got their saddles on."

What this all meant could not be guessed at, but there must be some scheme of deviltry under way.

"Have either of you crossed the ravine?" I asked, endeavoring to reach some conclusion.

"Yes, sir, Joe did. He was up in the edge of the orchard?"

"See any men?"

"Not a man, sir, outside," answered the other. "But I saw shadows against the curtains on that lower floor. I couldn't tell how many; they just come an' go, only they wasn't dressed alike."

One thing was sufficiently certain—we could gain little information remaining where we were.

"Sergeant," I said, determining swiftly on a course of action, "take your men, dismounted, across the ravine, and into the orchard. Keep under cover, but get as close to the house as you can safely. Picket your horses back there beside the road."

"And you, sir?"

"I'll take Tom with me, and we'll circle that horse herd, and come up to the house from the rear. I want to discover where those fellows are, and what they are up to. See this whistle, sergeant?"

"Yes, sir."

"It gives a sharp, shrill blast. If I blow it twice, get your men inside the house instantly. I'll not sound it unless I need you at once. We'll wait here until you get across."

The disappeared into the black depths of the ravine, moving cautiously and with little noise. Tom and I plunged down the steep slope, feeling our way through the darkness, but moving to the right, toward where the scouts had indicated the horses were being herded. We skirted these, creeping along the opposite bank behind a fringe of bushes, certain that the darkness concealed our movements from the two men on guard. We crossed fifty feet above, gained the top of the bank, and crawled down, sheltered from observation, until we were directly above the two guards. Peering cautiously over, we could easily distinguish the black outlines on the hillside below.

One man was standing up, leaning against the trunk of a small tree, while the other was sitting on the ground, his head bent forward, and his hat drawn low over his eyes. Neither had uttered a sound, but as my eyes strained through the darkness I began to perceive details, which awakened a new suspicion. The fellow standing up wore a cap and no coat, and his hands were clasped about a short, sawed-off gun. He had none of the appearance of the soldier, but the other man apparently was in uniform, although I could not distinguish its character. What instantly attracted my attention was the fact that his hands were evidently tied behind his back. If this was true then he was a prisoner, and the other had been stationed there to guard him, and not the horses. Tom perceived this as soon as I, for I felt his fingers grip my arm.

"Creep around the edge of the rock there," I said, pointing. "That will bring you at his back, and not more than five feet away. Can you do it?"

He nodded grimly.

"Leave your weapons here," I added, "and when you spring, get hold of his gun so he cannot fire. I'll cover him the instant you strike. Go on."

He unbuckled his belt, and crept along to the right, so noiselessly that even I, watching his snake-like movement, could hear no sound. The guard did not move his head, and the other remained motionless, his face bent almost to his knees. Down below the horses stamped restlessly, and switched their tails. Watching each motion like a hawk, I saw Tom dip over the crest, and worm his way down behind the rock. The he disappeared, until, as he cautiously arose to his feet, his head and shoulders emerged shadowy just beyond. Realising he was ready, I got to my knees, gripping a pistol butt. Without a warning sound the dragoon leaped, his arms gripping the astounded sentinel with the hug of a bear. He gave utterance to one grunt, and then the barrel of my pistol was at his head.

"Not a word!" I said sternly. "Unclasp his belt, Tom. Yes, take his gun. If he moves, or utters a sound shoot him down."

I wheeled to face the other, who had lifted his head, and was staring at us through the darkness. He was no longer a mere shapeless shadow, but a slender, straight figure, and my heart gave a sudden throb.

"Who are you?" I asked sharply. "Eric Mortimer?"

"Yes," he answered, in evident surprise. "Do I know you?"

"No," and I cut the rope binding his ankles. "But I was searching for you. I am an officer of Maxwell's brigade; my name is Lawrence. Tell me first what has happened—why you are being held prisoner."

He stretched his cramped arms and legs, lifting his hat so that I saw his face dimly. In the gloom his resemblance to Claire was so remarkable that I involuntarily exclaimed:

"Heavens! but you look like your sister?"

"Like Claire! they all say so; you know her?"

"It is at her request I am here; you need not fear to tell me your story."

"Oh, I do not. I can see your uniform. But damn it, I don't know any too much about what is up myself. This is Red Fagin's outfit."

"I thought so. Where did he get you? How long have you been a prisoner?"

The boy laughed recklessly, his eyes upon the others.

"Well, my story is a short one, Lawrence. I had a fellow in the British service who occasionally gave me information. Word came to me to meet him at a certain spot—"

"You mean Captain Grant?"

"Hell! How did you know that?"

"Never mind; I do know—so you can go on."

"I had no intention of speaking names."

"Oh, let that pass. You may think Grant all right, but the rest of us know he is at the bottom of the whole matter."

"You mean he betrayed me?"

"There is no doubt of it. He is in with Fagin."

The lad drew a long breath.

"I half suspected it," he said slowly, "only it didn't seem possible. Now listen, and perhaps together we can make something out of all this. I went to the place where we were to meet, and had a talk with Grant—yes, it was Grant all right. He told me some things, but needed a day or two to get other information. While waiting I came over here to Elmhurst, and found Claire. She's the kind of a girl you can tell things to, and I wrote out what I had learned, and left some of my papers. Then I went back to Lone Tree. It was dark when I got there, and I rode right into Fagin and three of his men. They had me before I could lift a hand."

"Just wait a minute, Mortimer," I broke in, becoming suddenly aware there was a grayness in the eastern sky. "I want to creep in toward the house while it remains dark. You can tell the rest as we go along. Tom, take these ropes and tie your man up. Make him safe, and then come along after us."

"All right, sir. I'll fix the lad so he'll be safe enough for a while."

CHAPTER XXX.

We Attain the House.

"Come on, Mortimer, and we'll soon find out what is going on." I turned to the prisoner. "Where are the rest of your gang?"

"You'll find out for yerself, mister," he answered sullenly, "an' maybe damn quick too."

"They are in the grape arbor to the south of the house," broke in Eric. "That was where Fagin told them to lie quiet and wait orders."

"Then we will explore along the north side, keeping the fence between us. I've got a handful of men over there in the orchard. If you are both ready we'll go."

I took a look myself at Tom's rope-tying, and found it satisfactory. Indeed, in remembrance of my own suffering, I even loosened the strain a little, confident the fellow could never free himself unaided. Then the three of us, Mortimer armed with his late guard's gun, crawled up over the edge of the bank, ran without stopping across the open space, and crouched in the shadow of the fence. It was still dark, although a faint gray tinged the eastern sky-line, barely perceptible through the intervening trees. The great house, a hundred yards away, was but a blurred outline, distinguishable by the lights shining out through open windows. At that distance no sound reached us. However, if Mortimer was right, the way would be clear for our passage along the front, under shelter of the fence, even though a sentry was posted there, and we could creep up to the walls on the opposite side unobserved. All we needed to do was to advance with caution. Whispering directions into the ears of the others, I moved forward slowly, Mortimer close to my shoulder. I could see across the top rail of the fence, and the open space beyond yielded no point of concealment.

"Tell me the rest of your story," I said, speaking softly, "as we go along. Where did Fagin take you?"

"To a sand cave; we rode a night and a day to get there."

"Treat you all right?"

"Well as he could, I suppose. I had enough to eat, but was guarded closely, and the fellows were a bit rough."

"Did you gain no inkling of what they were up to?"

"No; the men I saw knew nothing, or pretended not to. I only saw Fagin twice. Once he came to assure himself that I was really myself. Somebody told him I was with Delavan in a fight over near Lone Tree."

"That was your sister."

"What! You don't mean it was Claire?"

"But I do. I chanced to be in that affair myself, and saw her. Later she, with three others—Peter, an Indian, and an Irishman—captured me, mistaking me for some one else, and took me to Elmhurst. As soon as she learned my identity she acknowledged her error. But I have not learned yet why she was with Delavan, or for whom she mistook me."

The lad drew in his breath sharply, gripping me by the shoulder.

"By the Lord Harry!" he exclaimed excitedly. "There isn't another girl in the Colonies who would have done it. I'll bet I can explain, but even I didn't think she would ever have the nerve to perform such a deed. I told you I left my papers there. I forgot them where I changed my clothes. You see I came out wearing the uniform of a British dragoon lieutenant, and had it all planned out to join Delavan, and guide him toward Philadelphia over the Lone Tree road. Just before I left our camp at Valley Forge on this trip I received orders from Washington to keep my eyes open for a courier riding from Philadelphia to New York with Clinton's plans of evacuation. Hamilton seemed to know all about this, and sent me special instructions. I talked of it with Claire, planned how I was going to waylay him, and together we fixed up those servants as soldiers to help me carry out the deception."

He paused, chuckling, and I halted, eager to learn the rest.

"And when you disappeared; when, perhaps, she heard of your capture, or suspected it, she assumed the discarded uniform and went forth in your stead."

"That's it, Lawrence. She would, if she thought it was right; if she believed such an act necessary to save my reputation. I'll bet she found the papers in my pocket, and mistook you for Clinton's dispatch bearer."

"There is no doubt of it," I said soberly. "And that wasn't all she did to protect you. It was the talk at Lee's headquarters that you had deserted. She stamped that a lie, by riding into our lines day before yesterday, bringing an exact report of where Clinton was marching. I didn't see her, but I heard all about it, and you get the credit. Washington told me with his own lips, and granted her permission to remove your father, who was badly wounded, to Elmhurst."

WOMEN FARMERS

Dairy farming as a profession for women and an aid to the solution of the problem of agricultural depression was advocated by Mrs. Gardiner, of Cheltenham, England, at the annual meeting of the Women's Agricultural and Horticultural International Union.

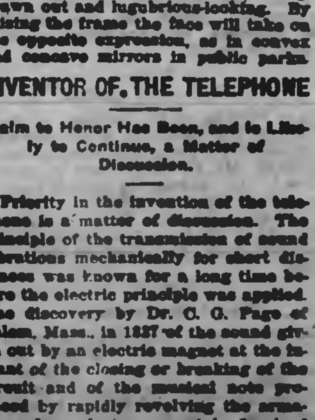
Mrs. Gardiner maintained that dairy farming afforded a good opening for women, and that in itself was sufficient excuse for bringing the matter forward. But it might also help to solve two problems, the problem of agricultural depression which was so trying all over Great Britain, and the problem of employment for women. There was any amount of scope for women who were trained as dairy farmers, and could get the capital to start them, and they would make a much better living at it than in many of the professions women now entered. The teaching profession, for instance, was frightfully overcrowded, and likely to become more overcrowded still. There was a much greater demand for properly produced milk than there used to be, and certainly in the case of women, unless they were going to produce the best sort of milk on the most up-to-date lines, they might as well not start dairy farming at all. Capital was essential, but if the working woman was inclined to work, and was backed up by somebody with capital, she had no doubt that commercially dairy farming for women could be made to succeed.

AN AMUSING ILLUSION

Objects Lengthen or Flatten as They Are Being Drawn

An amusing optical illusion is created by the device patented by a Pennsylvania man and shown here. Moreover, the apparatus is not difficult to make. Take six pieces of cardboard and fasten them hingedly together as depicted. They can then be moved either horizontally or vertically at will. Cut an opening in the upper horizontal flap and paste a writing pad in the lower horizontal flap.

Fasten a mirror to the inside vertical flap so that objects drawn on the pad will be reflected up through the opening at the top. Then set the apparatus up and proceed to draw, a face, for example, on the pad. By pressing the frame down and lengthening the angle of reflection, the face will be shown on the mirror long-drawn out and lugubrious-looking. By raising the frame the face will take on the opposite expression, as in convex and concave mirrors in public parks.



FRAME MOVES UP AND DOWN

INVENTOR OF THE TELEPHONE

Claim to Honor Has Been, and Is Likely to Continue, a Matter of Discussion.

Priority in the invention of the telephone is a matter of discussion. The principle of the transmission of sound vibrations mechanically for short distances was known for a long time before the electric principle was applied. The discovery by Dr. C. G. Page of Salem, Mass., in 1837 of the sound given out by an electric magnet at the instant of the closing or breaking of the circuit and of the musical note produced by rapidly revolving the armature of an electro-magnet in front of the poles were made the basis of experiments by many investigators and were important features of early attempts made to transmit sound and speech electrically. The theory that sounds might be made to vibrate a metal plate which would open and close an electric circuit and that a similar plate at a receiving station would be acted on electromagnetically and thus give out as many pulsations as there were breaks in the current was advanced by a French writer as early as 1854. Alexander Graham Bell, an American by adoption, though born in Edinborough, Scotland, in 1847, is the inventor of the speaking telephone, for which he was granted patents in 1876. An imperfect form of his telephone was exhibited at the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia in 1876. Before Bell's practical work Reis and a number of European scientists had evolved a primitive electric telephone which depended upon the interruption of the electric current rather than upon its variation in strength to correspond with the vibrations of the transmitter.

Do You Feel Moody, Irritable, Depressed?

When That Languid, Loggy, Easily-Tired Feeling Comes, Your Liver is Slow

Tells How to Cure Quickly.

"Even when I was young I was not robust and healthy like other girls. I suffered from headaches, and had sort of blue feelings that deprived me of the joyful spirits and pleasures other girls seemed to get. After I married I found I could not throw worries off like other women, and these full feelings of despondency and weariness made me very unhappy. There was no cause to feel so, and my doctor said my liver was sluggish, and this accounted for my poor color, my tiredness, langor and despair. The pills the doctor gave me were too purgative, made me weaker because they were too active for my constitution. Dozens of my friends recommended Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and they were so mild and helpful. Well, I never used a pill that acted so quietly as Dr. Hamilton's They were so comfortable to use, I was afraid they might not help. But in a week I knew they had been actively engaged in clearing up my system. They did the work of a tonic and blood medicine combined. I improved to a marvelous degree with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and I now maintain the most perfect kind of health by using them just once or twice a week."

It is Mrs. E. V. Erlanger, well known at Gloucester, who relates the above experience. She proved what you and all other, men and women, can prove—that Dr. Hamilton's Pills are best for restoring health and best for keeping the system in perfect running order. Don't be misled into using anything but Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. a box, five for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or postpaid by the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

At a meeting of the Building Committee of the Charlotte street Methodist church, held at the office of the chairman, Mr. G. W. Morrow, it was decided to commence immediately the construction of the new church and Sunday School. The new edifice will be erected on the Aaron Cox property, at the head of Simcoe street.

That Absinthe Case.

This morning the local police court will have, what actors call the "atmosphere" of Gay Paree. It seems that Ellis Armstrong is charged with dallying too long and frequently with "absinthe suisse" in a hotel. Ellis is not yet 21 years old. On the date set forth for his formal hearing Ellis was found to be conspicuous by his absence. Ellis came back for the holiday and was harvested.

A Former Local Sweepstake

Some of our older citizens will remember that the late Mr. W. H. Chamberlain, who carried on a saloon on the site of the Royal Theatre, used annually to conduct a 24th of May Derby sweepstake. Thirty years ago, the chief bets were won by a Cobourg man, $60 on St. Blaise; Kingston men were $30 and $20 on the next two horses, whilst a Peterborough man, now alive, won $5.

Peterborough Band 30 Years Ago.

The Port Hope News, writing about the 24th of May, 1883, celebration in Cobourg, says: "Peterborough Band, 28 men, under command of Chief Thos. Rutherford. Besides not taking a second place with any other brigade present, Peterborough is undoubtedly accredited with having by far the best band in Cobourg on Thursday. Both on the line of March and previous to their departure, the utmost enthusiasm prevailed.

A Quintette of Jaglets.

At yesterday's police court, five too ardent worshippers at the shrine of Bacchus were assessed $2 each for falling off the water-wagon. Among the quintette were Chas. McDermid, of South Monaghan, who seemingly forgot agriculture in a too ardent quest for extract de corn, W. Kelly and Jas. Roberts, lumberjacks, tried to boom the sale of intoxicants Jerry Toomey of Douro, who should have stopped east of the Otonabee, and Fred Martin, a stranger, and, consequently not posted on the potency of Peterborough booze.

Oft Drunk and Jailed.

Bobcaygeon Independent: County Magistrate Moore held court in the town hall Thursday when James Finley was up for being drunk in a local option district, some day in March. Messrs. W. C. Moore and L. Hadley were witnesses. Neither Moore or Hadley could swear that Finley was drunk on March 22nd. His Worship asked Finley was he drunk on the 22nd and Finley replied not guilty. So the date was changed to the 15th, and Finley being drunk so often, didn't know whether he was drunk on that particular day ot not, but to allow the proceeding to proceed. Finley admitted that he must have been drunk, so the Magistrate was obliged to impose the fine of $20 and costs, or 30 days in jail. Finley positively refused to pay the fine so he was taken out of the court room by Chief Nicholls and escorted to the county jail in Lindsay.

DEATHS AND FUNERALS

Funeral of Late J. A. Liddell.

Yesterday afternoon, the big establishment of Messrs. Matthews-Laing sent a beautiful floral design and incidentally closed operations, in respect to the memory of a recent employe, the late John A. Liddell. Among other tributes were a star from the Lock Works; an anchor from the Chosen Friends, a wreath from fellow employes of his brother, Elmer, in Goderich; and several wreaths and bouquets from friends both local and out of town.

Rev. J. R. Webb officiated at the church, while Rev. F. A. Conners officiated at the cemetery.

WEDDING BELLS.

Taylor—Best.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at 580 Bolivar street, the home of Mr. J. H. Taylor, when his daughter Gertrude J., became the charming bride of A. Edward Best, B.A., M.B. of British Columbia. The bride wore ivory silk draped with Carrick-ma-Cross lace. Rev. H. J. Keith officiated. Only the members of the family were present.

After the ceremony the bridal party sat down to a dainty wedding luncheon.

Dr. and Mrs. Best left for the West where they will engage in mission work among the Indians at Bella Bella, B.C., for a year. They are under appointment to West China the following year, going out under the Methodist Mission Board.

HOW TO ABSORB AN UNLOVELY COMPLEXION

(Phyllis Moore in Town Talk.)

The face which is admired for its beauty must have a satin-smooth skin, pink and white and youthful looking. The only thing I know of that can make such a complexion out of an aged, faded, or discolored one—I mean a natural, not a painted complexion—is ordinary mercolized wax. This remarkable substance literally absorbs the unsightly cuticle, a little each day, the clear, healthy, girlish skin beneath gradually peeping out until within a week or so it is wholly in evidence. Of course, such blemishes as freckles, moth patches, liver spots, blotches and pimples are discarded with the old skin. If you will procure an ounce of mercolized wax at the drug store, use like cold cream every night, washing this off mornings, you'll find it a veritable wonder-worker.

Another valuable natural treatment is a wash lotion to remove wrinkles which can be easily prepared. Dissolve 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pt. witch hazel. Bathe the face in this and you'll find it "works like magic."

NAVAL BILL KILLED IN THE SENATE, ROSS IS PARTISAN

Professed Imperialist, In Wordy Argument, Denies Existence of an Emergency and Moves for Delay in Defence Programme--Asks That Measure be Submitted to the Electors

Ottawa, May 28.—Continuing the debate on the Navy Bill, Sir George Ross, in the Senate yesterday, said that the Liberals were with the Conservatives equally anxious to retain the solidarity of the Empire. They were feeling their way how best they could express appreciation of their duty to the Empire. The question was whether the proposed contribution was the better expression of loyalty or the adoption of a permanent policy. He reviewed the action in the Commons, quoting the resolutions passed and expressions of opinion by Hon. G. E. Foster. He referred to the resolution advocating the speedy construction of a Canadian navy in close co-operation with the Admiralty.

A Mission Beyond Defence.

He quoted the pronouncement that the Imperial navy had a mission beyond that of defence; the spread of Christianity and the maintenance of peace throughout the world.

He quoted Mr. Borden to the effect that the Prime Minister agreed with Sir Wilfrid Laurier at that time on the establishment of a Canadian navy and deprecated the custom of contribution. As to the question of annual contributions he cited the Premier as being opposed to it as a policy that could not be permanent, as likely to cause strife between the parties and as a possible cause of friction between Canada and the Imperial authorities. Mr. Foster was quoted as advocating a navy that could have something of Canada's body, bones and national pride. These were the two sponsors of present resolution, said Sir George. Both sides had agreed on the previous programme.

Behind The Scenes

No doubt many of the readers of The Times have been wondering why the Government could not get its mind settled on the senator question before. The prospective nominees ran all the way from Dan to Beercheba. The Times is informed that the trouble lay in a fierce fight between the Irish Catholics and the French Catholics over their candidates, J. J. Donnelly, of Bruce Co., and Casgrain, of Windsor. Both are prominent men and have taken prominent parts in the House. Canada is getting too big for the bleacherite. reserved seats are not for them any more. That is a good thing for the constituencies, because it is usual for the bleacherite to let his constituency go and stand in with the government. The past record of many a constituency is a surprise on that account.

HE MET WITH HORRIBLE DEATH ON WEDDING EVE

William Steers Was Decapitated by G. T. R. Train at Agincourt Station--Had Purchased a Present for Bride

Toronto, May 28.—A particularly sad accident occurred at Agincourt station about 9.30 last night, when William R. Steers, a young lumber dealer, was instantly killed by falling between the wheels of a Grand Trunk passenger coach. He was completely decapitated.

The victim of the accident was 27 years of age and very popular in the district. Yesterday morning he left Agincourt for Markham, where he made several purchases, among them being a present for his intended bride Miss Nellie Penny, of Buttonville, whom he was to have married today.

Spectators Shouted Warning.

As the train drew into the station, Steers waited on the platform of one of the coaches until the train had come to a stop. As he stepped onto the station platform his foot slipped, and he was thrown backwards, falling between the wheels. None of the train crew saw the unfortunate man fall, and the signal was given to the engineer to go ahead. Several of the passengers who saw Steers' terrible position, shouted warnings to the train crew, but the engine quickly gained speed. The unfortunate young man made a desperate attempt to crawl out from under the coach, but was caught by one of the wheels and his head completely severed from his body.

Intended Bride Prostrated.

Hearing the shouts from the spectators, the engineer stopped the train, but it was too late. The body was picked up from the track, and carried into the station being removed later to the mortuary of one of the Agincourt undertakers. A coroner's jury was at once empanelled and the inquest was opened by Dr. Coutts, of Agincourt this afternoon.

The accident created a profound sensation in the village and throughout the whole countryside. A host of friends had been invited to the wedding, as both Mr. Steers and his bride-to-be were exceedingly popular. Word of the fatality was at once sent to Miss Penny at her home. The shock proved most serious, the young woman being completely prostrated with grief. Mrs. Steers, mother of the deceased, is also in a critical condition from shock and grief.

The body of John Caesar, a boss at the Creighton Mine, was found in Kelly Lake.

THE WEATHER.

To-day—Moderate winds; fine and warm weather.

BOTH ABSINTHE CASES DISMISSED YESTERDAY

The absinthe cases was tried yesterday. George McKenzie was represented by Mr. G. N. Gordon. Ellis Armstrong was first witness. He was working at the Royal theatre on the Saturday in question. He quit work at 11 p.m.. He was arrested on Friday, April 11th. He quit work that night at 10.30. He walked to the National. From there he went with two friends to the Montgomery House. at 10.45. He went with two friends into the bar. He called for and got a glass of absinthe. He only had one drink. He was served by Mr. McKenzie. He is 19 years old. They went to the American House. The absinthe made him stupid. He had been drinking for three years. He had got drunk on absinthe in Toronto. He went to the Montgomery House on Sunday night. He met McKenzie and said "this is a nasty mess I've got into." McKenzie replied, "They can't do anything to you, as absinthe is not an alcoholic drink." I said to McKenzie "perhaps we can arrange to fix things all right." He then went up for Harry Stinson, at the Montgomery House, but did not find him. Mr. Gordon told witness he was deliberately trying to blackmail McKenzie.

Mrs. Annie Armstrong, mother of last witness, testified to the boy's age.

McKenzie went into the box in his own defence. In 27 years he had never had a conviction registered against him. When Armstrong came in that night, he looked to be 21 years of age.

Harry Kingdon said he would take Armstrong for 21 years old; Mr. H. Clayton also said he thought Armstrong looked 21 years old. Mr. H. Armstrong, of the Examiner, said he saw his namesake the night the latter was arrested. He, Armstrong looked a good deal older then than to-day. Mr. Gordon suggested that a similar charge against Harry Stinson of the American House be included with the evidence in the first case. Both cases were dismissed.

Fred Cobbett, aged ten, of Kingston, may lose his eyesight as the result of a firecracker exploding in his face. He was blind in one eye.

Hon. Mr. Hearst addressed the Canadian Club at Owen Sound last evening.

TO PROHIBIT SALE OF FIRE CRACKERS

Toronto, May 28.—At the next session of the Ontario Legislature Toronto will probably apply for legislation prohibiting the sale of firecrackers or at least allowing sale under very close restriction! The matter was brought before the Board of Control to-day by Chief Constable Grasett, who reported that "there was no dimunition in the mode of celebrating May 24 by the discharge of fire-crackers in the streets, though, of course, for years there has been a by-law prohibiting the practice."

T. BURNS TO PROSECUTE TWO CALGARY PASTORS

Alleged Statements From Pulpit Anent McCarty Affair Basis of Action.

Calgary, Alta., May 28.—Tommy Burns announces to-day that he will prosecute Rev. C. J. Sycamore of the First Baptist church, and Rev. Sanford Marshall, of the Central Methodist, for statements alleged to have been made in their sermons on Sunday concerning the death of Luther McCarty. Rev. Mr. Sycamore is alleged to have stated the affair was a murder.

John Paff, a prominent North Easthope farmer, died twenty minutes after being stung by a bee.

Bishop of Niagara Calls for Gratitude at End of Clandestine Affairs

St. Catharines, Ont., May 28.—In opening the thirty-ninth session of the Synod of the Diocese of Niagara here this morning, the Bishop expressed gratitude at the new legislation against clandestine marriages. and stated in the course of his address:

"I am sure all were delighted and none more than our border clergy at the action taken by the Provincial Government to put a stop to such marriages, which take place in such vast numbers along the border of this Province. It is time the ministers of all religious bodies clearly understood that they have no object in this matter, save their own congregations. No minister is under any compulsion to marry unknown people, who come to his door, or to make his house a Aretna Green for runaways from the other side of the border. There is no question but that clandestine marriages which ought not to take place, are often the percursors of untold misery."

After extending thanks for the century of peace between Canada and United States, his Lordship said:—

In State of Chronic War.

"At present the civilized nations are living in a state of chronic war. each armed to protect itself from attack by its neighbor. This involves even in time of peace a war burden which is becoming intolerable.

"No principle can be settled by a war. The fact that one country has a more effective army or navy than another may be established. It may show that Britannia rules the waves or that she does not; but the justice of the injustice is not made apparent by a battle. Fortunately we are beginning to realize this in these days. Geneva, Paris and The Hague tribunals have disclosed to us a better way, and in the better way have led us to better results. And now the proposal which has met with favor on both sides of the Atlantic shall receive the recommendation of all Christian men."

OFFICER FELL TO DEATH

Lieut. Desmond L. Arthur Dropped Two Thousand Feet.

Montrose, Scotland, May 27.—Lieut. Desmond L. Arthur, of the Fifth Battalion Royal Munster Fusiliers, was killed to-day near here while practicing aeroplane reconnaissances with a number of other army officers. He was flying in a biplane at a height of 2,000 feet when one of the wings of machine suddenly collapsed and he fell to the ground.

PETERBOROUGH OLD BOYS' ASSOCIATION

(Special to The Times.)

Edmonton, Alta., May 27.—Peterborough Old Boys' Association was formally organized at a largely attended meeting in the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association the evening of May 21. The executive officers are:

Honorary President: M. Justice Beck of the Surpeme Court of Alberta; president, Lieutenant Colonel E. B. Edwards; first vice-president, Harold B. Burnham; secretary, F. L. Bradburn; executive committee, E. S. Clarry, J. R. McIntyre, Walter Dredge, W. B. Mullen and Fred J. Whitcroft.

"The objects of the association are to bring all former residents of Peterborough together," said President Edwards. "One of the first things to be arranged is a dinner, after which we expect to organize an excursion down the Saskatchewan river. We already have a large membership and we hope to add others during the summer.

"It is a pleasure to report that all the old boys of Peterborough have done well in Western Canada. Many in our organization are either in business for themselves or are in good positions."

LIQUOR CASES IN LOCAL OPTION NORWOOD

On Tuesday His Honor Judge Edmison. County Magistrate, held a court in Norwood. The judge remarked to a Times representative, that Tuesday was the coldest day. for May he had ever suffered. The Norwood hotels had no fires except in the respective kitchens and he had to sit for hours clad in an overcoat.

Three cases occupied his attention. One was that of a man charged with being drunk in a local option municipality. The other two cases were men charged with supplying liquor to minors. A fine of $20 and costs was imposed in each case.

MR. S. A. OKE GOT A BATH FOR NOTHING

Everybody knows Mr. S. A. Oke. Now, Mr. Oke is not of the drooping and die-away build. In fact some thin dyspeptic coveters of his generous build might insinuate that a course of Turkish baths would possibly have good results. Mr. Oke, however, is quite content with his figure and does not want Turkish baths. In fact, yesterday afternoon he took an entirely different kind of bath. As he was passing a George street millinery store, about 1.30 p.m., a man started to let down the awning. In that awning was about a barrel of water, the result of the day before's rain. Mr. Oke got it, and got it all.

A NOVEL PLEA THAT, LOSS WAS A BENEFIT

Toronto, May 28.—That Arnold Pringle had benefitted by losing an eye was the somewhat unusual reason given by C. H. Rudd in contending that he should not have to pay $1,070 damages to Pringle, was was decided by Chief Justice Meredith some time ago. He claimed that when a boy lost an eye, through an accident with fireworks on Victoria Day a year ago, he had got rid of a serious defect in the other orb. Rudd threw a Roman candle to the street, thinking it was spent and the little Pringle boy picked it up. Another bal, of fire came out of the candle into the boy's face. The boy's father had sued for $10,000.

Rudd's appeal was dismissed, and he must pay the $1,070.

WARM RAINS JUST WHAT FRUIT NEEDED

St. Catharines, Ont., May 28.—The warm, soaking rain of last night was just what the fruit-growers wanted. and they now are confident that the peaches and other fruits are just right.

The fruit has formed and looks healthy and firm, and, with June almost here. there is now little danger from frost.

"I consider we will have a record-breaking crop of peaches this year. The country need not worry about getting peaches," said a grower this morning.

DIED GIVING LESSON.

Stratford, May 28.—While giving a piano lesson in his study this morning, Walter Evans Jones, organizer and choirmaster of St. James' church, toppled over dead, from heart failure. He was a young man of fine physique. He came from Chatham to Stratford a few years ago.

Bomb Killed Chinese General.

Shanghai, May 28.—General Hsu Kao-San, generally known throughout the south of China as "Tiger Hsu," who commanded the Yang Chou troops throughout the revolution was killed yesterday by a bomb sent to him through the mail.

KAISER'S JUBILEE

Personal Gifts are Discouraged—Wedding Decorations Being Replaced

Berlin, May 28.—The Kaiser has intimated that he does not desire to receive personal gifts on the occasion of his jubilee. He asks those who wish to celebrate his reign by gifts to make them to educational, charitable and philanthropic institutions.

Jubilee week will be celebrated from June 8 to June 15. The wedding decorations are being diverted to be replaced by a more gorgeous display.

EMPEROR IMPROVED

The Issuing of Bulletins Will Be Suspended

Tokio, May 28.—The condition of Emperor Yoshihito was so far improved to-day that it said at the Aoyama palace the issuing of bulletins probably would be suspended. The Mikado was so far recovered yesterday that the doctors allowed him to receive several State officials in audience and discussed with them Governmental details.

BULGARIANS NOW PREPARING TO ATTACK THE GREEK ARMY

Several Clashes Have Occurred With the Greek Forces---Endeavoring to Drive Them Toward the Sea and Then Seize Their Positions

Salonika, May 28.—The most severe tension still exists between the Greek and Bulgarian armies facing each other some distance to the north of this city. Several clashes during which shots have been exchanged, occurred yesterday and today, and the Greeks accuse the Bulgarians of assuming the agressive.

In spite of the declaration made at the Bulgarian capital that the Bulgarian troops have been ordered to observe a moderate attitude, and to avoid conflicts with the Greeks, the Bulgarian commanders apparently are preparing to attack Eleutheria, with a view to gaining complete occupation of the dominant position of Mount Pangbaion. They have already placed guns on the crests of the hills to the southwest of Prava commanding Eleuther a. The Bulgarian troops have also occupied the heights commanding the village of Bujukta, to the south of Lake Doiran, and the town of the same name, which is occupied by the Greeks.

It is the belief of the Greek generals that the Bulgarians are systematically creating incidents, and endeavoring to drive the Greeks toward the sea and seize the positions varated by them.

Bulgaria has addressed a note to the European powers offering to submit to their decision the question of the future allocation of Salonika, according to the Reichspost.

COST LONG BEACH $30,000 TO CARE FOR VICTIMS OF PIER

Voluntary Relief Measures, Readily Forthcoming, Are Not It is Claimed, Admission of City's Liability for Damages

Long Beach, Cal., May 28.—All of the expense of funerals of the 37 persons killed in the pier disaster here Saturday and that incurred in the care of the injured, probably will be paid by the city of Long Beach out of a fund to be raised by a special tax levy.

The City Council last night instructed the City Attorney to prepare an ordinance calling for an election on the proposed tax. The Citizens' Relief Committee will provide the Council Thursday night with an estimate of the amount required. It is expected to reach about $30,000.

City Officials assert that voluntary relief measures now being taken by the municipality are not an admission of the city's liability for damages. An additional $2,500 for relief was appointed by the Council last night.

A cablegram of sympathy was received from Sir Thomas Lipton who was entertained here a few months ago.

TWO WIDOWS, ONE FIANCE, AND PERHAPS MORE, "MOURN" HIM

Chicago, May 28.—At least two widows and a fiancee are mourning the death of Homer E. Morrison, real estate dealer and the police are working on clues which may lead them to three other women who can claim the man as their late husband.

Morrison died last Thursday of what may have been poisoning. Two of his wives have complained that he took $17,000 of their money, and a widow who says he promised to marry her, admits she gave him $1,600.

Mrs. Homer Morsison says she married Morrison three years ago; Mrs. R. W. Thompson says she married the same man under the name of Thompson, seven years ago; Mrs. Pearl McDivitt asserts that Morrison promised to marry her next month. These three women live on the same car line without knowing the exittence of each other. Sometimes Morrison visited all three the same day.

Under the name of Thompson, the man posed as a claim adjuster, but for seven years kept Mrs. Thompson in the dark regarding his place of business. To Mrs. Morrison he was a real estate deales, but she never knew where his office was. By day he was manager of a rooming house on Chicago avenue, where he was never seen at night.

The police learned yesterday that Morrison had brought a woman to the rooming house about a year ago. He introduced her as his wife, and she spoke to women at the place, of their home in Evanston. Evidence indicates that he may have left a widow in LaSalle, Ill., and another in Barrington. Ill.

AFTER A DIVORCE ON ACCOUNT JOY-RIDING

Los Angeles, Cal., May 28.—"Beautiful clothes and jewels do not make a happy married life if your husband is joy riding with other women."

This Mrs. John N. Drummond, Jr., who is suing the son of the multi-millionaire tobacco magnate for a divorce on the grounds of desertion, cruelty and infidelity, has discovered, and it took her five years to satisfy herself that she was right. She maintained that wealth did not mean happiness.

At her home at 2135 Second avenue, Mrs. Drummond told for the first time of the causes leading to the breakup in what was known as the "ideal marriage."

LOVED HER HUSBAND BUT!

"I loved my husband," said Mrs. Drummond, "but I never knew where he was. Evenings he would go away and never say when he would return or where he was going. He led a high, fast life, leaving me alone with our little daughter.

"I knew Mr. Drummond was divorced from his first wife and that she was a beautiful and charming woman.

PETERBORO STILL DREAMING GUELPH TAKES ANOTHER

Yesterday was ladies day at Riverside Park, and a large number of the fair fans turned out, the stand being comfortably filled. The game was a repetition of Monday's exhibition; the Petes never had a chance, once or twice a man got to third base, but that was the limit. On the field they nearly drove the fans wild with their errors, fumbling and wild throwing. In fact we dare not put in print what some of the spectators were thinking.

Tracey pitched a good steady game but was very poorly supported; McNeal was in his usual good form again, and made a couple of long drives, but Fryer of Guelph brought them down in good shape before any damage was done. The following is the score, space being to valuable to comment at any length on such an exhibition of "professional" ball:

PEACE PLAN FOR KAISER

Andrew Carnegie Will Ask German Emperor to Take Initiative

Berlin, May 27.—Andrew Carnegie has an entirely new scheme for world peace, which he intends to submit to the Kaiser when he comes here on June 17 to congratulate the German Emperor on his peaceful reign of 25 years.

Mr. Carnegie's plan which he expects to go into operation as the crowning achievement of Emperor William's reign, is for the Kaiser to take the initiative in reducing armaments and ask the other nations to follow his example.

PINE TAR CORDIAL

Advertisements under above heads, 20 words and under, one insertion, 15c.; 3 insertions, 25c.; 6 insertions, 40c.

NUGENT'S SARSAPARILLA—PRICE FOR large bottle, 100 full doses, 50c. and well worth it, too. It's better to take no medicine at all than to depend upon cheap concoctions that are compounded to sell at low price and a big profit just because there is a large demand for certain remedies at certain seasons of the year. There are so-called Sarsaparillas offered to us to sell to our customers at 25c a bottle that would bring us a larger profit than Nugent's Sarsaparilla sold at 50c. Nugent's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, arouses the torpid liver, drives out all impurities, cleanses and tones up the system, and helps Nature throw off the dullness that comes from indoor life of winter. It arouses energy, brightens the eye, clears the brain, gives lightness to the movements. Nugent's Sarsaparilla is not the only thing you will find in this drug store. We make a specialty of Nugent's Remedies. Nugent Drug Co., 386 George St., directly opposite Cressman's store.

MEN—YOU NEED NERVE

Wonderful Nervous System

EARLY INDISCRETIONS AND EXCESSES HAVE UNDERMINED YOUR SYSTEM

The nerves control all actions of the body so that anything that debilitates them will weaken all organs of the system. Early Indiscretions and Excesses have ruined thousands of promising young men. Unnatural Drains sap their vigor and vitality and they never develop to a proper condition of manhood. They remain weaklings, mentally, physically and sexually. How you feel? Are you nervous and weak, despondent and gloomy, specks before the eyes with dark circles under them, weak back, kidneys irritable, palpitation of the heart, bashful, debilitating dreams, sediment in urine, pimples on the face, eyes sunken, hollow cheeks, careworn expression, poor memory, lifeless, distrustful, lack energy and strength, tired mornings, restless nights, changeable moods, premature decay, bone pains, hair loose, etc.

DOCTOR AND NURSE

Former's Love Stood the Supreme Test at Operating Table in Hospital.

By HAROLD CARTER.

Nurse Glynn tapped quickly at the door of Doctor Bentley's room in the Central hospital, and then entered without further ceremony. The doctor was seated at his table, writing; he had not heard her knock. As she approached he turned round in his chair, got up, half took her in his arms and kissed her.

"I'm wanted?" he asked.

"Yes, dear. An emergency case. A child has been knocked down by an automobile. His leg is broken and there are internal injuries."

"Are they getting him ready?" asked the doctor, slipping into his linen overalls.

"He's being anaesthetized now," Nurse Glynn answered, and kissed him again. "O my dear, how glad I shall be when Easter comes. Then we shall be together always—no more of these hasty meetings."

She went out noiselessly, and Doctor Bentley, having completed his preparations, followed her into the operating room. The little patient lay upon the glass table, ready for his scalpel. At the head sat the nurse, pouring out, from time to time, a few drops of ether upon the mask which covered the lower part of the face. But although she watched the boy attentively she also watched the doctor; and she watched him with some sort of intuitive faculty of sight, so that, without failing in her duty, she was as conscious of him as of the child.

For this was to be the supreme measure by which she might understand his love for her, whether strong and abiding, or a pitiful thing born of loneliness on the one side and propinquity upon the other. She was not sure of him; she could not be sure until he met the mother of the child on his way out.

He did not know that this was his own child upon which he was operating so deftly. His skilful fingers picked up the shattered filaments of muscle and flesh, uniting them for his assistant's sutures. His scalpel cut into the bruised tissues, but mercifully, and only to lay bare the shattered bones within. None at the Central hospital bore such a reputation for deft and careful surgery as Doctor Bentley.

They had been engaged three months. She knew what was a common report, that he had been married before, unhappily; that his wife had gone west and obtained a divorce upon the technical ground of desertion; that she had returned, to marry Anthony Blair, the millionaire, who could afford to give her those luxuries which her butterfly soul desired, and which the doctor, immersed in his work, had never dreamed of as necessary to her, nor been able to gratify.

But that there had been a child she did not know till that evening when Mrs. Blair appeared with a white face at the hospital gates and pleaded for the crippled baby that had been knocked down. She carried it in her arms, and Nurse Glynn would never forget the look of terror upon her face. That it was the doctor's child she knew, for it must have been four years old, and it was only three years since the couple had separated.

Well, when he knew, would his heart turn with yearning toward his child and cast her out utterly, even though he knew that the past could be undone?

The operation was almost ended. The last instrument was replaced in the tray of bubbling water; Doctor Bentley was sponging the sewn tissues with the perchloride and pulling off his gloves. He divested himself of his linen garments and stood up once more conventionally clothed. Nurse Glynn removed the mask. The little patient moaned and stirred.

"He'll do finely now," she heard the doctor say. "Take him up to the ward, nurse. And—good-night."

She wheeled the table into the adjoining room, transferred the child to the stretcher, and began pushing it through into the passage. The woman was waiting there—Mrs. Anthony Blair. Nurse Glynn hesitated involuntarily. She heard the doctor at her heels; in another minute he would know.

The night nurse took the stretcher from her. She turned away and lingered a moment near. Then she saw the doctor start and heard the woman's agonized cry.

"Oh, doctor, is he dead? He is not dead? He will live then? You must save him!" Then came the little exclamation of recognition and then silence. The two were standing alone. For the news of the meeting had spread among the other nurses and the hospital staff, and they tactfully disappeared.

"Oh, it's you," the nurse heard Mrs. Blair exclaim, in an embarrassed voice.

"Yes, Alice," she heard the doctor answer gravely. "I am happy to tell you that he will recover and that the limb will not be shortened. I am so sorry for you," he added impulsively. "It must have been a terrible blow. Your son—"

Her son! Was he, then, disclaiming the paternity of the boy, or did he not know?

"How old is he? He is a promising little fellow."

"Nearly four," answered the woman. She was still trembling, still overcome by the shock of the meeting. Her little butterfly mind was badly bruised, even as the child's little body had been.

"Four!" exclaimed Doctor Bentley in astonishment. Nurse Glynn, standing near, saw his face turn pale. He made an impulsive step toward her. "Alice! Whose child is he? Who is his father?" he demanded fiercely.

"I don't know," sobbed Mrs. Blair. "Why do you ask me? Why are you looking at me like that? Haven't you injured me enough that you should terrify me?" she sobbed. "I don't know who is its father, nor its mother either."

"Its—mother!" gasped the doctor. "Isn't he your child then?"

"Certainly not!" she exclaimed, drawing herself up indignantly. "Do you suppose my child would go to a common hospital if he were injured? Didn't they tell you that John ran the automobile over a street brat? Yes," she continued in a petulant voice, "and a crowd gathered and threatened me, and if I hadn't had enough presence of mind to jump out and carry him into the hospital they would have thrown stones at me. And I don't dare to go out if he should be going to die, or I shall be arrested and thrown into a common cell."

"Have no fear of that, Mrs. Blair," answered the doctor gravely. "I shall have you sent home in my own automobile. And the child will be well in a few weeks. As for the damage—"

"Mr. Blair is able to pay for any damages," replied the woman coldly. She had not understood.

The doctor bowed and turned away. He walked straight past Nurse Glynn; she followed him; he turned and saw her.

"You know, then?" he asked, seeing the look on her face.

"Yes, dear," she whispered. "And—I have been so afraid!"

He pressed her to his heart.

"You thought it was my child? If it had been—"

"If it had been," she whispered [illegible].

"Dearest," answered the doctor gravely, "I might have loved them. But you would still have been first in my heart—as now, as always."

OUR LAKE FISHERIES

A certain Chatham man, says the Christian Guardian, does not think much of our present fish policy in reference to Lake Erie. Recently 5,000,000 whitefish were put into Lake Erie at Port Stanley. Ontario tax payers paid for this, and when the fish are grown they will be caught and sent to the United States' markets. "Where does the benefits to the people who own the fish come in? The working fishermen gets his wages, the express companies a large share, the fish trust all the balance. The Ontario Government does not get enough out of fish licenses to pay for looking after them. Besides the above facts, the taxpayers are charged with the cost of an expensive revenue cutter to protect those people while taking away our fish." We wonder if the man from Chatham isn't right in his way of looking at it?

ROSS ON NAVAL AID.

There are curious and incredible rumors that Sir George Ross has been prevailed upon to play the petty partisan on the naval issue. He used to be sound on this question. In an address before the St. Andrew's Society of Toronto in 1909, which is reprinted as an appendix to his new book, "Getting Into Parliament and After," the Liberal leader in the Senate, says the News, used this language: "Then there is the great problem raised to-night about the naval and military defence of Canada. We must not deal with that problem as the old Scotch minister used to do when he came to a difficult text in the Bible, when he would proceed to say: 'My brethren this text has been differently translated by some translators, and some commentators think it means this thing, and others think it means that thing, and it presents great difficulties to us. I think the best thing we can do to-day me brethren, is, to look the difficulties straight in the face and pass on.' (Laughter). It wont do simply to look this difficulty straight in the face, for we cannot pass on. Now, how are we going to meet the difficulty? I am not here to solve it. I have no commission, but I do hope it will be solved in consistency with the dignity of Canada. (Hear, hear). A trifling recompense for the protection of the British flag from 1759 to the present day would unworthy of Canada. We must must meet the emergency at any cost, and with that degree of liberality and generosity which will fit the situation. (Hear, hear.) The foes of England are our foes, whether on the North Sea or on the Plains of Russia or to he South of Forty-Nine. (Hear, hear) They are our foes, and what is England's interest to defend is our interest. For the Empire is one, and we are a part.

Weary Tiredness Changed to Vigor

THAT PLAYED OUT FEELING WAS QUICKLY REMEDIED AND HEALTH RESTORED

Story of a Merchant Who Almost Lost His Business and His Health Through Neglecting Early Symptoms of Disease.

"My life for years has been of sedentary character," writes T. B. Titchfield, head of a well known firm in Buckingham. "Nine hours every day I spent at office work and took exercise only on Sunday. I disregarded the symptoms of ill-health, which were all too apparent to my family. I grew thin, then pale, and before long I was jaundiced — eyes and skin were yellow, my strength and nerve energy were lowered, and I was quite unfitted for business. In the morning a lightness in the head, particularly when I bent over, made me very worried about my health. Most of the laxative medicines I found weakening, and knowing that I had to be at business every day I neglected myself rather than risk further weakness. Of course I grew worse, but by a happy chance I began to use Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I was forcibly struck by the fact that they neither caused griping nor nausea, and it seemed incredible that pills could tone, cleanse and regulate the system without causing any unpleasant after effects. Dr. Hamilton's Pills acted with me just as gentle as nature—they gave new life to my liver, strengthened my stomach, and won me back to perfect good health. My skin is clear, dizziness has disappeared, and my appetite, strength, spirits are perfect."

Refuse anything offered you instead of Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which are sure to cure. Sold in 25c boxes, five for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or postpaid from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

LIVED LONG YEARS AFTER AWFUL FALL

Parachute Jumper Dies in His Bed Out West, Having Survived a Fall of Half a Mile.

The man who fell 3,000 feet from a balloon lived seventeen years longer than anyone but himself said he would. When crushed and paralyzed and despaired of by surgeons, he insisted that he would survive to go up again, and he did. The great fall occurred in Venezuela in 1896. Seventeen years later, the man died in Edmonton, Alta., after an illness of several months. He was Charles Wolcott, professional aeronaut. There is no record of another experience like his.

Wolcott was the son of a Louisiana planter, who lost everything in the Civil War. The boy joined a circus fated. Wolcott hopped on the trapeze performer. He was with Sells Brothers and the original Adam Forepaugh show. In 1882, when Wolcott was eighteen years old, the balloonist and parachute jumper of the circus fell and was killed. The boy succeeded him and made ascensions in this country until in the fall of 1896, he went to Venezuela to see what the South Americans thought of aeronautics.

On Oct. 28 he was in Ville de Cura with the first balloon ever seen in that region. Thousands of natives were assembled, and Wolcott had no assistant to keep them back. While he was busy filling the bag with hot air the Venezuelans were fingering the ropes and parachute and trampling them in the mud.

Finally the swaying balloon was in-he could without checking his descent, pose and up he went. He always said afterward that he arose between 3,000 and 3,500 feet before cutting loose the parachute. At any rate the parachute did not open. The mud trampled into it had fastened the ropes as if with cement. The aeronaut, shooting straight downward, kept his head and tugged at the ropes in an attempt to shake them free. Having done all he could without checking his descent, he made his body ready for what he knew was coming. He remembered that his best chance of avoiding mortal injury, if such a thing could be, was to hit the ground feet first, so he held his legs rigidly straight with toes pointed downward.

Within 200 feet of the earth the parachute opened, but it was going so fast that the air split its covering in half dozen places. Wolcott hit the ground in the middle of a level field. The surgical inventory taken many days later disclosed that several bones in each foot were broken; that both ankles, both knees and both hips were dislocated; that the pelvis and left arm were fractured; that the ribs on the left side were torn from the spine; that the lower vertebrae were dislocated and slightly cracked, and that there was pressure on the spinal cord.

Wolcott, who was conscious all the time, was carried to a hut and left alone suffering intensely. He sent away the only doctor in the place because the doctor said the only thing to do was to bleed him. He stayed in the hut all night, keeping himself awake by smoking cigarettes, for he believed that he would die if he once became unconscious.

The next morning Wolcott started for the railway station at Caguo on a stretcher, guarded by twenty soldiers, and he finally reached the hospital at Caracas.

For three days thereafter he slept under an anaesthetic. He was paralysed from the waist down. The surgeons told him he would die, but they gave him the best of treatment. Every fracture and dislocation was reduced except that of the right hip joint. In a few months he was well enough, though still helpless, to sail for New York. There he entered St. Luke's Hospital. Gradually he regained the use of his legs and arms, though his right hip remained dislocated and his spine bent. In spite of what he had come through, he was making contracts for parachute jumps within a year of the time he fell.

A FAMOUS TRAMP FORESAW HIS END

Strange Wanderer Who Warned Wayward Boys Against the Life of "Hobo"

After flirting with death hundreds of times as he was carried mile after mile over shining rails, "A No. 1," the world-famous tramp, fell at last a victim to the fate against which he warned nearly everyone he met—death under the wheels of a train. While "beating his way" on the Southern Pacific railroad near New Orleans "A No. 1" lost his hold on the cross beams of a train and was mangled under the wheels.

The little plot which he bought in the small cemetery at Cambridge Springs, Penn., at last claimed his remains; the inscription on the neat little tomb, "A No. 1, the Rambler at rest," means a lot to hundreds of people who were helped by the mysterious man whose real name is a secret.

This strange individual told part of his life's story to a Winnipeg newspaperman while crossing Canada on one of his endless pilgrimages. He said that he had then covered 507,224 miles without paying railroad fares.

"A No. 1" was the name he got from the railway people, official and operative alike. It was the name he received when a boy of 11 he ran away from home in Kentucky 30 years ago, and fell in with a grown-up tramp, who was so impressed with his natty ways and gave him the name of "A No. 1 Kid." He dropped the juvenile appellation as he grew older, but he did not drop the wandering habit to the end of his life. His avowed desire, wherever he went, was to demonstrate as effectively as possible the dangers, moral and physical, of the hobo's life. In his wanderings "A No. 1" won the good will of the railways by giving warnings of defective rails and apparatus, thereby preventing wrecks and loss of life, and was a welcome visitor in many places.

Perils of Tramp Life

Chief among the dangers that beset the way of a youngster who took to the road, according to "A No. 1," is the yegg or criminal tramp who has need, in his war on society, for a young and innocent looking lad. The thug gets a hold of the boy and by degrees aids him to steal, and finally gets him implicated in some serious offence, which he holds as a whip over his head.

In this campaign against the tramp, though one of the sort himself, this peculiar individual used what he called the preventive method. Save the boy, he said, and there would be no man to be a tramp. Every boy saved meant the prevention of a dozen other boys' downfall. He wrote a few little books on tramps' life and derived a small revenue from this source.

Of the man himself, nothing could be learned except that he was once a wandering potato carver, and he could make a good living by that curious art. He had a novel way of doing things. While on the brake beams or between the blind ends of baggage cars or on the bumpers, he wore a suit of regulation overalls and gauntleted gloves, but once in a town or city of any size he used to disappear for a few minutes and was next seen, but not always recognised, as a dapper little man in a black derby, brown suit, brightly polished shoes and clean hands. His overalls he carried rolled up in a neat bundle with one leg of the trousers hanging.

This leg formed the sack into which the bundle was neatly tucked. He carried shoe polish, tooth brush and paste, needle and thread, plenty of buttons, and other odds and ends in various pockets about his person, and was never without the means of making a presentable appearance on very short notice. Liquor, tobacco, drugs, were all taboo to him, and he ascribed his survival for 30 years to his care of himself in this respect. It was his firm conviction that he would go the way of so many of the tribe, that is, he expected to "grease the rails" some place through a miss in his leap for the rods or a short guess in a spring for a freight car.

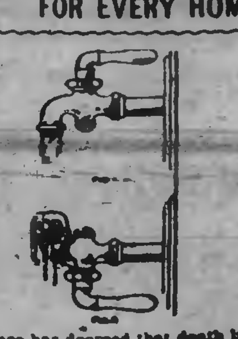
BUBBLING FOUNTAIN FOR EVERY HOME



Science has decreed that death lurks in the common drinking cup and that the only way to avoid the germs that are to be found in any vessel which two or more people use—is to discard the vessel and revert to the bubbling fountain. There is not a home in the country equipped with running water that has not a bubbling fountain if the householders know how to use it. Simply turn the faucet upside down and regulate the flow of water as one does with a regular bubbler.

CLEAN THE CHIMNEYS

A Liberal Application of Pole and Scrub Brushes Will do It

Chimney fires could be easily remedied if people would only take a little trouble to clean out the pipes and chimneys. This has always been a dirty task, and probably always will be, but it can be accomplished with a minimum of trouble and dirt if a home-made cleaner is constructed along the lines shown in the sketch. The central pole can be made as long as needed and it can be made in several pieces so that it can be joined together. The commonest and cheapest scrub brushes are all th is necessary.

TRANS-BALTIC MAILS BY AIR

Germany Makes Such a Proposal to Denmark

Germany has asked Denmark whether it is disposed to employ German airships in carrying the trans-Baltic mails, Denmark paying a small subsidy which will be devoted to building and maintaining an airship station at Amagar, near Copenhagen. Germany contends that air mail service would be particularly advantageous in winter, when the ice often delays steamships.

Denmark acknowledged the receipt of the proposal and expressed the greatest interest in the scheme, but as yet has made no decision.

TREATED FOR NAUGHTINESS

A Correspondent Tells of Experiments Made in Japan

Writing to the "Times" recently on the subject of sulkiness, a correspondent refers to the possibility of treating children medicinally for naughtiness. "This," she says, "is actually done in Japan. I had charge of some Japanese children, and if they proved unamenable to discipline, or gave way to prolonged fits of naughtiness, they were taken away for a day or two and invariably came back to me cheerful and good-tempered. On inquiry I found they had been massaged either once or twice, and that it was a very generally practised remedy, all naughtiness being held to proceed from disordered stomach."

BASEBALL.

Kid Elberfeld, late of the New York and Washington Americans, now managing Chattanooga, is the greatest fan in the country, according to the majority of ballplayers in the big circuit. He eats, sleeps, and dreams baseball all the time, off the field and on it. He has also had a very long career on the diamond, and for that reason knows whereof he speaks.

New York, May 28.—Eager to build up his pitching staff, Manager McGraw has traded Pitcher Ames, Outfielder Devore and Infielder Groh to the Cincinnati Reds for Pitcher Fromme. The swap is the biggest executed in the National League this season, McGraw deciding that Devore is of no further service to his club since Burns and Cooper are available for the outfield.

TURF.

Recalling the Queen's Plate race in Toronto, Hearts of Oak simply outclasses any plate winners within our recollection. St Bass was challenged throughout the plate race, but Hearts of Oak was never pressed. In fact Wilson never even sat down to ride. The Giddings candidate outclasses any former plate winners, bar none.

For a small town, Oakville is decidedly on the map and the business address of sundry nags who have set the racing land astir. Of which Wire In was one, War Whoop, St. Bass, Ondramida, and last but by no means least, Hearts of Oak. Mr. Giddings sold Wire In to Rod Mackenzie, together with War Whoop and another for $7,500.

And it will be remembered that Harry Giddings refused $6,000 for St. Bass Plate Day. So you see that the little town of Oakville has turned out some winners, and we may expect to see Mr. Giddings capture the Plate 1914. Good luck "H.G.," more power to your arm.

RING.

Calgary, Alta., May 28.—The results of the autopsy on Luther McCarty, who was killed in his fight with Arthur Pelky Saturday, were given out to-night. It was found that instead of the blow to the heart it was the one to the jaw which did the damage. Death was caused by a dislocated neck, the heart being sound and well. A clot of blood was also found on his brain, and this further added to the conviction that death was not due to the blow under the heart.

Both men seemed cool and collected when they stood up in the ring. They shook hands and posed for their photos.

Pelky opened with straight jabs to the face, and McCarty countered with his right. One or two minor mixups took place, followed by a clinch. Eddie Smith, referee, separated them. Neither seemed to be the worse for the clinch, until McCarty doubled up slowly as in a fighting crouch. He collapsed at full length on the ring floor.

According to an announcement made by the New Olympic Club, located at Sixth and Magazine streets, Jack Fisse and Kid Holmgren, local 116-pounders, have been matched to meet in a ten-round bout on May 30.

San Francisco, May 28.—With the hope of getting a return bout with "Gunboat" Smith, Tomes Jones, Jessie Williard's manager, has offered to match Willard with Smith for another fight, winner take all. In answer to this, Smith's manager said:

"If you will guarantee that our end will be $10,000, I will take the match and be ready to fight any time you say."

YATCHING.

Bristol, R.I., May 28.—Nat Herreshoff, designer of all the successful defenders of the America's Cup for the past twenty years, has declined to enter competition for the design of the 1914 defender. His reasons are not known.

Herreshoff's decision was expressed to Harold S. Vanderbilt, Oliver Iselin, jun., and Amos Johnston, of New York, when they were here recently.

Directly after the conference with the Bristol builders New York yachtsmen went to Boston to confer with B. B. Crowninshield, who designed Independence, an unsuccessful candidate for cup defender in the last trial races.

TIN BOTTLE TOPS FOR MUDDY FEET

What becomes of the crimped tin tops used on beer bottles, pop bottles, catsup bottles and the like? In most homes they are thrown into the ash barrel—but there are a few places in the world where they are put to a much better use. And it might be that your home is waiting for something of this kind. Tin bottle tops are the finest antidote in existence for muddy feet. They prevent muddy feet from entering the house by taking the mud from the feet. An excellent foot scraper can be made by simply nailing 50 or a hundred of the bottle tops to a board with the crimped edges up. The board can be entirely covered with them. An ordinary inch plank will do and carpet tacks can be used to attach the bottle tops.

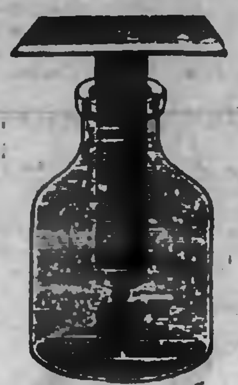
HERE IS ANOTHER USE FOR THE MILK BOTTLE

How It May be Made to Tell the the Weight of Your Letter

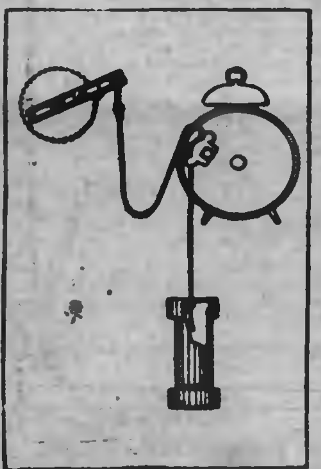
It is a great bore to have a letter to mail and not know how many stamps will be required for it. There are few people who have a postal scales. It is a great convenience and it is much cheaper to make one than buy it. They are easily made, too. All that is necessary is a milk bottle or other wide mouthed bottle, a piece of broom stick, a lead weight and a flat piece of tin. The broom stick is made of convenient size to fit into the bottle and not go quite to the bottom. The structure is made as shown in the sketch, with the weight attached to the bottom of the stick. The bottle is filled with water. With the stick fixed in the bottle as shown, a set of known weights are placed on the top and the graduations of the scale marked on the stick as the weights shove it down into the bottle. Care should be taken to see that the weight is just heavy enough to hold the stick about half way down the bottle, so that plenty of room is given for the weighing of the scales with the letters. If some of the water escapes by evaporation, more should be added to keep the stick at a uniform level.



CLOCK OPERATES VALVES

Time Mechanism Opens Them and Operates Switches, Etc.

A time mechanism for the operation of valves, switches and the like has been invented. A notched wheel is attached to the object to be operated and a lever is pivoted to this wheel. The lever is in two parts, slidably connected so that the length may be varied as required. A cord attached to the free end of the lever has a weight at its other end. This cord is lightly wound around the key of an alarm clock and suspends the weight on the latter. When the alarm goes off the key revolves and throws off the cord, which allows the weight to drop and exert a downward pull on the lever. This in turn operates the mechanism which opens the valve, or switch, or whatever is to be opened. The same principle can be applied to a furnace door.



CLOCK RELEASES WEIGHT.

UNEXPECTED FORTUNE

Estate Worth Half a Million Goes to Three Sisters

Mrs. Richard Simmons, 56 years of age, who keeps a boarding house at Syracuse, N. Y., expects to come into one-third of an estate of $500,000 left by her sister, Mrs. Claranda Hunt, a former preceptress in a girls' academy in Ontario, who died some time ago, leaving her fortune to Mrs. Simmons and two other sisters.

The other beneficiaries are Sophia, wife of Peter Williams, a Napanee lawyer, and Elizabeth, wife of James Irvine, a farmer of Antwerp, New York State.

It is over two years since Mrs. Hunt died in San Francisco, and the executors of the estate had a long search for Mrs. Simmons. Mrs. Hunt's will provided that the estate should go to her husband and son, but as they predeceased her, a clause naming the three sisters as contingent beneficiaries has become operative.

The four sisters were daughters of Philip Frelich, of Antwerp, N.Y., who made his money in the iron industry at that town. The late Mrs. Hunt, her husband and son, were all in the teaching profession, and were at various times connected with several educational institutions in the United States and Canada.

Nothing To Do.

Nothing to do but work,
Nothing to eat but food;
Nothing to wear but clothes,
To keep one from being nude.

Nothing to breathe but air,
Quick as a flash 'tis gone;
Nothing to fall but off,
Nowhere to stand but on.

Nothing to comb but hair,
Nowhere to sleep but in bed;
Nothing to weep but tears,
Nothing to bury but dead.

Nothing to sing but songs,
Ah, well, alas! alack!
Nowhere to go but out,
Nowhere to come but back.

Nothing to see but sights,
Nothing to quench but thirst;
Nothing to have but what we've got—
Thus through life we are cursed.

Nothing to strike but a gait;
Everything moves that goes;
Nothing at all but common sense
Can ever withstand these woes.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

Written by
DR. DAVID H. REEDER,
Chicago, Ill.

WHAT TO DO: Part 1—Yes, and how to do it. I presume many of you want to "swat" me for discussing again the same old subject of the fly, the typhoid fly, but I would have a big job if in turn I was to swat every one of you that have read and approved of what I have told you about the fly and done absolutely nothing to prevent its breeding.

Now, it is a fact which you cannot reasonably dispute, that if your horses and cows were free from the cruel bother of flies during the entire summer, they would be able to render you greater service and be in better condition in the fall. Isn't that so? Putting it on a purely cash basis, regardless of the health, or lives, of your family and it would pay you and all of your neighbors to prevent the fly from breeding. But looking at the matter of only one case of typhoid fever in your family in five years and from that standpoint alone it would pay to eliminate the flies from your premises.

Impossible? Not a bit of it. If you have lots of stock around your barns then you must have lots of land and should have a manure spreader. There is always some field or pasture where it can be spread at any time, and the land is better and the value of the manure is greater if spread while fresh. Just a short bit of time every morning and you have finished a job that must be done at some season and why not now. Keep the barns clean and the manure scattered out on the fields, where it does good instead of harm and the flies cannot find breeding place except around a filthy back door, the slop barrel, garbage can or the hog pen.

If the flies swarm around your back door and breed in dirty mess where kitchen slops are thrown, then I must say that neither you nor your housekeeper are clean. Yes, I know I am far enough away to be safe, but after you get your place into a sanitary condition, just come over and take breakfast with me on the back porch.

CLUB NOTES.

I will glad answer any inquiries for information on health subjects from readers of this publication, if same are addressed to Home Health Club, 5000 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago. Send full name and address with 4 cents postage.

Dear Doctor:—I am still sick to my stomach and so nervous that I cannot sleep unless I take some narcotic. My tongue does not look as bad as it has all winter, but this distress I am in now would wear any one out before long. The lady I mentioned in my last letter is not improved after all her hospital treatments. No need to tell me I must not work very hard, I cannot work now. When I read your last letter I said to myself, "Bless Dr. Reeder, he has told me just what I ought to do, but what a hard task when there is no one to do anything for me. Could I see you and tell you many things you don't know you would understand me better. I try to laugh, but such a poor job I make of it. I don't believe I have laughed for years, I might say. No wonder my nerves are leaving me. Of course, I realized that I was undertaking too much when I commenced to clean house. Now I must sit and look at the confusion, as help is out of the question. My husband is not of the kind that can help around the house.

Mrs. E.J.S.

You say that there are many things that you could tell me, if you could see me in person, but these things you ought to explain by letter because I cannot know all the circumstances which go to effect your nerves unless you tell me. It is too bad that you husband cannot help you more about the house and help keep things in order, but some men are so constituted, and it is a very difficult matter to change them; therefore, the next best thing is simply to let things go. You ought never to attempt to clean house, or do things of that kind, while in your condition. Now, you should observe the instructions given you and then try to cheer up. You say you have not laughed in years. Do you think it is any wonder that your stomach gets sour, when your mind is sour all the time? If you don't see anything else to laugh at that is funny, just laugh at yourself. Make fun of yourself for allowing matter to depress you. This is a great big world, and Nature is smiling all over just now. The flowers are trying their best to look pretty, and everything is a great big LAUGH. Now, you help all you can. Don't imagine that your house must be immaculate and kept perfectly clean. Those beautiful flowers out in the yard came up through an awful lot of dirt, and they are just as sweet and clean as they can be. I don't mean by this that you should go out and plant yourself where the roots of the flowers are, but just take a lesson from them and realize that you can be bright and cheerful and exhale an odor of good cheer for others, no matter what your surroundings may be. If you do as I have told you, you are going to win out and get well. Now please keep at it.

Dear Doctor:—You have said at various time in the Club notes that if any of the members found out any new remedies that you would be glad to learn of them. I know of one which I have never seen mentioned. A friend of mine told me about her experience with her tape worm. She was ailing for some time but had no idea what the trouble was. She lived on a farm and the medicine they usually gave the horses was an infusion of Yarrow which grew plentifully in the neighborhood. She thought if it was good for horses it might help her. So she steeped some, found that she had passed a great and drank it for two or three days, and was greatly shocked when she had passed a great long worm. She was all right shortly after that.

Mrs. W. T. W.

Dear Doctor:—I have read with interest your lectures, and have gained considerable help thereby. Some time ago a lady was asking for a remedy for hives. I would not say positively, but would not be surprised if she is bothered with chiggers, or chigoe, a minute insect that bores a hole in the skin causing an itching and festering sore. I do not know of anything to prevent them but carbolic acid salve is a good remedy for the itching sensation which they cause.

H.H.

It is barely possible that the trouble is chiggers, and if such is the case, a simple home treatment is to apply well salted butter. Carbolated vaseline is also good. Your suggestion of carbolic acid salve used moderately is excellent. The part of your letter relating to your suffering being of a personal nature, has been answered in a personal letter.

SIMPLE REMEDIES

COUGH—For a cough which accompanies the ordinary cold make a pint of strong sage tea; add one-half teaspoonful of alum, two tablespoonfuls of honey, one tablespoonful of gum arabic. Or—Make a pint of strong flaxseed tea. Squeeze in the juice of two lemons, add a quarter of a pound of lump sugar.

FAINTING—There is rarely ever a doctor at hand when a person faints. Simple remedies will usually bring anyone out of an ordinary faint. Lay the patient down; give plenty of air; allow no crowding; loosen the clothing; rub the hands, sprinkle the head and face and apply hartshorn to the nostrils. When consciousness begins to return raise the head a little or bring the patient to a half-sitting posture and fan. Do not seem excited or speak loudly.

HEMORRHAGE—Send for a physician. In the meantime lay the patient down, apply cold cloths to the chest and administer table salt at short intervals.

INDIGESTION—For a sudden seizure of indigestion, with dangerous symptoms, administer a teaspoonful of table salt. Put a mustard plaster on the stomach, hot brick to the feet and give a gentle cathartic.

FOR A FIT—Extend the patient with the head elevated. Give plenty of air. Apply ice or cold water to the head and heat to the feet. Apply ammonia, rub the feet and hands.

SEVERE VOMITING—After the stomach seems to have been relieved of any irritating substance put a bottle of hot water to the feet of the patient. Apply to the stomach cloths that have been wrung out of hot vinegar and mustard. Keep the patient in bed with the head comfortably elevated. Apply cloths wet in cold water to the forehead and keep a handkerchief, wet in bay rum, cologne or camphor, near the face. Have the air pure and the room partially darkened.

FUEL SUPPLY OF THE WEST

Unlimited Gas Well Wasting Its Flow in One Spot and Coal Beds Afire for Century

Over a dozen years ago a party of oil-diggers were sent by the Geological Survey of Canada into what was then an almost unknown part of the North-West Territories, to find if the reported existence of petroleum in the Far North was a fact.

An oil-boring outfit was finally set up at Pelican Rapids, on the Athabasca River, and put to work. When the drill had reached a depth of 820 feet it struck gas. The flow was so great that it drove back iron balls that were dropped down the pipe, and the noise of the escaping gas could sometime be heard two or three miles away. It did not lessen any, and the men were at length compelled to abandon the effort.

The next year they came back, hoping to find the gas run out enough to allow them to resume boring. But when they had cleaned out the hole and drilled only seventeen feet further the gas escaped with increased with such intensity that again they were forced to stop.

Burning for Years

After they went, some one came along and lighted the jet. It is still burning. Report has it that it has been burning continuously, but it is more likely to have been extinguished now and then during the past dozen years and re-lighted by settlers and passers-by. That the gas flow is undiminished, however, is quite certain, for there is a flame nearly fifty feet high and of very substantial circumference.

The Athabasca River, in whose vicinity this effusive gas supply is found, is one of the great waterways of the new North. The Peace and Mackenzie Rivers make up with it a trio that mean almost everything to the industrial future of the North-West, and among their good points is the fact that they all run through belts of gas, oil, tar, and coal lands. There is, for instance, in the Athabasca district, a tract of a hundred thousand square miles that is saturated with petroleum.

Gas, Oil, Tar, and Coal

Coal, oil, and gas are the three wonder riches of that far corner of the Empire. It has been supposed to yield chiefly furs and pelts, but these other products are quite as native and far more valuable. The whole north land above the present line of rail is a region of mineral wealth, which, in its nearer limits, takes the form of the largest gas and oil reserves in the world, and, farther north, of coal beds no one knows how large. About two hundred miles from the Arctic Circle there is a coal area, on the Mackenzie River, that has been on fire for a hundred years. It has been slowly burning from within, and spreading, until now the fire has covered some twenty miles, showing a broken line of low, mysterious earthflame that at night is one of the grandest and weirdest of northern sights.

FISH WEALTH OF CANADA

Important Industry of the Lakes—Salmon as an Experiment

The fishing industry of Canada is an important asset in our national financial statement. It is one of those subjects on which little has been written in a form which is interesting to the general public, although much valuable information may be found in Government blue books. The average yearly catch for the Dominion is valued at about $36,000,000, about half of which is exported and the other half consumed at home—about $3.00 worth of fish per year being the average consumption for each Canadian.

The Port Arthur Hatchery

The latest fish hatchery is the one at Port Arthur on Lake Superior. This hatchery has an annual capacity of turning out fish fry, which, at maturity, will represent a catch of the enormous total of $10,500,000 yearly. The hatchery is equipped for the propagation mainly of lake trout, as owing to the rocky and clay formation of Lake Superior, trout find their native haunts on the shores of the Lake. A certain percentage of white fish are also being hatched out, as there are a few handy spawning beds in the smaller bays, which form the native haunt of the white fish. A very interesting experiment is also being tried out in the placing of salmon fry in the lake as it is believed that a very valuable salmon fishing industry can be established at Port Arthur.

Fishing as a sport is also being given serious attention at this hatchery, and brook trout and salmon fry are to be placed in the streams and brooks surrounding the city.

In the Hatchery

A walk through the fish hatchery is a very instructive and interesting sight. The spawn, after being taken from the mother fish in the fall—and this is usually collected by the officers of the Fishery Department from the fishing tugs—is brought to the hatchery and distributed in trays, over which there is a constant stream of cold water running. It takes, on the average, 136 days for the spawn to germinate into living fish. It is very interesting to pick up the little round globes, which look like balls of gelatine, and holding them up in the light, see the eyes and the dim outline of the form of the minute fish inside. Only a small percentage of the spawn die. The dead cells are readily detected as they turn white upon the atom of life within becoming extinct. After the baby fish extricates itself from its globular cell it is fed for two weeks on grated beef liver. By this time it is not more than a quarter of an inch long, and is then taken out and placed in the spawning beds where the older fish always gather at certain times to foster the young and growing fry. Three years is the usual time taken for fish to mature.

HON. GEO. H. PERLEY

Some Life History of a Man Who Has Prospered in Canada

Hon. George H. Perley Minister without portfolio in the Dominion Cabinet is a lumberman of the Ottawa Valley; he is actively concerned in several firms, and in particular is heavily interested in pulpwood transactions. Also he is a millionaire.

He is a slight man of middle height, with a pale, rather thin face, with a rather closely trimmed beard, remarkably black, and abundant hair, also remarkably black, a scrutinizing dark eye and a certain air of physical delicacy.

Mr. Perley was born in the United States. He belongs to a New Hampshire family, the stock being originally Welsh. Prior to 1857, W. G. Perley, the Cabinet Minister's father, lived in New Lebanon, New Hampshire; in that year he came to Ottawa, prospered exceedingly, became naturalized, and from 1887 till his death in 1890 was M. P. for the capital city.

When the elder Perley made the change of residence he delayed moving his family, and the future Cabinet Minister was born at New Lebanon while his father was a resident of Ottawa. The American connection was kept up for some years, and the younger Perley, after attending the Ottawa Grammar School, was sent to St. Paul's School, Concord, New Hampshire. He went to Harvard and graduated there, taking his A. B. in 1878.

In 1900 he went into politics. He contested Russell and was beaten. In 1902, there was a bye-election in the country of Argenteuil in Quebec across the Ottawa River from Russell. Mr. Perley had interests in the county and he contested it, only to be beaten again. He settled down to nurse the constituency, and in the general election of 1904 he won. In 1904 he was made Chief Whip of the Conservative party and when the Conservatives came into power in 1911, Mr. Perley was taken into the Cabinet.

BUYING A HORSE

Practical Pointers for the Amateur—How to Locate Faults

If you are buying a horse never be satisfied that he is thoroughly sound or serviceable until you have seen him in action.

In mild cases of string-halt faulty action is observed only upon the start or backing. The feet should be picked up to show how the animal will stand while being shod. The horse should next be placed in harness, and attention should be given to his behaviour while the harness is being fitted. Observe whether he kicks, strikes, or bites when the girth is tightened. He should be driven in his accustomed manner—single or double—if for driving, and in a cart or waggon if for heavy work. The rein should be taken so as to determine whether he has a hard or tender mouth, and to note his manner of responding to the pull. Also observe whether he shies or frightens at strange objects when being hitched to the cart. One should be certain that this is not due to improper fitting harness before rejecting him. A tight-fitting collar may make the difference between a proper acting animal and one that is wholly objectionable.

The wind should be thoroughly tested for whistling, for roaring, and for heaves. The ear of the examiner should be placed to the nostrils, to the throat and to the sides of the chest, and the hands placed upon the flanks to detect any unnatural sounds in breathing.

TOO MUCH EXERCISE

Busy Business Men Overdo Their Work and Play, Doctors Say

That the London business man takes too much exercise was the startling assertion of a physician at the Conference of Hygiene for Business Men held in Britain's metropolis.

The city man is said to be too fond of rushing from the intellectual toil of his office to the strenuous golf links. One doctor stated that this practice is a fruitful source of neurasthenia. "It is simply draining your nervous system and energy by two taps instead of one," he said. According to this expert there is no relation between the size of the muscles and health.

Most of the delegates preached the simple life for city men, who were all too busy to attend the sessions of the conference.

All of the heavy artillery of the medical men was brought to bear against the business lunch and the business man was told to either go without it or to drop meat from the midday menu. One delegate drew a gloomy picture of the crowded drug stores in the business districts where the tired office men resort for "bracers."

New Warming up Rule

President John Dewar, of the Western Canada League, has announced a new ruling, which he expects will expedite the playing of league games. In the past a new pitcher going in during the game has been allowed to pitch five balls to warm up. The president believes that the pitchers use too much valuable time with this warming up process, and in the future they will be allowed to heave but three balls before the batter can take his position at the plate.

No house is mine in the north or south;
No lands in the land of my sires.
Heedless, the careless winds have spent
The smoke of my vagrant fires.
No name have I in the clanging town;
No seat with the grave and wise.
The snows and the dusts of the trails forget
That have blinded my foolish eyes
But safe and warm and steadfast—true
(God, how was the wonder done!)
The heart of a woman shelters me
From the lonely winds and the sun.

Simple Hanging Basket

A simple but very pretty hanging basket of greenery can be made from the top of a carrot, which will go on growing if kept moist. All you need to do is to cut the top fairly closely, and scoop it out a little, just enough to hold water, when hung upside down. It should sprout in all directions, and be quite a mass of feathery green with very little care and attention.

Taught Half a Century

Mr. S. A. Gardner of Belleville retired from the teaching profession after over half a century's service without a break. He began to teach in January, 1861, at West Huntingdon. Later he taught at Madoc and Sidney. In September, 1873 he moved to Belleville and for the past 22 years was principal of Queen Victoria School in that city.

Dear Sirs.—

It is just one year ago that we put in the first stock of SANOL and SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES CURE, and we wish to state that we have been amazed at the remarkable sale of these remedies. We have had many repeat orders in both our stores and have sold retail $1000.00 worth of these remedies. In spite of all these sales we have yet to hear of one dissatisfied customer, while many have come back to tell us of the wonderful cures resulting from the Medicine.

Another striking feature of this business is that so many customers come in stating that SANOL has cured Mr.—— their intimate friend, and they wished to try it for themselves.

Wishing you continued success, we are, Yours truly,

HAITI'S QUEER WAYS

No Presidential Office Very Unstable—Army Mostly Generals

Haiti is probably the most turbulent country in the world. Out of its last twenty-eight presidents, twenty-four had either to flee for their lives or were assassinated or killed in battle. That is, if the death of President Cincinnatus Leconte may be considered a murder, for there seems to be little doubt that the explosion of the powder magazine which caused his palace to burn and brought death to Leconte in his bed, was a revolutionary act, carefully planned and carried out.

It used to be a French possession, and a mangled French is still spoken there; but for the last century or so it has been an independent black republic. The Haitians believe themselves to be the most civilized nation on earth, but it is a comic opera kind of civilization. The cities, for instance, are fitted up for electric light, but the electricity does not work, and nobody tries to make it. Haiti is so shiftless that it has no foreign trade to speak of, so there are very few whites on the island. No white person is allowed to land.

Haiti used to be known as the land of the dukes with the absurd names. Some sixty years ago it started a peerage, and every peer chose the name whose sound struck his fancy. One black nobleman was the Duke of Marmalade, another the Duke of Lemonade. There was also a Marquis of Ginger Pop.

But the peerage has been abolished. Nowadays Haiti is chiefly known as the land of generals. The latest statistics—which, Haiti fashion, are twenty years old—show an army consisting of 6,500 privates, 7,000 regular officers and 6,500 generals. Those generals who have no horses ride on mules, and the army is clad in the cast-off uniforms of half the regiments of Europe. Some of the men parade without boots, some with cigarettes in their mouths, some with long sticks of sugar cane there; some have rusty swords, the rest walking-sticks.

There are many civilian generals as well. Country squires are usually generals. As every respectable Haitian has a passion for frock coats and silk hats, perspiring generals are often to be seen working in the fields frock-coated, under a burning tropical sun.

WANT SONG-BIRDS

Movement to Bring Out Insect Eaters to Vancouver Island

The Attorney-General of British Columbia, the Deputy Minister of Agriculture, and the Provincial Game Warden, received a deputation from the Natural History Society of British Columbia, which desired to put before them reasons why the Government should grant the Society permission to import from the Old Country song birds (goldfinches, brown linnets, sky larks, robins, blue tits) into Vancouver Island.

Twelve years ago the society collected money for the same purpose and made a similar importation of which there survive the skylarks which have established themselves at Gordon Head and elsewhere. The deputation tried to remove the impression that the birds they wanted could do any harm to the fruit industry, and represented that by their activity in destroying grubs and insects there birds would really prove a blessing to the agriculture and fruit growing of the island.

To Prevent Wrecks

An invention which, it is claimed, will prevent train wrecks from spread rails, and which will hold a broken rail in place, was patented by a Toronto man, Mr. S. Jagger. It is in the form of an iron fishplate, which holds the metals in a much surer grip than the present splices. The invention has stood satisfactory tests.

CHAPTER XIX—Miss Mortimer appears, explains the mystery and Lawrence is held a prisoner of war, and is again locked in the strong room.

CHAPTER XX — Lawrence escapes through plans arranged by The Lady and sees Grant attack Miss Mortimer.

CHAPTER XXI—Grant is knocked out by Lawrence, who comes to Miss Mortimer's relief, and then makes his escape.

CHAPTER XXII—Captain Grant's base villainy revealed.

CHAPTER XXIII—Lawrence returns to Valley Forge, where he learns more of Grant's perfidy.

CHAPTER XXIV—Washington forces Clinton to battle and Lawrence gets a trace of Eric Mortimer.

CHAPTER XXV—The battle of Monmouth.

CHAPTER XXVI — Gen. Washington again starts Maj. Lawrence on an important mission.

CHAPTER XXVII—Lawrence finds Miss Mortimer in soldier's uniform, acting as a scout under her brother's name. Explanations follow.

CHAPTER XXVIII—Lawrence delivers Washington's dispatches to Gen. Arnold, and is assigned to the special service of capturing Fagin, the cutthroat.

CHAPTER XXIX—Eric Mortimer is found a prisoner of Fagin's, and released by Maj. Lawrence.

CHAPTER XXX—Young Mortimer tells his story, and Lawrence's men surround the Mortimer home to capture Fagin, who has been discovered inside.

"Good God! Are they here now?"

"They must have reached here early yesterday morning. I passed them on the road at ten o'clock. Grant had just joined their party, claiming to be hunting after deserters."

He clung to the fence rail, staring out toward the house.

"Grant! Do you know, I believe that fellow is at the bottom of this whole affair. He's in love with Claire, and—and he's working some scheme to gain power over her."

"Several schemes, I think," I returned heartily. "I've nipped two of them in the bud already. Someway, Mortimer, he got possession of those instructions you received from Washington and Hamilton. I ran into him over there on the lawn, back of the summer-house. He was threatening Claire, trying to drive her into marrying him offhand. We had a bit of a fight, and I got the best of it. When I left I wore his coat, and later found your papers in his pocket. Do you remember how they were addressed?"

He shook his head.

"Simply 'Mortimer.' It occurred to me he could turn them over to Clinton, accuse the colonel of treason, and share in the confiscation of this estate, or else hold them as a threat over your sister. I burned them."

He was silent for a long minute; breathing hard; then he thrust out his hand and clasped mine.

"The damned villain!" he ejaculated, his voice trembling. "Every move he has made has been an attempt to ruin us. I can see it now. Do you suppose Claire really cares for the fellow?"

"I am very sure she does not."

"Then what, in heaven's name, does she let him hang around for? I always hated the sight of his black face and infernal grin, but somehow, I thought she rather liked him. I wonder if he can be there now! If he is, then he and Fagin are up to some devilment."

"And what that may be we'll never discover by talking here," I put in sternly, suddenly realizing we were wasting time. "Come, let's get around to the north side."

We came in back of the summer-house, and had just left the road, when three horsemen galloped past, straight up to the front door, which stood wide open. The black shadow of a man appeared in the glow of light, shading his eyes as he looked out into the darkness.

"Is that you, Culver?"

"Yes," sullenly, the speaker swinging down from the saddle.

"Well, you've been a hell of a while getting here. Fagin will skin you alive; it's nearly daylight already."

"Did the best I could; the cantin' hypocrite wasn't at home; had to go clear to Medford after him. Come on now, get out o' that!"

He dragged the center figure roughly from his horse, and hustled him up the steps.

"The ol' fool thinks we're goin' to kill him, I reckon; been prayin' for an hour past. Bill got so mad he choked him twice, but it didn't do no good. Here, take him along in will yer, and let us hustle some grub."

The man addressed grabbed the limp figure far from gently, and hustled him through the door. As the others disappeared, leading the three horses, Mortimer grasped my sleeve.

"That's Preacher Jenks," he whispered, "from down at the Cross Roads. What can Fagin want of him?"

"If Fagin is Grant's tool, and Grant is here," I answered soberly, "I am ready to make a guess at what is up." The recollection of the captain's threat at the summer-house instantly recurred to memory. "Here, you lads, skulk down into those bushes, while I try that balcony. That is the library, isn't it, Eric? I thought so; I've been under guard there twice. The window shows no light, but some one is in the room beyond. Give me a leg up, Tom, and stand close so you can hear if I speak."

It was not high from the ground, but I could not grip the top of the rail without help. With Tom's assistance I went over lightly enough, and without noise. The window was the one which had been broken during the first assault on the house, and never repaired. I found ample room for crawling through. The door into the hall stood partly ajar, a little light streaming through the crack, so I experienced no difficulty in moving about freely. A glance told me the apartment was unoccupied, although I heard the murmur of distant voices earnestly conversing. Occasionally an emphatic oath sounded clear and distinct. My first thought was that the men with me would be better concealed here than in the bushes below, and I leaned over the rail, and bade them join me. Within another minute the three of us were in the room intently listening. I stole across to the crack of the door. The hall was empty so far as I could see looking toward the rear of the house, and the voices we heard were evidently in the dining-room. Occasionally there was a clatter of dishes, or the scraping of a chair on the polished floor. One voice sang out an order to a servant, a nasal voice, slightly thickened by wine, and I wheeled about, gazing inquiringly into Mortimer's face.

"That's Grant," he said quickly, "and half drunk."

"I thought so; that's when he is really dangerous. Stay close here; if the hallway is clear I am going to get into the shadow there under the stairs. Have your weapons ready."

Fagin Roared Out: "What Is It Now? Heard From Culver?"

Where the fellow was who had been at the front door I could not determine. He had disappeared somehow, and I slipped along the wall for the necessary ten feet like a shadow, and crept in beneath the shelter of the staircase. From here I could look into the room opposite, although only a portion of the space was revealed. There was no cloth on the table, and but few dishes, but I counted a half-dozen bottles, mostly empty, and numerous glasses. Grant was at one end, his uniform dusty and stained, but his eyes alone betraying intoxication. Beside him was a tall, stoop-shouldered man, with matted beard, wearing the coat of a British Grenadier, but with all insignia of rank ripped from it. He had a mean mouth, and yellow, fang-like teeth were displayed whenever he spoke. Beyond this fellow, and only half seen from where I crouched, was a heavy-set individual, his face almost purple, with a thatch of uncombed red hair. He wore the cocked hat of a Dragoon, pushed to the back of his head, his feet were encased in long cavalry boots, crossed on the table, and he was pulling furiously at a pipe, the stem gripped firmly between his teeth. Who the bearded man might be I had no means of knowing, but this beauty was without doubt Fagin. I stared at him, fascinated, recalling the stories of his fiendish cruelty, my heart thumping violently, while my fingers gripped the butt of my pistol. Then, without warning, a man stepped out of the darkened parlor, passed within three feet of my hiding place, and stood within the dining-room door. The three within looked at him, and Fagin roared out:

"What is it now? Heard from Culver?"

CHAPTER XXXI.

They Send for Claire.

I could only see the fellow's back, with hair hanging low over the collar, but his voice was clear.

"Got here five minutes ago. The preacher is locked in the parlor."

"By God! Good! Now we can play out the game, eh, Captain? Or," turning about suspiciously, and staring at the other, who sat with eyes shaded by one hand, "are you weakening as the time draws near?"

"Hell's fire! No! We gave her a choice, and she only laughed at it. I'll go on now to spite the wench; only I think we should bring in the boy first, and prove to her that we've actually got him."

Fagin emptied the glass in his hand, giving utterance to an oath as he replaced it on the table.

"Yer as chicken-hearted drunk as sober, Grant," he said coarsely. "Did yer hear the fool, Jones, an' after all I've told him?"

The bearded man nodded silently, his eyes shifting from one face to the other. Fagin grinned, and poured out another drink.

"Now listen again," he went on, half angrily. "That boy's worth money ter us—a thousand pounds—but it wouldn't do yer any good ter be mixed up in the affair, would it? What chance would yer have in this estate, or fer yer commission either, if Howe or Clinton got an inklin' of yer game? Good Lord, man! they'd hang yer instead of the other fellow. You'll have ter lie some as it is, I reckon, ter explain why yer left Sir Henry, an' came down here. Have yer got that fact inter yer brains?"

Grant glared at him wickedly, but remained silent across the table.

"Yer already in had enough, without huntin' more trouble. Better leave the boy alone. I thought, at first, we'd have ter use him, but I don't now. Let the girl believe he's deserted, and that yer in a position ter help him. That will serve yer purpose better than the other scheme. It may awaken her gratitude, her sweet love!"

"Damn her love!"

"So it isn't love, eh, that makes yer so anxious. I thought as much. What is it, then—revenge?"

Grant held his breath a moment, his dull eyes on the faces of the two men.

"Well, I might as well tell you," he snarled at last. "I loved her once, I guess; anyhow I wanted her badly enough. I want her now, but not in just the same way. I want to show her I'm the master. I want to give her a lesson, and that cub brother of hers. I'd have got them all, the Colonel with them, if that damned Colonial spy hadn't stolen my coat. I had them, dead to rights, Fagin, and the papers to prove it. Now I don't care how it's done, so I get her. I thought she'd marry me to save the boy, but if she won't, why then, you carry out your plan—what is it?"

Fagin laughed, again emptying his glass.

"Easy enough. She's alone, except for her father, and he can't get out of bed. We've got Jenks here, an' the damned old coward will do whatever I tell him."

"But she despises me—"

"Oh, no! We'll make you a victim. That will leave things in proper shape between yer two. We'll play it off as a drunken lark—eh, Jones? My God! it won't be the first time we've done the trick either. Do you remember that love-sick couple over at Tom's River, Ned? Never laughed so much in my life. This is a better one. Lord! but won't old Mortimer rave, an' mighty little good it will do him. Come, what do yer say, Grant? Are yer game?"

"Hell's fire—yes." He got to his feet, gripping the back of his chair. "Bring—bring 'em in; this is a good place."

Fagin struck the table with his fist.

"Of course it is, drink ter the bride after the ceremony. Bill, bring in the preacher."

"It was growing daylight. I could perceive the glow of the sky out through the window, but the candles still sputtered on the table, casting grim lights and shadows on the faces of the three men. As Bill disappeared into the parlor, I stole silently back to the library door.

"Tom," I whispered briefly, "find the boys, and bring them in here, through that broken window. They are in the orchard to the right, and there are no guards in front. Move lively, but be quiet."

"What is it, Major?" asked young Mortimer, eagerly.

"I can't explain now. I must get back where I can see and hear. But there is going to be a fight. Hold the men ready here until I call. See that their weapons are in good order."

I caught the glint of his eye, but could wait no longer. Indeed I was scarcely back, snuggled under the stairs, when Bill came forth, gripping the collar of his prisoner's coat, and urging him down the hall. I crouched lower, the morning light threatening to reveal my hiding place, yet with mind more at ease, now I knew the men were close at hand. Within five minutes the entire squad would be crowded into that room, eager for trouble to begin. Probably Fagin did not have a half-dozen fellows in the house. If we could strike swiftly enough we might overpower them all, without creating alarm outside, where the main body lay. Some carelessness had brought us good luck in having the front of the house left unguarded. These thoughts swept over me, and left me confident. The time had come when I was to serve her, to prove my own worthiness. I felt ready and eager for the trial.

I caught a glimpse of Jenks' face, as Bill jerked him forward. The man was gray with terror, his parchment-like skin seamed and contorted. He was a tall, loose-jointed creature, wearing a long black coat flapping about his knees. The guard fairly held him up in the doorway, and both Fagin and Jones laughed at the pitiful sight, the former ending his roar with an outburst of profanity.

"Let Me Pass, Sir—This Is My Father's House."

"Go on back ter the front door, Bill," he ordered roughly. "This fellow'll never run away; his legs wouldn't carry him. Now, Mr. Preacher," glowering savagely at the poor devil across the bottle-strewn table, "do yer know who I am?"

Jenks endeavored to answer, from the convulsive movement of his throat, but made no sound. Fagin cursed again.

"If it wasn't such a waste of good liquor I'd pour some of this down your gullet," he exclaimed, shaking a half-filled bottle in his fist. "Then maybe you could answer when I spoke to you. Now, see here, you canting old hypocrite, I'm Red Fagin, an' I guess you know what that means. I'm pison, an' I don't like your style. Now you're goin' to do just what I tell you, or the boys will have a hangin' bee down in the ravine. Speak up, an' tell me what you propose to do."

Jenks wet his dry lips with his tongue, clinging to the sides of the door with both hands.

"What—what is it you wish of me?" his uncertain gaze wandering over the three faces, yet coming back to Fagin.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

DOCTOR'S PROTEST AGAINST SWEARING

Windsor Man Thinks Foul Language on the Increase—"Polite Cussing" Not Now Tolerated

Dr. James Samson, of Windsor, Ontario, speaking of the language heard on street cars between Windsor and Tecumseh, declares that "a half hour on a late car surpassed in savage hideousness any other that I can recall in my entire life." He calls it a "damnable state of affairs," and goes on to say that "for brutal coarseness, vulgarity, blasphemy, drunkenness, ribald songs, filthy language, and licentious conduct, no place this side of Hades could have furnished a more disgraceful exhibit."

The protest made by this physician recalls the fact that a Halifax man died recently who made it his business to campaign against bad language. He wrote hundreds of letters to the press calling attention to the evils of blasphemy. And a great many people described him as a crank, and alleged that he did not know what he was talking about. His crusade, they said, was unjustified, because unnecessary. Bad language, they were sure, was less frequently heard than when they were boys.

In a measure that is so. In many quarters it used to be the "correct thing" to swear, just as it used to be the "correct thing" to drink. But like the every-day beer on the Englishman's table, the indulgence was mild in its form. It was unnecessary but hardly intemperance. Fewer people may nowadays say "damn" when they prick their fingers, but there is a type of ribald swearing which shows no signs of diminishment.

TREE THAT EXHIBITS ANGER

In Idaho a Species Quakes and Emits an Unpleasant Odor When Disturbed.

In Idaho there exists a species of the acacia tree which is entitled to be classed as one of the wonders of plant life. This tree, Harper's Weekly states, attains a height of about eight feet. When full grown it closes its leaves together in coils each day at sunset and curls its twigs to the shape of pigtails. When the tree has thus settled itself for its night's sleep it is said that if touched it will flutter as if agitated or impatient at the disturbance. The oftener, it is averred, the foliage is molested, the more violent will become the shaking of the branches. Finally, it is further alleged, if the shaking be continued, the tree will at length emit a nauseating odor quite sufficient to induce a headache in the case of the person disturbing the tree.

In Idaho it is called the "angry tree" and it is said that it was discovered by men who, on making camp for the night, placed one end of a canvas covering over one of the sensitive branches, using it for a support. Immediately the tree began to jerk its branches sharply. The motion continued, with increasing "nervousness," until at last came a sickening odor that drove the tired campers to a more friendly location.

Curiosity prompted an investigation. One of the "angry trees" was dug up and thrown to one side. Immediately upon being removed from the ground it is said that the tree opened its leaves, its twigs lost their pigtails and for something over an hour and a half the outraged branches showed their indignation by a series of quakings, which grew weaker and weaker and ceased when the foliage had become limp and withered.

Strengthens the Throat, Assists Public Speakers

Catarrhozone is the Greatest Invention of the Age for Weak Throat, Hoarseness, &c.

Strongly Endorsed by the Clergy.

Because of its strengthening influence upon the vocal cords, Catarrhozone cannot be too highly recommended as a wonderful voice improver. It almost instantly removes huskiness or hoarseness, thus insuring clearness and brilliancy of tone. The most eminent speakers and prima donnas are seldom without Catarrhozone, and credit in no small degree their uniform strength and brilliancy of tone to its influence.

"For many years I have been a sufferer from that terrible disease known as CATARRH.

"Being a professional singer, you can readily understand that Catarrh would be a serious hindrance to my professional skill.

"One year ago I read in the "Progress" a convincing testimonial from one who had been cured of this disease through using your God-sent invention, Catarrhozone.

"Believing in the merit of Catarrhozone, I tried it.

"Catarrhozone cured me, and has been the means of my success.

"You are at liberty to use my name if it will help relieve some from suffering, and I will always remain,

"Bob Bixley, New Glasgow, N.S."

Mr. Bixley is one of the best known singers and entertainers in the Maritime Provinces. Everyone knows him and his testimonial for Catarrhozone is the best sort of evidence of what great benefit Catarrhozone is to those suffering from throat weakness or catarrh.

She Was Helpless For Two Years

WHY MRS. BALDWIN RECOMMENDS DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

She Could Find Nothing to Cure Her Rheumatism Till on a Neighbor's Advice She Tried Dodd's Kidney Pills.

St. Walburg, Sask., May 26.—(Special).—"I can truly recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills for any one suffering from rheumatism." These are the words of Mrs. W. A. Baldwin, a highly respected resident of this place. And Mrs. Baldwin gives her reasons.

"I was nearly helpless with rheumatism for two years," she states. "I got medicine from the doctor, and tried several other remedies but nothing helped me. Then one of my neighbors advised me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I bought four boxes, and they helped almost from the first. I have used nearly two dozen boxes and am nearly cured."

That rheumatism is one of the results of diseased kidneys is again shown in Mrs. Baldwin's case. She had headaches, stiffness of the joints and backache, her sleep was broken and unrefreshing, and she was always tired and nervous. Her limbs swelled and she was always thirsty. These are all symptoms of diseased kidneys. When she cured her kidneys with Dodd's Kidney Pills, the symptoms vanished—and so did the rheumatism.

THE FUR INDUSTRY

Supply in Canada Rapidly Diminishing —Must Be Conserved

That something should be done to stem the upward trend of prices in furs throughout the Dominion, due to the serious decrease in Canadian fur-bearing animals, is the opinion of the commission of conservation, and with this end in view Mr. Walter Jones, an expert of the commission, conducted an investigation as to the possibilities of breeding fur-bearing animals in captivity, along similar lines to the black fox industries in Prince Edward Island. The investigation was conducted throughout the five eastern Provinces of Canada, and took three months to complete.

Mr. Jones' report demonstrates that the supply of valuable Canadian fur-bearing animals is diminishing with alarming rapidity, especially during the past ten or fifteen years. The decrease is ascribed to the increasing outdoor habits of the people, and to the tremendous demand for fur and leather, resultant upon the growth of automobile traffic. It is calculated that upon an average the price of furs has increased over 300 per cent. during the past decade, while many varieties of fur, such as the marten and the fisher, have reached prices prohibitive in their nature. In fact, Mr. Jones estimates that at the present rate furs will be a luxury only to be enjoyed by the very rich in twenty years' time.

The success of fox breeding in captivity is believed by Mr. Jones to be an inspiration toward the breeding in the same manner of other fur-bearers notably of the family of Mustelidae, including such animals as the marten, mink, fisher, otter, skunk, ermine and wolverine, all of which have exceedingly valuable pelts.

It is recognized that the farming of those animals cannot be as profitable as the black fox industry. The investigation conducted by Mr. Jones took him through the farms of Prince Edward Island, and he states that the revenues are enormous in many cases.

Won't Hurt Bill.

A certain Indianapolis Sunday school, which is conducting a recruiting campaign by modern advertising methods, through a publicity committee, has received a suggestion for an appeal, to be posted abroad. It reads:

"Hello, Bill. Come, let us save your soul. It can't hurt you, and it will help us. Be a good fellow!"

The committee has the suggestion under advisement.

YOU CAN MAKE MONEY IN

Carmangay

"The Star of Alberta"

PAST The splendidly strategic site of Carmangay was discovered by a far seeing, shrewd railway engineer attracted to the district by the lure of the finest wheat in the Canadian West. He snapped up lands where the wide canyons of the Little Bow River narrows to a point. Here must all railways cross. The C. P. R. came and the shipping centre created went ahead by leaps and bounds.

PRESENT Carmangay today is a thriving incorporated town, with not less than 53 business places. Her up-to-date electric and natural water supply systems are owned and operated by the people. Carmangay boasts an eight-roomed schoolhouse, two banks and four big elevators, shipping over a million bushels in 1911 and 1½ millions in 1912. Carmangay has coal mines operating, and the entire district is underlaid with coal of finest Galt quality.

FUTURE Carmangay grows as Alberta grows. That means a wonderful future. Four new railroads are heading for Carmangay. Four new elevators are trying to cope with the tremendous wheat yields of the district. The mines are opening up splendid prospects. Carmangay is being rapidly developed into one of the greatest towns in the Canadian West. YOU can just as confidently invest in Carmangay as her own people do, who are building in brick and stone for a tremendous future. Carmangay has her own supply of finest brick clay and stone right at her doors, and will soon supply her sister cities in Alberta.

GOVERNMENT TO SPEND FIVE MILLION DOLLARS DREDGING

Tenders for Immense Undertaking Closed and Contract Will be Awarded Next Week--Over Thirty-One Million Cubic Yards of Earth to be Removed --Eight Years' Work

Toronto, May 28.—A slight indication of the magnitude of the Toronto harbor improvements planned by the Harbor Board is given by the dredging contracts which will be signed within the next week. The tenders closed yesterday were five in number, including two from Canadian firms, a like number from English firms and the fifth from an American concern.

In all 31,230,000 cubic yards of dredging is to be done and it will require just eight years to complete the contracts. Three of the most powerful dredges in the world will be employed throughout that lengthy period, each capable of pumping 700 to 1,000 yards per hour. Every working day enough sand will be lifted from the bottom of the bay and dumped elsewhere under the Harbor Board's higher development scheme to cover Yonge street two feet deep from King to Bloor street.

Million Dollars to Cover Deposits.

One of the English firms tendering has just completed an enormous contract in South Africa, and has a fleet of 27 big steel ocean-going dredges. One of the largest of their fleet is now en route to England from South Africa and has been stopped at an intermediate point so that it can be shipped to Canada without delay, providing the firm gets the contract here.

In all the contracts will call for the expenditure of approximately $5,000,000.

Which Will It Be?

The eyes of Canada are now turned upon the Senate. If the Liberal majority rises above the call of party, and merely considers the bounden duty of Canada under the existing circumstances, then the Naval Bill will pass. If the party call is stronger than the call of national duty, then the Senate will condemn the Liberal party to many years of opposition by defeating the Bill.

AGAINST ARMY TO SUPPRESS RIOTS AND LOCAL DISORDERS

In the course of a spirited debate on the Militia estimates in the House, the Member for West Peterborough expressed himself in reply to Mr. Carvell, Liberal Member for Carleton, N.B., strongly against the keeping up of a standing army in Canada for the suppression of civil disorders. He spoke, as reported by Hansard, as follows:

"MR. BURNHAM: I understand the hon. member for Carleton (Mr. Carvell) to take a view of the military affairs of Canada which is incompatible with the proper consideration of that subject, at any rate in my opinion. As I understand him, he is in favour of a permanent force. He thinks that anything in the way of civil war or labour riots, industrial conflicts, whatever it may be, might be put down by a permanent corps. He believes that it may be supposed to be able to put down such troubles as those if they arise. For my part, I am altogether against that. I do not believe in that sort of thing at all. A permanent force, so far as I can understand military affairs, which perhaps is not very far—but in this I think I am voicing to a certain extent the views of some of the people of Canada—a permanent force is not needed in Canada; what is needed is some such body as the militia which affords a system of training for the young men, not necessarily to gore each other, and go at each other or to attack people inside or outside of Canada; its greatest usefulness is as a system of discipline. I understand that the Minister of Militia has some such view in regard to militia affairs and that that is why he is developing so rapidly the cadet system; it is to introduce a spirit of discipline and esprit de corps into the youth of Canada. I would therefore take away the two and a half or three million dollars provided for the permanent corps in the estimates, which would reduce the estimates by so much, and add one-half of that amount to the development of the militia corps. That would have the effect of bringing down the estimates to a certain extent and of developing the young man of Canada in the way that it seems to me they ought to be developed. I cannot express myself too strongly against the theory that we should provide a permanent force in Canada for the suppression of our own people."

SARNIA MAN AND HIS AUTO PLUNGE FROM FERRY TO RIVER

Mr. Bowen Is Rescued by Sailors, And Auto Recovered Later By Wrecking Gang

Sarnia, Ont., May 28.—While driving his five-passenger automobile on to the ferry boat last evening, Fred Bowen, of Petrolea, had a most unusual experience. As the auto was being driven on the boat it struck the gang plank chains on the opposite side of the deck, and auto and driver plunged into the river, sinking in about 30 feet of water. Mr. Bowen, when he came to the surface was rescued by men on the ferry Hiawatha. With the aid of a diver and the Reid Wrecking Company's wrecker Manistique, the auto was recovered about ten o'clock this morning.

NEW SCHEDULE OF GARBAGE COLLECTORS

The new garbage collectors, Messrs Graham and Hare have commenced their work from the present area, and the new extension recently decided upon, by the City Council. This necessitated a slight change in daily routine, but to save confusion the old schedule has been adhered to, as far as possible.

As June, July, August and September call for two services a week, the whole district has been divided into three sections by the Sanitary Inspector, which will be served as follows:

Time Table.

On Mondays and Thursdays that section bounded on the East by the Road, from Charlotte to Sherbrooke streets and Park streets, from Sherbrooke to Townsend, on the north by the south side of Charlotte street, from the river to Monaghan Road, and on the south by Monaghan Road.

On Tuesdays and Fridays, that section bounded on the east by the River, on the west by the east side of Aylmer street from Charlotte to the G.T.R. track, and thence along the track to the Auburn railway bridge, and on the south by the north side of Charlotte street from the River to Aylmer.

On Wednesdays and Saturdays that section bounded on the east by the west side of Aylmer, from Charlotte to London, and on the west side by Monaghan Road from Charlotte to Elm, and by Cambridge street to McDonnel, on the north by London from Aylmer to Park, and on the south by the north side of Charlotte, from Aylmer to the Monaghan road.

FORMER LOCAL HOTEL MAN DIES IN OREGON.

Yesterday Mr. George W. Hatton received a letter from Mr. J. F. R. Fairbairn, an old Peterborough boy, now of "Multomah Farm," Troutdale, Ore. "Cherry," as Mr. Fairbairn was known to his friends here, wrote to say, among other matters, that Mr. Lemuel Bradfield Fulcher, who formerly conducted a saloon in this city, died May 7th at Troutdale.

MEMBERS WANT LARGER GRANTS

Ottawa, May 28.—A movement which has originated amongst the Liberals, has been started for an increased indemnity, and a Round Robin is being circulated around the House to-day. It has been signed by nearly all the Liberals and many Conservatives. The present outlook is that it will be far from unanimous, as many members, particularly Conservatives, are objecting. There is a strong feeling, however, that with the length of the sessions and the increased cost of living, the indemnity should be raised. The present indemnity of $2,500 is a particular hardship on the far western and the far eastern members who have to abandon their business and close their homes for six months every year.

UNWRITTEN LAW FREES A MAN

Found Another With His Wife—He Pulled Trigger.

Vallejo, Calif., May 28.—The unwritten law freed Coseph Hoversby, slayer of a man who had been too friendly with his wife, from a charge of murder here last night at his preliminary examination. He previously had been exonerated by a coroner's jury.

Hoversby, an employe at the Mare Island navy yard, returned home unexpectedly the night of May 17, and found J. F. Rainey, a navy electrician with Mrs. Hoversby. He shot and killed Rainey and his wife committed suicide immediately afterward. Acting as his own counsel, Hoversby related to the court a simple story of the tragedy of his happy married life of twenty years with the dead woman, and made no other attempt to justify the shooting.

ITALIAN GOVERNMENT IS SLOW TO ADMIT ARABS WON OUT

Italians Lost Four Hundred Dead, Seven Hundred Wounded Some Regiments Nearly Wiped Out---Artillery Men and Maxim Crews Piled in Heaps--Guns Are Lost

London, May 28.—Bit by bit, a story of a bloody defeat of the Italian army by Arabs before Derna on May 16 has been finding its way to Italy, and has led stirring protests in Parliament, while creating a sense of deep humiliation throughout the country.

The first official announcement which reached the Rome Government on May 16 was laconic enough and recounted the affairs as an Italian victory. General Mambretti's troops had occupied the enemy's strongly held trenches after a sharp combat at Sidi Garba and Ras El Ain Theo. While the troops were resting the Bedouins had delivered another vigorous attack, which had ended in their retreat on the entry of the Italian reserves, and at eventide the Italian troops had re-entered Derna in an orderly manner.

Censor Was Very Busy.

Later came tidings of 82 killed and 247 wounded. Another couple of days passed before the correspondents were allowed to cable anything. Even under the stern working censorship the war correspondents are absolutely forbidden to follow the army, but on this occasion two managed to break through. It is through their narrative and from letters sent home by survivors as well as from the lips of 17 officers, and 531 men whom King Victor Emmanuel went down to cheer and interview on their arrival in a military hospital ship at Naples, that the real truth is becoming known.

Yesterday the Rome Journal summed up the situation in a leading article of protest against the lying official communications relative to the number of the dead and wounded and those made prisoners complaining of the renewal of the methods of deliberate deceit resorted to from the very outset of the Italo-Turkish war.

Government Concealed the Facts.

Fortified with documentary testimony on which it challenges denial, "Laventi" states that 300 were killed, more than 700 were wounded and more than 100 others including many officers were taken prisoners by the Arabs. Very many wounded were abandoned on the field.

The Salary Grab Again

It is notorious that a large number of members on both sides of the House are in favor of an increased indemnity. Verville, Labor Liberal, attacked the Government for not bringing down such a Bill. Hon. R. Rogers said in reply that he did not know what the Government could do if the members on both sides insisted, but he seemed opposed to the suggestion. Proulx, Walker, Burnham, Broder and some others have refused to compromise in their opposition to it.

WOMAN "SMUGGLER" IS FINED $2,000

Counsel Asks Mercy and Pleads that Prison Sentence Be not Imposed.

Trenton, N. J., May 28.—A fine of $2000 was imposed on Mrs. Agnes Mangels, of San Francisco, Cal., who is alleged to have landed on May 12 from the steamship Amerika at Hoboken without declaring a proper value of goods brought by her from aboard. Mrs. Mangels entered a plea of non vult. Her counsel pleaded with the court to extend some mercy and not impose a prison sentence.

The value of the goods brought into the country was estimated by the federal customs appraisers at about $5500, of which $1000 was declared. It was stated to the court that restitution to the value of 60 per cent. of the goods had been made to the customs officers.

Miss Agnes Tillman, a niece of Mrs. Mangels, was cited to appear because of alleged improper declaration of gowns and jewels, but the charges against her were withdrawn. Miss Tillman agreed to pay the duty for the full value of her property.

DUKE OF CONNAUGHT IS SURE TO RETURN

Ottawa, May 28.—Notwithstanding a news agency despatch from the Old Country to-day, there is every reason to believe that the term of the Duke of Connaught as Governor-General of Canada will not only be completed, but will be extended. The most satisfactory reports are to hand concerning the health of the Duchess. Both her Royal Highness and Princess Patricia desire to return. The whole prospect at present is that all will be back for an extended occupancy of Rideau Hall.

SENATE WILL NEVER BE ABOVE PEOPLE

Premier's Significant Statement. — Told Toronto Audience that If Senate did Bidding of Laurier Immediate Remedy Must be Sought and Found.

A significant warning was given to the Senate by Premier Borden at the big Toronto meeting, if the upper chamber thwarts public opinion by throwing out the Naval Bill. It was a warning that if the members of the upper chamber are prepared to dance when Sir Wilfrid Laurier pulls the strings that there must be Senate reform. That the Liberal Senators would be so fatuous as to defy public opinion is such an important measure so vitally affecting the interests of the whole empire seems hardly possible.

Here are the words of warning of the Premier uttered after referring to the fact there were many men of high character in the Senate and he declined to believe they would do only Laurier's bidding:

> "Otherwise I would be prepared to declare that the Canadian Senate as at present constituted had thoroughly outlived its usefulness, and that an immediate remedy MUST BE SOUGHT AND FOUND. The Senate is an important part of our constitutional machinery, and is entitled to every respect, but it is not, never was, and NEVER WILL BE ABOVE THE CANADIAN PEOPLE."

BOY BANDITS HOLD UP STAGE

Dorchester Lad and Companion Routed by Whip of Maine Driver.

Auburn, Me., May 28.—Hearts of Capt. Kidd and Jesse James size beating in breasts of boys scarcely old enough to don long trousers to-day disturbed this city and its twin, Lewiston, and incidentally tenanted one of the cells in the station house of the latter municipality.

In the wee hours this morning Edward Hackett, for many years driver of the stage between this city and Mechanic Falls, clambered upon the box of his old, lumbering coach and began drumming away the miles. He still was engaged in building air castles when the stage struck the loneliest portion of the run.

"Hands up!"

Hackett gazed into the muzzle of a revolver and then let one eye wander to the form behind the muzzle. And when he saw it his courage was strong.

"The man behind the gun," as Edward remarked tonight was little bigger than a dwarf with a side show. And even smaller was a companion, similarly armed and masked, who stood nearby, like one offering support to the captain of a robber band.

Neither figure spoke and Hackett applied his whip to the two boys, who, howling, were soon lost to view in the woods.

Soon afterward, over on the line of the Lewiston, Augusta & Waterville electric car line, the crew of one car noticed a switch was always out of order when they came to it. They determined to watch and learn the reason. The two diminutive bandits masked and with guns, were seen leaving it as the car approached.

After a short chase the lads were caught. At the Lewiston police station one boy said his name was Charles J. Kelly, and that he lived at 22 Howell street, Dorchester, Mass., while the other was found to be a lad named Frank Hodges of this

LONDON STREET BRIDGE MAY BE CLEARED AWAY SHORTLY

Agreement Between Quaker Oats Co and the City Not Yet Reached--Formers Conditions Under Which Bridge May Continue in Use Not Acceptable to City

The Cityjs Board of Works met last night Chairman Ald. Buller presiding. There were also present Mayor Bradburn, and Aldermen Anderson, McIntyre, Johnston and Gordon.

The chairmen of the Board of Works and Property Committee were given power to act in regard to necessary changes in the engineer's office at an expense of between $150 and $200.

The request of the Bell Telephone toarect eight poles on Romaine street was referred to the city engineer for his approval.

G. E. Gordon wrote, proposing that a notice prohibiting bicycling in Central Paro be posted. No action was taken.

The sidewalk on the west side, of Aylmer street, from Townsend to Perry street, will be laid inside the tree line.

City Engineer Parsons recommended the purchase of an electric motor 25 h.p. at a cost of $160, with which to drive the stone crusher and for other purposes. On motion of Ald. Johnston and Anderson this recommendation will be adopted.

The Caterpillar Pest!

The City Engineer reported that while the city is fighting the caterpillar pest, little effort is being made in this direction on the part of citizens. Again, the apple orchard on the Hilliard farm (city property) is in serious danger of destruction by this pest. This orchard is under rent to a tenant, and the city trust commissioners' attention will be drawn to the matter. His worship will by letter in the press request citizens to take care of trees on and in front of their property.

Sign to the Lift Lock.

On suggestion of Ald. Johnston, seconded by Ald. McIntyre, a sign pointing the way to the lift lock will be placed at the corner of Hunter and Concession streets.

Fast Travelling Over Hunter Street Bridge.

The chairman was instructed to draw the attention of the police to the fact that people do not obey the sign to travel not faster than a walk over Hunter street bridge, with instructions to see that the law is obeyed.

The cracks in the flooring of the bridge are to be filled up.

New Catch-Basin.

On motion of Ald. Johnston and Anderson a catch basin will be put in on George street, north of Smith.

To Enforce Sewer Connections.

The Board of Health recommended that a by-law be passed giving them authority to compel the connection of all premises with sewers where sewers are adjacent to the properties. This was laid over till Monday night Council meeting. It is doubtful, if the city could give the Board of Health such authority unless council defines an area in which all sewer connections must be made.

To Remove Poles.

The Canadian Machine Telephone Company will be notified to remove their poles (not needed) on Smith street, between the boundary and the bridge, and that the Bell Company's request for permission to erect poles within the same area be granted.

Smith Street Bridge.

The Quaker Oats Company is willing to give the city a right-of-way over the old London street bridge, providing Murray street from London to Murray be given the company. Council cannot see the way clear to accede to these conditions, and the company has given notice to clear away the old bridge. Should the city close up this end of Murray street asked for, complications with property owners in that locality might arise. The Board of Works will interview Mr. Denham, of the Tuaker Oats Company again on this question, in the hope that an agreement acceptable to all concerned may yet be reached.

Foreman for Sewer Construction.

Wm. Bridges, Wm. Ball, Martin Neary, Geo. Curtis and Wm. Maxwell were applicants for the position of foreman over sewer construction. Their applications were referred to the chairman and the City Engineer to report.

Outfall Sewer Question.

Engineer Parsons replied to the Mayor that preparations pending the construction of the new outfall sewer are in just such shape where his department can report progress.

Canadian Ships Needed

"The Canadian ships are absolutely necessary for the whole world defence of the British Empire from the end of 1915."—Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty.

WHEN STATLER SITE IS SETTLED UP GOES BIG MODERN HOTEL

Toronto, May 28.—Mr. E. M. Statler, head of the Statler Hotels at Buffalo and Cleveland, has confirmed the statement published some weeks ago that he will build in Toronto.

Unexpected difficulties in closing the deal for the site have delayed matters, otherwise construction would now be under way.

"The site we expect to secure," Mr. Statler said, "is sufficiently large for the erection of one of the most commodious hotels on the continent."

In reference to the hotel itself, Mr. Statler stated that it would contain upwards of eight hundred rooms and suites, each with a bath. As regards fixtures, appointments, and accommodation generally the new hotel will rank with the most luxurious and palatial in America.

It was stated that the Toronto hotel would be the first of a number the magnate proposes to erect both in Canada and across the border.

JINX REMOVED, PETES BACK AND WHITEWASH HAMILTON

At last the Petes have got rid of the jink. Yesterday afternoon Byrne of the Petes spotted him comfortably perched on the homester's bench and kindly asked him to change his spots and get set on the visitors pen for a change—and it was so.

Quite a number of fans turned out yesterday to witness the first game of the series with Hamilton. They were not disappointed, the Petes came back, stronger than ever. It was said that Davie Rowan changed his dope and yesterday morning he gave the boys a little injection of his famous serum "paprica." The boys immediately showed signs of improvement, and when the game opened yesterday the change was mighty noticeable. The boys full of new life, or of the old, which ever you like, started out to trim the visitors to a standstill and they certainly succeeded. Hamilton never had a chance that is what we said about the Petes yesterday, but we'll take it all back, they simply could not get connected with Belding's pill at all.

In the first innings big Red Fisher, catcher for Hamilton, was struck on the cheek bone with a ball pitched by Belding and was very seriously hurt, and it will be some time before he will be able to play again. No scoring was done until the third innings, when the Petes got two, and then closed the gates, and Hamilton didn't have a peep in. Belding for the Petes pitched a beautiful game never at any time being in danger, and had the best of them guessing—he was full of life from start to finish. In fact the boys to a man worked hard. In the sixth, they all took a slap at Teed of the visitors and touched him for six hits.

It is expected that Davie will keep on treating the boys with his famous serum for the balance of the week anyway. All the fans were wearing a broad smile last night and all the hard things that were "thought" the day before were wiped out, and now you can hear nothing but great praise being handed out.

The batteries—For Hamilton, Teed and Barton; Petes, Belding and McNeal.

Umpire—Halligan.

NUGENT'S SARSAPARILLA—PRICE FOR large bottle, 100 full doses, 50c. and well worth it, too. It's better to take no medicine at all than to depend upon cheap concoctions that are compounded to sell at low price and a big profit just because there is a large demand for certain remedies at certain seasons of the year. There are so-called Sarsaparillas offered to us to sell to our customers at 25c a bottle that would bring us a larger profit than Nugent's Sarsaparilla sold at 50c. Nugent's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, arouses the torpid liver, drives out all impurities, cleanses and tones up the system, and helps Nature throw off the dullness that comes from indoor life of winter. It arouses energy, brightens the eye, clears the brain, gives lightness to the movements. Nugent's Sarsaparilla is not the only thing you will find in this drug store. We make a specialty of Nugent's Remedies. Nugent Drug Co., [illegible] George St., directly opposite Cressman's store.

CANADIAN BEARS STILL PLENTIFUL

Fur Bearing Animals of the North Which Entice the Trapper and Produce Riches.

The Canadian bear continues to flourish in the far north. As many as 1,000 skins are taken into Edmonton in an average season. Ninety per cent. of the ursus victims are black and a good one brings in the sum of $30 to the husky hunter. But bear skins vary greatly in quality.

Next to the bear comes the fox, and he also varies in value according to his color. Size, color, everything must be taken into account. There are red foxes, commonest of all; cross foxes, those with fur varying from a red to a silver hue; silver foxes; and black foxes, which very scarce. The silver fox is, of course, the great prize, but here again the hunter is often cruelly disappointed when he comes to dispose of his supposed treasure. The price of the silver fox skin ranges from $35 to $1,500 according to size, color and quality.

Silver Fox a Freak

Strange to tell, the silver fox, rarest and most valuable of fur-bearing animals, is a freak of nature. He is found in the litter of the red fox. His father may be worth only $11, while he, raised in the same burrow, fed with the same food, subjected to the same family discipline, is worth perhaps as much as two thousand dollars.

Although the mink retreats from the haunts of man, this beautiful little animal is very plentiful in the north land. As many as 5,000 mink skins are received in the fur houses of Edmonton every year. Martins, badgers and skunks are also caught in fairly large numbers.

Lots of Big Deer

The moose and the caribou abound in the far north also, but they are not killed for their skins. The Indians use their skins for a number of purposes; for instance, they make very fine moccasins from moose hide.

The fur-trading companies of the north have many vexations. The caprices of the fashion-makers of Paris and London bother them not a little. When a fur goes out of fashion the demand will of course fall off; the price of the raw fur of the particular animal will fluctuate, perhaps decrease considerably. Naturally the company will not wish to pay the Indian or half-breed hunter as much for the peltry, but owing to the distance of the trading posts from Edmonton, it takes two months at least to get the news to the factors, and, by that time, probably large quantities have been bought at a large advance on market value. Then there is competition in the fur business in the wilds.

Indians Very Wily

Big companies and little traders are out for business. The Indian hunter is wary enough to take full advantage of this rivalry. He knows he has valuable goods for sale, and, with great diplomacy, he sets one buyer off against the other. He invariably demands supplies, flour, tobacco, tea, arms and ammunition before he will go out to hunt. If a fur company grub-stakes him, they have to do it pretty much as a gamble, for the Indian, as like as not, will come home with his furs and sell them to the rival company.

HOME HINTS

When cleaning damp boots, add a few drops of paraffin to the blacking. This gives a good polish and prevents the leather from cracking.

When the tag of a shoe-lace comes off, twist the lace and smear it with black sealing-wax. This answers the purpose as well as the original tag.

To remove shine from a blue serge skirt make some very strong blue water and sponge the serge. Allow to dry slightly, then lay a thin cloth over the material and press with a warm iron.

When gas mantles split at the bottom, lift off and carefully trim away the frayed edges with a pair of scissors, and shorten the mantle support. This will increase the light to its former brilliancy, and can be repeated a second time. As mantle supports only cost three a penny, this will be found a great saving.

Chopping and pastry boards, after being scrubbed in the usual way should be rubbed over with a cut lemon and then rinsed in cold water. This makes them beautifully white.

To clean a copper kettle, wet it with hot water, sprinkle with powdered borax, and rub. Polish with a leather.

The juice of a lemon in a glass of hot water, sipped slowly the first thing every morning, is the safest and best anti-fat medicine.

A teaspoonful of lemon juice in a small cup of black coffee will relieve a bilious headache.

A slight squeeze of lemon juice in a glass of water makes an excellent dentifrice. It removes tartar and sweetens the breath.

After pouring hot water through the bristles, let the brush stand in basin in water and teaspoonful of ammonia for 20 minutes. Rinse and place in sun to dry.

Lemon juice and glycerine mixed in equal quantities will whiten and soften the hands, if rubbed in every night after washing them in warm water.

To remove the dust from rubber plants and palms, and to give a gloss to the leaves, wipe each leaf with a cloth dipped in milk. Pour the remaining milk around the pots of the plant to nourish it.

Rub half a pound of icing sugar through a fine sieve, slightly whip the white of an egg, and add enough of it to the sugar to make a stiff paste; flavor to taste with peppermint essence. Roll out on a pastry board sprinkled with icing sugar to the thickness of about a quarter of an inch; cut out with a plain round cutter the size of a penny.

FOOD WE ALL USED TO HAVE

Remembrance of Childhood Feasts Spoiled Wealthy Man's Expensive and Well-Ordered Dinner.

Zona Gale, writing a story called "The Bridge" in the American magazine, presents a broker named Cassoday dining at his club in New York. While he dines, Cassoday is visited by a mental reincarnation of himself called Littlechild. The story then goes on:

"'What's this?' said Littlechild over the soup. 'Green turtle. But I remember the chicken soup we used to have the day after mother had had boiled chicken dinner and dumplings. What's that? I don't know "sole." The fish we used to have was baked browner outside and whiter inside, with no hot gravy—oh, not like this at all. What's that? Mother wouldn't have done any filet tricks. But I can smell the roast beef when she was thickening the brown gravy just after she took the pan out of the wood stove oven—don't you know how we stopped to sniff with every armful of wood we brought in? Endive? I can't place it—you know we used to run out and pick the lettuce last thing before we sat down at table—we got it from the shady part of the patch toward the well-house. Glace what? Yes, but don't you remember her apple puddings with cinnamon in the sauce? Apples off the seedling that grew by the corn crib——'

"Cassoday pushed back his chair.

"'Wasn't it right, sir?'" asked the waiter anxiously.

"'Devilish right, thanks,'" said Cassoday.

WIRES IN WILDERNESS

Telegraphic Communication to the Yukon Necessary But Expensive

The telegraph is one of the little known and seldom heard of services of the Government, but it has been a vital factor in the building up of the northern portions of British Columbia and the Yukon territory nevertheless. The Government line which keeps Northern British Columbia in touch with the other centres of Canada, covers a territory which the ordinary commercial companies would never dream of operating, not only because the business originating there is so small, but on account of the difficulties of installation and maintenance, during which practically all the elements must be battled with year in and year out. Fire in the summer months, wind in the equinoctial seasons of spring and fall, and snow throughout the long winter.

For the last fiscal year the Ashcroft-Dawson City services contributed a revenue of just $119,066.94. The main line between these two points covers a distance of 2,500 miles and there are over 400 miles of branch line. The service gives employment to about 400 linemen and operators but a larger number could be kept fully occupied if the need for economy did not enter into the question.

The Duc de Montpensier has declined the throne of Albania, evidently preferring to be a live proletarian than a dead king.

In other words the Balkan war indemnity is what Turkey is expected to pay for getting beautifully and completely licked.

The Governments at London and Berlin are saying that there will be no war, but they must be mistaken, for the conflict is now raging fiercely in Ottawa between the old gentlemen of the Senate, representing the Tories, and the Liberals, over the Naval Bill.

Some people are sure to point to the "13" in the number of this year and connect it with the passage of the Navy Bill, but in twelve months from now other people will be pointing to the Navy Bill as a demonstration that the "13" hoodoo is a great fraud.

A hint for Police Magistrate Dumble—A Massachusetts judge sentenced six boys about fifteen years old, convicted of stealing candy from a freight car, to keep a certain city street clean of waste paper. Our city authorities might take a hint from this and utilize in the same way juveniles who come before the Court charged with petty offences.

The proprietor of a local hotel believes he has on his register the longest name ever given at a hotel. The name in question is that of Mrs. Ethe Rumbleburgenhofendorfenstein It is not only the longest, but it is a name that sounds like a tin wash boiler making its escape down a flight of stairs.

A well known Conservative says: "I never go to Kingston without spending a few hours weeping at the tomb of Sir John Macdonald, the father of Confederation." Well, that is not so pathetic a spectacle as that presented a few days ago when a Western member wept bitterly before an old ice house which he mistook for Sir John's tomb.

A BITTER PERSONAL ATTACK

The bitter personal attack made upon Commander Roper by Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux in the House of Commons has provoked a storm of resentment in Ottawa where Commander Roper was deservedly popular and his service appreciated. Mr. Lemieux insinuated that the Commander being anxious to obtain a higher salary, prepared the memorandum which has caused the Opposition so much trouble in the naval debate. The Ottawa Free Press, the local organ of the Opposition, says that it cannot agree with the criticisms that have been passed by some Liberal members upon Commander Roper, who, it goes on to say "is one of those whole-souled hearty British Jack tars to whom any underhand act would be abhorrent." The Free Press adds, quoting the words of Mr. Lemieux, "To declare that Commander Roper "sneaked in" this report, that he had no right to prepare it because it had not been officially asked for, and that there was some connection between the commander's request for an increased salary, and that report is both absurd and unjust."

Bronchitis Cured By Medicated Air

NO DRUGS TO TAKE — YOU SIMPLY BREATHE A HEALING BALSAMIC VAPOR

Every Breath Carries Healing Balsams to the Sick, Sore Places in the Nose and Throat.

Montreal this time gives splendid praise for the modern way of curing colds, catarrh and bronchitis.

Instead of taking sickening drugs into the stomach, or using an old-fashioned spray, the sensible man nowadays breathes the soothing vapors of Catarrhozone and gets well right away. This is exactly what Mr. Joseph Dacouse did, and writing from his office at 57 St. Paul street, he says:—

"I suffered for years with the worst form of chronic bronchial throat and nasal catarrh. I tried all kinds of syrups, ointments, tablets and washes, but they proved ineffective. In fact I could get no relief. I read in the Montreal Witness of Catarrhozone and bought an outfit. In a few hours I got relief. The air passages of my nose were cleared out, and I was able to breathe freely. My throat was strengthened—my voice improved—and no longer gagged and coughed. The effect of Catarrhozone was wonderful. Now I am well—no bronchitis—no throat distress. I urge everyone with a weak throat, with a cough, a cold or a touch of catarrh to use Catarrhozone freely."

Get the Dollar outfit — lasts two months and is guaranteed. Smaller sizes 25c. and 50c. each, all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Company, Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

THE VALUE OF IMMIGRANTS.

The latest Government report puts an estimate of $1,000 on the capital brought by every immigrant from the United States into Canada. The average sized family, as shown in the immigration statistics, numbers five, showing that the average family coming from south of the boundary line brings to Canada approximately five thousand dollars. The total number of immigrants entering Canada from the United States last year was 140,000. Estimating on the basis of $1000 per head, the wealth of Canada was augmented by $140,000,000 by settlers from the south in a single year.

These facts surely give strong justification for the very progressive campaign for immigrants that is being carried through the agencies of the Dominion Government and also through the independent efforts of several large transportation and colonisation companies. The rank and file of immigration from Great Britain and Europe may not bring as much money with it as do our friends from the south but they enter with the same enthusiasm into the new life in a new country and in the end are just as valuable to the dominion at large.

WEDDING FEES ARE GRAFT, SAYS PASTOR

Chicago, May 29.—The Rev. Almer Pennewell, rector of the Euclid Avenue, P. E. Church of Oak Park, announced that he would not accept fees for marriages in the future on the ground that they are a sort of "graft," and should be abolished.

"If the church insists that marriage is a rite that belongs to it," he said, "then the church should at once make marriage free to all.

"The minister who does not need a fee should be ashamed to take it and a church whose minister needs the fee should be ashamed and immediately raise his salary. No minister should be forced to stand at a wedding with his open hand behind him."

Dr. Pennewell also has adopted the program of Dean Sumner and will not marry couples unless they present health certificates.

SET OUT TO PLEASE CRANKS

Clerk Who Gained Good Will of Difficult Customers Deserved Promotion That Followed.

"Anybody can hold the trade of a good-natured customer," said the superintendent of a large mercantile establishment to a new clerk. "It's the man who can please the cranks and chronic kickers whom we want and who will find himself in line for promotion."

The new clerk remembered. He set himself to please difficult customers, the ones who like to complain and will find an opportunity to do so no matter how good the service and merchandise. "I realized," he says, "that their money is just as good as the next man's, though it may be more difficult to get."

It was not long before the obliging clerk had built up a personal trade, so that critical customers would ask for him on entering the shop. They liked to be waited on by one whom they knew desired to please. Often they became much less crotchety.

The superintendent was as good as his word. When the value of the new man's services became apparent, as it inevitably did, the promised promotion was not long delayed.

No One to Take the Bet.

There are lots of things worse than living for a week at the detention home, in the opinion of little Johnnie, a little orphan, who has known about nine years of life in the ways of the city streets. He made that institution his home for about a week at the order of Judge Taylor of juvenile court, pending the finding of a permanent home for him by the board of children's guardians.

During his stay there he gained nine pounds. He was a different boy on the day of his discharge, compared with the hungry, shiftless lad that went in.

"Did you eat lots of bread and molasses at the detention home, Johnnie?" he was asked in juvenile court.

"You bet," he answered, with a merry twinkle in his eye.—Indianapolis News.

MILLIONS OF BOOKS

Dr. Fortescue, Keeper of Them Retiring From British Museum

Dr. G. K. Fortescue, the Keeper of Printed Books at the British museum whose retirement is announced after forty-two years' service, related some of his impressions of nearly half a century's experience in one of the most famous institutions in the world.

"I came here in June, 1870," he said. "It was just four years after the retirement of Sir Antony Panizzi, who was really the founder of the library in the condition in which we have it now. When he entered upon the office of Keeper of Printed Books in 1837, he found about 250,000 books in the library.

"During my time I have seen an increase to the library of 2,000,000 books. When I came it had only one-third the Bibliotheque Nationale of Paris, but now we have between [illegible] and 4,000,000 books, while they have 3,000,000. The Royal library at St. Petersburg has 1,[illegible]; Berlin, 1,[illegible]; Munich, 1,[illegible]; and Vienna, 1,[illegible]. The library of Congress at Washington has 1,700,000. These are the largest libraries in the world, so that although we are the youngest of the great libraries of Europe, we are also the largest."

When the Rev. John McNeil was holding revival services at Cardiff a young man one night, wishing to perplex the preacher, sent up a note to the platform with the request that the following question be publicly answered:

"Dear Mr. McNeil: If you are seeking to enlighten young men kindly tell me who was Cain's wife."

Mr. McNeil read the note, and then, amid breathless silence, said:

"I love young men—inquirers for truth especially—and should like to give this young man a word of advice It is this: Don't lose your soul's salvation looking after other people's wives."

GIFT TO CANADA

Her Royal Highness Presents Portrait of the Duke of Kent

Her Royal Highness the Princess Louise has presented to Canada, through the Governor-General, for the National Gallery a valuable portrait in oil of the Duke of Kent, great-grandfather of his Majesty the King. This painting, executed by Sir William Beechey, will form a very acceptable addition to the National Gallery of Art at the Victorian Museum, where it is on view. The Government, in accepting and acknowledging this gift, conveyed to the donor, the Princess Louise, the thanks of the Canadian people for her generous remembrance.

CHICKENS.

Havana, May 29.—A bill was introduced in the House of Representatives Saturday which, if passed, would abolish cock fighting. The ground is taken in the bill that the sport is cruel and also that it tends to the demoralization of the laboring classes, especially in the rural districts.

A bill also is pending in the House for abolition of the national lottery.

TURF.

Followers of thoroughbred racing will be interested to learn that the first steeplechase over a regulation 2¼-mile course in the United States was run at The Country Club in 1867. There were but two horses in the race and the purse was a substantial one. Zig-Zag ridden by Capt. Elwood and Nannie Craddock ridden by Pipper, a professional, were the competitors. Craddock won the race, and according to the statistics recently found by Alex H. Higginson, the chairman of the board of racing stewards at Clyde Park, the horses were in such splendid condition at the end of the race that they could have gone two miles more over the country. The course in those days was vastly different from the present one. The country today is perhaps a bit more rugged, but the jumps were much more dangerous in '67.

BASEBALL.

Chicago, May 29.—Excessive use of the spitball has affected Ed. Walsh's physical condition, according to a statement made by Dr. Blair, club physician of the White Sox. The saliva used by Walsh for the "spitter," says the physician, has been needed for digestion, and Walsh will not be right for another month.

McGraw, in a review of the big leagues, says "From the flock of clubs in the National league a dark horse has shot out into the lead, and a team which nothing was expected before the race started is making threatening gestures toward the pennant. The Philadelphia spurt, to which scant attention was paid at first, is holding up altogether too well for comfort. The Quakers may repeat the trick the Boston Sox pulled last year when nobody thought that team would win the flag until they had it flying at the masthead.

The Giants play the Philadelphia club at the Polo grounds this week, beginning Thursday. The two teams meet in four games in three days, a double-header being scheduled for Friday, Memorial day. This is our best chance to stop the Quakers now because immediately afterwards they swing out through the West and encounter the weaker part of the league, as it is rated at present. These four games are bound to be pitchers' battles, and a good deal depends upon their outcome. The Philadelphia club has always been a tough one for the Giants to beat, but I believe we will clean up in this series because my team is in better shape right now than it has been so far this season.

To recall a little ancient history, it was the Philadelphia bunch that had apparently thrown the Giants out of the running back in 1911 when they beat my club badly in a disastrous series in the first part of July. Later, the Giants swung through the West on the final trip of the season and won the pennant in a whirlwind or a Garrison finish. It strikes me that the championship will be settled in the final month or six weeks of the race this season as it was back in 1911.

The great danger that is threatening the Giants now is from the lead that the Quakers are opening up on the field. If we can hold them to the margin they have attained now, the team will break before the heart-wrenching task of setting the pace before the end of August.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES

Fad Became Big Industry.

A Missouri woman has made what started out to be a fad into an interesting vocation. She has always had a fondness for beads, and years ago when traveling in Europe began a collection of fancy beads.

Though beautiful beads of rare coloring were to be bought, she wondered at the lack of taste shown in stringing them. She brought beads from Venice, Dresden and Russia and for her own satisfaction experimented in making them into necklaces. She then began to teach women in a small Missouri town to string beads according to her designs and color scheme. She now has over fifty helpers, and her necklaces are in demand. They are not at all expensive, but are decorative.

She goes abroad every year, and one of the pleasures of her travels is hunting about for odd and unusual beads, which she has so far found in nearly every country of the old world. Some of her beads have histories, and many were found in famous little curio shops.

He Didn't Forget.

Attorney Ephraim Lipschutz recently had a client who was to come up for a hearing before Magistrate Gallagher.

"What is your name?" asked Mr. Lipschutz of his client, when the latter came to him with the case.

"James P O'Brede," was the reply.

"What is your middle name?"

"Patrick."

"Well, now, when Magistrate Gallagher asks you your name, say 'James Patrick O'Brede,' and don't forget the Patrick."

"Sure I won't," promised the client.

When O'Brede was arraigned and Magistrate Gallagher asked the first question, "What is your name?" the prisoner said in stentorian tones, "James Patrick O'Brede, and don't forget the Patrick."

He was discharged.—Philadelphia Press.

CLAIMS 116 YEARS

Kingsville Citizen Says he Can go Long Way Back

Henry Washington, a well-known coloured citizen of Kingsville, Ontario, claims to be the oldest man in the whole of Canada. Washington claims to be 116 years old. The oldest residents of Kingsville say they can remember him as far back as 1850 and at that time he was grey haired and bent. The old man was sold into slavery at the age of four in Kentucky and for forty-six years was owned by a southern planter. He escaped to Canada previous to the outbreak of the Civil War.

HAS LOST ALL HIS FINGERS

But That Does Not Bar Him From Being a Homesteader

Because a man loses his fingers through frost bites he is not barred from being a homesteader in Western Canada. An order-in-Council has been passed dispensing with the usual requirements as to residence in the case of Benjamin Alf, a settler in Northern Alberta. Alf, who made entry a year ago, has lost all his fingers.

MISTAKE BY NELLY

Thought She Saw Her Lover Kiss Another Girl and Was Much Peeved.

By AUGUSTUS GOODRICH SHERWIN.

The ice on the river was burnished by the bright sunlight till it shone like a sheet of gold. The air was like new wine. Half a hundred happy persons hovered about, and Nelly Blair was the center of her own little group of select friends.

There was a pout upon her lips and a discontented, almost angry expression in her eyes. She stamped her little foot till the skate blade rang.

"I will never speak to Lisle Jordan again!" she declared. "I have a good mind to send him back the engagement ring."

"Don't be foolish, Nelly," advised her sister. "You are making a great big mountain out of a very small mole hill."

"Big? Little?" gasped Nelly, her eyes full of tears. "I saw him skating away from everybody with one of the new academy girls. His arm was around her, and I am sure I saw him kiss her."

"Did he see you, Nellie?" inquired her sister.

"He acted as if he didn't want to see me," cried the vexed girl. "He was to be here to skate with me two hours ago and—"

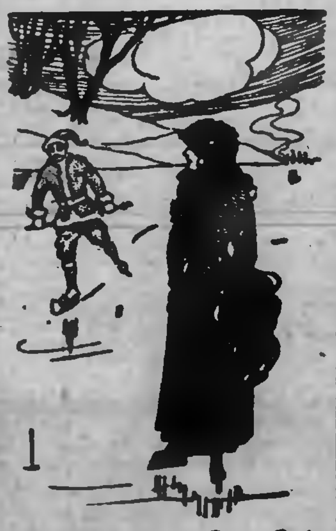
"Why, there he is now, Nelly; there is some mistake. He must have just come from home."

But Nelly was not in hearing now and soon she was out of sight. She had glanced just once at an approaching figure. It was her lover, with his skates over his shoulder.

Nelly was soon far from the general throng. Every moment she felt more abused and perverse. When she came to where the river divided, she took the far western branch.

Here the ice was a clear, brilliant sheet, scarcely marked. Nelly rested for a moment. Then she casually noticed a man coming her way. He wore a very fancy skating costume, and his progress was the rarest poetry of motion.

Nelly drew back timidly. The stranger was a foreigner, with jet black eyes and a waxed moustache. He lightly kissed the tips of his fingers, he smiled and bowed with an excess of courtesy.



His Progress Was the Rarest Poetry of Motion.

"Beautiful, very beautiful," he said, and Nelly was more astounded than ever. He described a wonderful circle on one foot, and then, with a flourish, made a series of quick whirls.

Nelly gasped and flushed at the audacity of the man. Plainly he had written on the ice with wonderful skill a name.

It was: "Nelly."

"How dare you!" flashed forth the little lady, but, with a delighted laugh, the expert skater was off on a long glide, and farther away Nelly saw him once more write that name on the glassy surface of the ice.

"Oh, dear! I am the most friendless and forlorn being in the world!" burst forth Nelly. "Everybody is cruel to me."

The expert skater was manoeuvering between the spot where Nelly was and the junction of the rivers. Nelly was really frightened at the impertinent, airy fellow, as she judged him. She got out of his way by skating on. Finally she espied a cut-off leading to the other river branch. It had steep clay sides, and Nelly started along it.

Crack—swish—crack, crack! Nelly uttered a sharp, sudden cry of dismay. The frail rubber ice was bending under her weight. Then one foot went through it to the ankle. She darted for shore, but though at every step her feet broke through, she gained the bank.

A driftwood log was there, and Nelly sat down on it, breathless and with wet feet. All her sudden temper was subdued. How lonesome it was! How foolish she had been! In regaining the main river she might incur no actual danger, but her feet might sink in deeper.

"There is no Lisle to find me," mourned the dejected maid. "I suppose all men flirt. I wish—I wish I hadn't run away. Oh, dear!" and Nelly burst out crying.

She looked up at the sound of clanging skate blades and crackling ice. Her lover was coming towards her. She could read the anxiety and solicitude in his pale, earnest face. In his experience he evaded breaking through the ice.

"Why, Nelly," he cried, in a glad, relieved tone. "I feared I should not find you. If it were not for a skater I met who had seen you come this way, I might have searched for hours. And in trouble, too, poor little girl!"

"Yes, I am in dreadful trouble," sobbed Nelly. "Was it a man in a fancy costume you met?"

"Yes, a stranger—looked like a foreigner."

"He is a bold, bad man," blazed out Nelly. "He smiled at me, and—and deliberately wrote my name on the ice. I never was so affronted in my life."

Do You Realize What This Means to You, Mr. Business Man?

"He did, eh?" flared up Lisle, in his turn. "Well, we'll see about that. Now, little girl, I'll carry you over the rubber ice here, and we'll just go and bring that impertinent fellow to time."

Nelly nestled in his arms so gladly that she forgot all her pet grievances.

"Now you must skate to keep from freezing, dear," advised the thoughtful lover. "I must get you home just as quickly as possible."

"Oh—I am not the least bit cold, and I don't mind the wet one bit," declared Nelly, with a joyous thrill at being under such lovable protection again.

"Ah, there is that insolent fellow!" exclaimed Lisle, as they came to a bend in the river and the man who had so frightened Nelly was in view. "You wait here while I attend to the gentleman."

"How strong, how brave is Lisle!" enthused Nelly, as she watched her lover approach the object of her complaint. Then, to her astonishment, instead of a stormy collision there was a perfectly friendly meeting. The stranger bowed and showed the most extravagant courtesy. Lisle skated back to Nelly, his face in a broad smile.

"Why," he observed, "there is, of course, only one Nelly in the world to me, but there are two Nellys mixed up in this skating experience."

"What do you mean, Lisle?" asked Nelly bewilderedly.

"That gentleman yonder and his wife are a roller skating team who are here with a vaudeville company. He was simply practicing on ice skates. His wife's name is the same as yours, and he was delighted to find he was able to write it on the ice."

"Oh, dear! what a foolish girl I have been," said Nelly.

"Your sister told me of your mistake about myself," pursued Lisle.

"Mistake?" repeated Nelly.

"Yes, dear. The person you mistook for me was a college friend, Jack Delmar. I loaned him my outfit this morning."

"Oh, Lisle! can you ever forgive me for doubting you?" almost sobbed Nelly. "That Jack Delmar, though, is a bold fellow—I saw him kiss the girl with him."

"Why not? She is one of the company girls, and Jack is engaged subdued, contrite, but immensely happy. Then she glanced up archly, and said:

"And you are a fine fellow, too, Lisle!"

He was not averse to the delicate hint, and their kiss of reconciliation was as well the kiss of peace and perfect understanding.

PASSING OF SUNDAY SUPPER

Chafing Dish Messes Now Seem Largely to Comprise the Sabbath Evening Repast.

Time was when the Sunday night supper was of even more vital importance than the midday dinner, especially in those towns and villages where strict religious principles prohibited cooking on the Sabbath.

It was not considered wrong to mix a pan of biscuits the night before and bake them for supper, so that these hot, puffy features of the meal, with honey or some of mother's quince preserves or canned cherries, were looked forward to with joyous anticipation.

As time passed, the stringent line relaxed as far as cooking for supper was concerned, and, in addition to cold salads, there would always be some hot dish, such as the real old-fashioned hash or scrambled eggs, with creamed potatoes.

City life has changed all this. Even the suburbanite who apes city ways has the mahogany table cleared, the doilies used in place of the regulation dinner cloth, and the chafing dish placed in front of the hostess, the ingredients at hand, and the lamp trimmed and burning. From this she turns out creamed chicken and ham, deviled sardines, mutton ragout and other "messes"—her grandmother would call them, as she waxes reminiscent on the honey and hot biscuits.

THE CHEER-UP CLUB

An Organization to Which Every Person Should Belong

Pleasant sight, pleasant faces and pleasant voices are all part of the cheeriness which induces a healthful attitude physically and mentally. If you are "down in the dumps"; if things have gone wrong; if the sun doesn't slant your way, and if the lane seems as if it could have no turning, the chances are the meals you eat won't digest, the blood won't course swiftly through your veins and health will be at outs with you. Because cheeriness is such an essential it behooves every human being to join the "cheery" club and shed his share of cheeriness around. Looking cheery and being happy is a habit which we can learn if we will. It is often as easy to "look pleasant" while we work and give other people the benefit of the cheery atmosphere, engendered, as it is to look glum. But how many have forgotten their "cheer up" duty to others.

The mental attitude has a direct and amazing effect on the digestion. If the heart is light the food taken into the stomach digests readily and immediately begins its work of nourishing the body. If the heart is heavy ten chances to one the food eaten will not digest properly and the beneficial results of the meal will be minimized.

So it's worth while to the one who practices cheeriness as well as to those who are cheered up by his smile to look pleasant.

Get the habit.

FINDING THE PRODIGAL

Woman Author Engaged in Re-uniting Scattered Families in New World

Are you a "prodigal son?" If so Mrs. Richard Waaler is looking for you. Mrs. Waaler is a well known author and journalist, from Christiania, Norway. She has made it her mission to find prodigal sons all over the world, and get them into touch with the home folks.

Being a mother of twelve children herself, she conceived the idea that there must be many mothers who were mourning for sons who had emigrated and failed to write home. She first went on a lecturing tour through Norway, and explained her mission, getting hundreds of letters and addresses to look up. Then she crossed the Atlantic and at once good results were produced by her work in the United States. Then she crossed into Canada, but finding few Norwegians in the Eastern part of the Dominion, intends to pursue her work in the West. Later she will write a book on her travels.

Titanic's Barber to Sea Again

Unable to resist traveling over the sea, August F. Weikman of Palmyra, N. J., who was the chief barber on the ill-fated Titanic, and who was rescued after being several hours in the water, is unable to content himself ashore. Mr. Weikman said after his experience that he would never go to sea again, but he re-shipped as chief barber on the Lusitania. Weikman says that when on land he is like a fish out of water.

TRAMPING AROUND WORLD

"Flying Dutchman" Had Adventures in Many Lands

Arrested as a spy in two lands, attacked by brigands in another, thrown into icy northern waters from a canoe—these are a few of the adventures of Lieut. Nordwall, the "Flying Dutchman," who spent a few days resting in Montreal preparatory to the next lap of his walk around the world.

He walked forty thousand miles through all the countries of Europe, through the western United States, through Alaska, and across the continent to Montreal. Thence his route lay to Boston and across the Atlantic to his home in Holland.

The big Dutchman's experiences would fill a book. He was set upon by bandits in Spain, and beaten nearly to death, and all his clothing taken from him. He was upset from a canoe in the Yukon river and had to swim to shore for his life, through swift rapids. Then his guide left him and, not knowing the dangers of the river, he ran all the rapids, including the Five Fingers, one of the worst on the Yukon. He was told it was a miracle he got through it.

He was arrested on all sorts of charges from blocking the streets (because of the crowds who followed him) to assaulting street car conductors.

He was arrested in Smyrna, suspected with being a spy. He had been travelling in Dutch costume, wooden shoes, etc., through Europe.

"In England and France," he said, "they had me arrested for obstructing the sidewalk. In Turkey, however, they thought it was a disguise, and arrested me for a spy."

Lieut. Nordwall is about five feet nine inches in height, tanned a rich brown by his five years of life in the open air. He tramped not to win a wager, not to break records, but merely for the education of "walking around the world." He gave lectures to pay his expenses.

SAW WEST DEVELOP

One of First White Women Born in Manitoba Witnessed Stormy Scenes

Mrs. Mary Ann Clelland, who was one of the first white women born in Manitoba and who died at Treherne, Man., at the age of 76, had in common with all the old timers of the West, many varied and stirring experiences during her life time.

She was the daughter of Duncan McRae, the builder of the forts at Upper Fort Garry and Lower Fort Garry for the Hudson's Bay company. Her father also built the old Kildonan Presbyterian church and St. John's cathedral, Winnipeg.

Mrs. Clelland was twice married and was the mother of 14 children, nine of whom are still living. Her first marriage took place in 1842, when she became the wife of Alexander McDonald.

Mrs. Clelland remembered the events of the Metis uprising, known as the first Northwest rebellion. She also witnessed the flood which, caused by the overflowing of the Red river submerged the whole of the territory on which the city of Winnipeg now stands. She sat on the banks of the river and watched houses and barns being carried away by the flood.

When over sixty years of age Mrs. Clelland walked from Selkirk to Winnipeg to the bedside of her son who had met with an accident. The weather was so bad that horses could not make the trip.

NOT TO BE WAITED ON

A Housewife Writes on the Subject of Hired Men

I think that the most of the hired men look to be waited on too much, writes an Ontario housewife. We have two hired men the year round. We have had some good ones, but sorry to say some very, very, oh, very bad ones! And if they were not afraid to turn themselves to help the housewife, I think it would be better for them. I have often laughed to see them go to the water pail for a drink and none in it. They would take the dipper and go to the pump and get their drink and come in with the empty dipper. Now, was it going to hurt them to take the pail and bring it in full? I believe to live and let live, but I do not believe in hiring a man and waiting on him when they are so mean, nor do I not believe in a woman bossing the hired man but I think it is her place, if he does anything wrong in the house to speak to him quietly about it, and he should not think she is trying to boss him because she has spoken to him.—Canadian Farm.

HUSBAND'S RIGHTS

A Man's Liberties Are Sometimes Interrupted by Over Entertainment

One of the most dangerous things about home life just now is the excessive amount of entertaining the average wife does. Of course, entertaining necessitates going, and the popular hostess is also the popular guest. It is a common happening that husband and wife do not have one uninterrupted evening at home for weeks and sometimes even months at a time. Such a state of affairs is bound to bring disaster in time, both to husband and wife, but it particularly cheats the men out of their home rights. Every man who is at the head of a household is entitled to certain privileges, and wives will have to recognise this fact. Every husband ought to stand for this right of a guestless home part of each week, and he should also take a stand against excessive going, whether it involves his presence or not. It is peculiarly exasperating to the average husband to come home tired and discouraged and find guests, or else to find a programme arranged, that makes him hustle into another outfit and go out till 10 or midnight. It is a shade less trying to find the house deserted and to hear his wife's voice over the telephone asking him to call for her later in the evening, or else telling him she will be home later, but the fact remains that he is being cheated out of his rights. A man is entitled to a warm welcome, a hot, substantial meal in his wife's society, and a quiet evening at least three-fourths of his evenings. He doesn't want to take a hand at some game when tired and depressed, and neither does he want to be routed out about 11 to take some woman home whose husband cannot come for her. If the ladies cannot do the greater part of their entertaining and going in the afternoon, then they had better begin on the morning hours, but the husband's right to the evening ought to be recognised more than it is.

But in cheating their husbands the deluded young women are cheating themselves, for one of these days social joys will wane, but the partnership with a good man founded on equality and justice outlives time.

VICTIM OF CLEVER THIEVES

Parisian Jeweler Loses Large Sum Through the Working of a Most Ingenious Scheme.

A remarkable story of international thievery was related in a Paris police court the other day, when a man named Bucking, who had been extradited from London, was placed on trial. Bucking, it appears, began by writing to a famous Paris jeweler under the name of "Mrs. Marchmont," mentioning another wealthy lady customer, and asking for a quantity of expensive jewelry to be sent to London on approval. The request was immediately complied with, and $1,250 worth was chosen and paid for with a check. Three months later "Mrs. Marchmont" ordered $6,000 worth, and also paid by means of a bill on a London bank.

Shortly after there came an order for pearl necklaces to the value of over $25,000 to be sent in order that the customer might choose one of $5,000, and following this the jeweler received another request in the name of an alleged friend of "Mrs. Marchmont" for necklaces, rings, and brilliants, also to the value of over $25,000, all of which were confidingly sent to London. This time, however, no payment followed, and, the jeweler placing the matter in the hands of the police, the pseudo "Mrs Marchmont" was arrested in the person of a German named Bucking.

BUILDING BRANCHES

Canadian Roads Have More Mileage in States Than Latter in Canada

The announcement that Newman Erb, president of the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad is incorporating a new company to build branches to the Canadian border causes a Canadian writer on railroad matters to note that while the United States railways have only 1,486 miles of track in the Dominion, the States have been invaded by Canadian roads to the extent of 7,197 miles divided as follows: Canadian Pacific Railway, 5,291 miles; Grand Trunk System, 1,656 miles; Canadian Northern, 170 miles. The writer goes on to add: "The Grand Trunk had a big fight to obtain admission into New England but its efforts were successful. The main purpose of extending that road into the rich traffic territory of New England is, according to the railway's own contentions, to balance their business between the Eastern and Western States. The Grand Trunk's double track main line lies across Canada like an arm, the elbows at Montreal, the forearm across Ontario, the hand upon five fertile and productive States, with Chicago, the great traffic centre, in its palm. The fingers of this hand are the feeders, which will bring through this gateway the traffic of the west, the northwest and the southwest."

Shock Was Fatal

Mrs. Edward Martin of Verdun, Que., died from shock, caused by the death of her seven-year-old daughter. The child was burned to death by a boy throwing a lighted match on her dress. She ran screaming to her mother, who collapsed from shock and died the next day.

ADDING TO EXHIBIT

Interesting Additions to Specimens at Victoria Museum

Human bones shaped into instruments used by the Indians, most probably before the advent of the white man into North America, is the latest interesting and educating exhibit at the Victoria Museum, Ottawa. Arm bones have been whittled at the wrist end to a point, resembling a large spike nail. What these were made and used for is not known.

Another addition is the erection in a glass case of a pair of fine specimens of Arctic musk oxen, in the lobby. Twenty-five cases of archaeological specimens arrived recently from an old Indian village near Prescott.

Mr. Harlan I. Smith, who has charge of the antiquities department of the museum, states that Canada is rich in these classes of specimens. For instance, he said, from the township of Blandford, near Toronto, in a very short time 75 archaeological sites and five Indian burial places were found.

Bagged a Bull Moose

A remarkable feat was accomplished in the woods some twenty miles north of Quebec by Miss [illegible], daughter of the Lieutenant-Governor of the province. The young lady, only eighteen and just out of the convent, shot and killed a magnificent bull moose while on a hunting trip with a party organized by Mr. [illegible] Langelier, her cousin.

EXPERIENCE WITH Sanol's Remedies

THE SANOL MFG. CO.,
WINNIPEG.
Jan. 22, 1912.

Dear Sirs.—

It is just one year ago that we put in the first stock of SANOL and SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES CURE, and we wish to state that we have been amazed at the remarkable sale of these remedies. We have had many repeat orders in both our stores and have sold retail $1000.00 worth of these remedies. In spite of all these sales we have yet to hear of one dissatisfied customer, while many have come back to tell us of the wonderful cures resulting from the Medicine.

Another striking feature of this business is that so many customers come in stating that SANOL has cured Mr.—— their intimate friend, and they wished to try it for themselves.

Wishing you continued success, we are, Yours truly,

USE OF LEFT HAND

Belief Growing That Man Should be Ambidextrous

Why is it that we neglect to use the left hand so much?

Among English-speaking people 97 out of every 100 are right-handed when they reach reach maturity. Out of every 100 such persons 17 are born right-handed, three are born left-handed and the remaining 80 are born without preference as to either hand. Eighty are influenced to become strongly right-handed during early childhood.

No great asset in the world is so neglected as the average left hand. Formerly all the world was ambidextrous. Primitive man had no preference which hand he used. And in various parts of the world efforts are now being made to revive the use of the left hand.

Japan has for many years been teaching two-handedness to the men of its army and in its Public schools. The German Government is following Japan's example. Sir Robert Baden-Powell, founder of the Boy Scouts, does not consider a man a well-trained soldier unless he can mount equally well on either side of his horse, use the sword, revolver and lance equally well with both hands.

TEST YOUR DIAMONDS

Here Are Several Easy Ways to Find Out if the Gems Are Real

The old way of scratching glass with a diamond to test its genuineness is not at all infallible. Any hard substance will scratch glass—a flint, a piece of hard glass, a bit of carbon—any of these will scratch glass, but only a genuine diamond will cut.

A little drop of water, if it falls on a real diamond facet, will retain a globular form, and may be moved all over the stone, without braking, on the point of a common steel needle. If the stone be glass, or even a good paste imitation, the water will spread all over the surface.

Again, if you get a little borax and mix it into a paste, by placing the diamond in the flame of an alcohol lamp, having first encased it in the borax paste, you may find out if the stone is genuine by dropping it into a basin of cold water when it is hot. If it be glass, you will find it shivered to pieces, if genuine it will be intact.

You can also use the color test. Get a piece of cotton, or other material which is marked with white and red lines or spots. If an imitation stone be passed over the colors they will appear just as they are; but, if a true diamond be used, then you will not be able to discover any great difference between the colors.

And again: Take a piece of paper and make a small round mark in black. Now look at the mark through the stone. If it be genuine, you will see the mark in its proper shape. If it be an imitation then you will have a confused blur all broken and uneven.

Here is the easiest and most simple test: Drop a suspect stone into a glass of clear water. If it be an imitation, its color becomes merged into that of the water—if one can say water has a color—but in the case of a genuine stone it may be seen quite as clearly at the bottom of the glass as if it rested in the hand.

Walnut Creams

Rub half a pound of icing sugar through a sieve, slightly whip the white of an egg, add enough of it with vanilla essence to make a firm paste, knead it smooth, divide into two parts, coloring one pink or, if liked, into three, making the other green, and if preferred, each one may be differently flavored. Form into a thin roll, cut off half inch pieces, roll into little balls, and press firmly between two halves of walnuts. Smooth the edges and, if liked, brush the cream edge with white of egg and roll in colored sugar, desiccated cocoanut, or chopped pistachio nuts.

MY LADY OF DOUBT

CHAPTER XIX—Miss Mortimer appears, explains the mystery and Lawrence is held a prisoner of war, and is again locked in the strong room.

CHAPTER XX — Lawrence escapes through plans arranged by The Lady and sees Grant attack Miss Mortimer.

CHAPTER XXI—Grant is knocked out by Lawrence, who comes to Miss Mortimer's relief, and then makes his escape.

CHAPTER XXII—Captain Grant's base villainy revealed.

CHAPTER XXIII—Lawrence returns to Valley Forge, where he learns more of Grant's perfidy.

CHAPTER XXIV—Washington forces Clinton to battle and Lawrence gets a trace of Eric Mortimer.

CHAPTER XXV—The battle of Monmouth.

CHAPTER XXVI — Gen. Washington again starts Maj. Lawrence on an important mission.

CHAPTER XXVII—Lawrence finds Miss Mortimer in soldier's uniform, acting as a scout under her brother's name. Explanations follow.

CHAPTER XXVIII—Lawrence delivers Washington's dispatches to Gen. Arnold, and is assigned to the special service of capturing Fagin, the cutthroat.

CHAPTER XXIX—Eric Mortimer is found a prisoner of Fagin's, and released by Maj. Lawrence.

CHAPTER XXX—Young Mortimer tells his story, and Lawrence's men surround the Mortimer home to capture Fagin, who has been discovered inside.

"You are to marry this officer here to a young lady."

"What—what young lady?"

"Mortimer's daughter—Claire is the name, isn't it, Grant? Yes, Claire; you know her, I reckon."

I could hear the unfortunate man breathe in the silence, but Fagin's eyes threatened.

"Is—is she here?" he faltered helplessly. "Does she desire the—the ceremony?"

"That doesn't happen to be any of your business," broke in Fagin bluntly. "This is my affair, an' the fewer questions you ask the better. If we want some fun, what the hell have you got to do with it, you snivelling spoilsport! I haven't asked either of them about it. I just decided it was time they got married. Stand up, man, and let go that door," he drew a derringer from his belt and flung it onto the table. "There's my authority—that, an' fifty hell-hounds outside wondering why I don't loot the house, an' be done. Do you want to be turned over to them? If you don't then speak up. Will you tie them, or not?"

Jenks' eyes wandered toward Jones, who stared blankly back at him, yellow fangs showing beneath his beard.

"Why—of course—yes," he faltered weakly. "I—suppose I must."

"Don't seem much chance to get out, does there, parson? Well, I reckon it won't hurt your conscience particularly. Bill! Where's Bill?"

"You sent him to guard the front door," explained Jones.

"That's right, I did. You'll do just as well. Go up stairs, an' bring the girl down. She's with the old man, an' Culberson is guarding the door. Better not say what she's wanted for. Just tell her Captain Grant wishes to speak to her a moment."

Jones straightened up, and pushed past the preacher, the stairs creaking under his weight as he went up over my head. Grant arose, and stood looking out the window into the glow of the sunshine, and Jenks dropped into the nearest chair, still staring across the table at Fagin. For the first time I seemed to entirely grasp the situation. I got to my feet, yet dare not move so much as a step, for Fagin was facing the hallway. It apparently would be better to wait until after the girl came down stairs, until those in the house were all together, before we struck. I wanted to know what she would say, how she would act, when she understood what was with outward respect, but no longer. You threatened me with a forced marriage once before, and failed. Now you endeavor to succeed with the help of this outlaw. But you never shall! No, do not speak! do not hold out your hands to me! You are not a prisoner. These men are here at your instigation; you are concerned in their infamy. I would rather die than have you touch me!"

She turned her back upon him, her face white, her eyes blazing, but Fagin stood between her and the entrance, grinning savagely.

"Let me pass, sir; this is my father's house."

"Not while I am here, Mistress," he snarled, without moving. "The old man isn't ridin' after me with a squadron of cavalry today. This happens to be my turn to give orders, and yer to obey! Do yer hear—yer'll obey. Those were n't pretty words yer spoke to Grant, but they don't hurt me none. You damned little spitfire, I'd marry yer myself if I could, just to break yer spirit. As it is, I'll show yer who's master for once. So it's the spy yer want, is it?"

She stared at him without a word, a depth of hatred but no fear in her level eyes.

"Lost yer tongue, have yer? Well, we'll find it for yer fast enough. What's the fellow's name?"

"To whom do you refer?" she asked, her passage blocked.

"The Continental who's put Grant out of the running?"

"I presume you mean Major Lawrence, although no one has authority to couple my name with his."

"Oh, indeed! I'll show yer authority in plenty, Mistress. Come, now, I'm done discussing this matter. As long as yer father isn't able ter attend ter this affair I am agoin' ter act in his place. We'll have a loyalist marriage, by God! an' have it now. Come, move, you coyote—Jones, bustle him along. Now, Captain, there's a good place ter stand, in between those windows. Mistress Claire—"

I was all ready, pistol in hand, burning with a determination to shoot Fagin down, yet her voice halted him.

"Wait!" she cried, standing erect and scornful. "I will not consent to this. I am going to leave this room."

"Oh, I reckon not," and he leered into her eyes. "Don't rouse me, or yer'll find out I'm a wolf ter bite. Yer get back there beside Grant, or I'll make yer."

"You will? You dare not!"

"Don't I, Mistress?" he cried savagely, "I'll show yer."

He reached forth one great hand, the fingers gripping her sleeve, but she wrenched away, the cloth tearing as she sprang back.

"Fagin, I know you, but I'm not afraid of you. I know you for a cruel, cold-blooded murderer, an outrager of women, a thief, and an outlaw. No, you cannot stop me now. You are a low-down cowardly cur, making war on women and children, sneaking around in the paths of armies, plundering and looting the helpless. I despise you and every man associated with you. Neither you, nor all your company, can make me marry Captain Grant. I will die first. No, don't move, and don't think you are dealing with a frightened girl. I am desperate enough, but I can act—"

"Hell! Jones, take that hell-cat by the arms!"

"Jones will do nothing of the kind—and you—stand back, Fagin; don't dare to lay a hand on me again!"

Her face was white, her lips set, her eyes blazing, but Fagin, assured of her helplessness, laughed, and stepped forward. From what hidden concealment it came I know not, but there was the flash of a polished barrel, a sharp report, the whirl of smoke, and the brute went backward over a chair, crashing to the floor, with hands flung high over his head. I was aware of the swift rush of a body past me, of steps going up the stairs, and then, with a yell, my men poured out from the library into the hall.

A Sharp Report, a Whirl of Smoke and the Brute Went Backward Over a Chair, Crashing to the Floor.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

The Fight in the Hall.

Scarcely comprehending that Claire had escaped from the room, I was swept forward by the onrush of bodies. The preacher was knocked headlong beneath the table, but Fagin lay motionless underfoot. Jones and Grant turned to a door at the right, and I leaped after them. One of the two fired, and the ball struck my shoulder, the impact throwing me back against one of my men. An instant I felt sick and dizzy, yet realized I was not seriously hurt, and managed to stagger to my feet. The door was closed and locked, and, although my head reeled, I began to think clearly.

"The other way, lads!" I cried. "Quick, into the hall!"

We tumbled out through the narrow entrance, and I found myself next to Eric. But we were too late to head off the fugitives, or prevent their achieving their purpose. In through the rear door, confused as to what had occurred, yet shouting fiercely, poured Fagin's wolves, seeking trouble. They were a wild, rough-looking lot, ill-dressed, and dirty even in that dim light. For an instant, congested within the limits of the hallway, both sides paused, staring at each other in mutual surprise and hesitation. Then I heard Jones' bellow of command, and Grant's nasal voice profanely ordering them to come on. With us there remained no choice; we must fight it out where we were, regardless of numbers.

"First you damned fools—fire!" roared Jones, and there was a crashing of guns, the dense smoke swirling between us. A Dragoon at my right went sprawling; another behind gave vent to a yell as he plunged head first down the basement stairs. There was the sound of splintering wood, of breaking glass. I felt the blood in my veins leap to the fever of it.

We were upon the fellows with a rush, firing in their very faces, and leaping madly at them. There was little room between the walls, barely space for a half-dozen to fight in, shoulder to shoulder, but those behind, eager to strike also, pressed up so recklessly that we hurled them back. To me it was all confusion, uproar, deadly fighting. I could think of nothing to right or left, only of the struggling devils in my front. Faces, forms, came and vanished in the swirl of smoke, brown gun-barrels whirled before me, flashes of fire burned my eyes, strange features, bearded, malignant, glared at me. I leaped straight at them, striking fiercely. Once I saw Grant, and aimed a blow at him. Then he was gone, swallowed in the ruck. One mad onrush swept them back, helpless, demoralized. I stumbled over bodies, slipped in pools of blood, yet kept my feet. Every muscle ached; I was cut and pounded, yet drove into the mass, shouting to those behind:

"Come on, lads! Come on! We're driving them!"

A yard, two yards, three—beyond the door where the men had escaped we won our way. Then they could go no further. Blocked, unable to retreat, wedged helplessly against the far end of the hall they turned like cornered rats. I could see nothing of Jones, but I heard him, raging like a fiend.

"Now, you curs, now!" he stormed. "You cowardly scum—perhaps you'll fight when you can't run! What are you afraid of? There's only a handful, you can chew 'em up, if you will! Push 'em back, there! Push 'em back!"

With a yell of rage, those crushed against the wall hurtled forward, driving the others; men were lifted and hurled at us; others gripped at our feet; by sheer force of numbers they swept us backward. It was hand to hand, neither side having time to reload their weapons. The smoke rose, permitting a view of the shambles. There was a tangle of arms, a jumble of faces. They were maddened beasts, desperate, revengeful. Hands clutched at us, gun butts were thrust into our faces, the crush too dense to permit of their being swung overhead. My Dragoons had their sabres out, and stood to it like men, the steel blades dripping as they tasted blood. But killing one only brought a new man to the front. One does not see so much as feel in such a jumble. Yet I knew we were worsted, outnumbered. They came at us like a battering ram. I saw the sergeant shot through the forehead; I saw Eric go down beneath a crushing stroke, and roll under my feet. I stepped on bodies, fighting for my own life as I never fought before. Somewhere I had gripped a gun out of dead fingers and swung it savagely, smashing the stock at the first blow, but retaining the twisted iron. The intensity of excitement seemed to clear my brain. I began to distinguish voices, to notice faces. I heard Grant yell safely in the rear; I heard Jones' roar, "To hell with 'em! To hell with 'em!" Out of the murk of struggling figures I made out his black beard, the gleam of yellow fangs, and leaped toward him, striking men down until I was able to swing at his head. He went over like a stricken ox under a butcher's ax, knocking aside two men as he fell. It gave me chance to spring out of the melee.

"To the stairs, men! The stairs!" I cried. "We can hold them there!"

I cannot describe now how we made it, but we did. I only know Tom and I held the rear, sweeping circles of death with our whirling gun-barrels, falling back step by step as we fought. At last I felt the bottom stairs with my foot, and heard a voice shout:

"Come up, sir! We'll hold 'em now!"

Then I was above the heads of the mob, gripping the rail, and sobbing for breath. There followed a moment's wait, an instant of hesitancy. I began to see and feel once more. Below us the hall was jammed with men, so closely pressed together as to be almost helpless. Blood streamed from a cut in my forehead, nearly blinding me, but I wiped it away, and took one glance at their angry upturned faces, and gained a glimpse of my own men. There were but six of us, and one of them lay helpless propped against the wall. Tom and I stood alone, his face blackened by powder, his shirt ripped into rags; the other three were above, pistols in hand.

"Are they loaded?" I gasped.

"Yes, sir."

"Stand ready then, but look out for above; there was a guard up there—Tom."

He turned his face slightly.

"Move back a step or two more; we've got to hold them."

"All right, sir."

I felt weak from loss of blood, my head reeling, and had to hold to the rail. Below us, growling like wild beasts, but seemingly leaderless, the mob crushed forward to the foot of the stairs. Suddenly I saw Grant, and the sight of him gave me new life.

"You black-faced hound," I called down angrily. "You've kept yourself safe so far. Now come on."

He snarled some answer, what, I know not. There was an empty pistol in my belt, and I flung it at him with all the force of my arm. He dodged, the weapon striking the man behind. With a howl of rage the fellows leaped toward us, bearing Grant on the crest of the wave. The pistols of the Dragoons cracked; three fell, blocking the stairs with their bodies. We had room now in which to swing our iron bars, and we battered them like demons. I lost sight of Grant, the red drip of blood over my eyes making all before me a mist. I only knew enough to strike. Yet fight as we would there was no holding them. We were forced to give way. Guns began to spit fire. I saw the wounded Dragoon dragged down under the feet of the mob; hands gripped my legs, and I kicked at the faces in my effort to tear loose. Tom reeled against the wall, his arm shattered by a blow, and one of the men above came tumbling over the rail dead. The fall of his body cleared the stairs an instant; then the ranks broke, and several toppled over with it. I stumbled back almost to the top, sweeping the hair and blood out of my eyes. What—what was the matter? They were running, those fellows down there—screaming, fighting among [illegible] yells, cries of [illegible] foot babel. I could [illegible] could not grasp the [illegible] sudden panic. Who were they [illegible] surging in through the front door, pouring out through the library? Then a voice roared out:

Colonel Mortimer Was Propped Up on His Pillow, One Hand Grasping a Pistol.

"Bedad, they're Fagin's hell-hounds, boys—to hell wid 'em!"

INDIAN TRIBES BEING STUDIED

Anthropologists Collecting Valuable Data on the Aborigines of Canada

Much interesting information and many valuable specimens and songs illustrating different phases in the life of the North American Indians has been obtained through field work carried on under the direction of the ethnological branch of the Canadian Geological Survey.

Mr. C. M. Barbeau, permanent assistant in anthropology, is continuing his work among the Wyandotte Indians in Oklahoma, which he started more than a year ago. These Indians are of Canadian origin. Among other things he has obtained several hundred Wyandotte songs by means of gramophone records, facts regarding religion and mythology, information about language and records of old Indian traditions.

Dr. P. Radin of Columbia university, an auxiliary member of the field staff, has carried on research work among the Ojibway or Chippewa Indians, visiting Sarnia, Orillia, North Bay, Sault Ste. Marie and Manitoulin Island. He has amassed a large stock of manuscript information on Ojibway mythology and customs and Indian texts.

At the Six Nations' reserve on the Grand River, near Brantford, Dr. A. A. Goldenweiser, collected considerable valuable material concerning the Iroquois, while Mr. F. W. Waugh, of Toronto has been engaged in research into the industries and material life generally of the same tribe. His work was principally in connection with the foods, medicines, diets, and industries of the race. From one man he has secured no fewer than 70 different medicines in use among the Indians.

There is now at the Victoria Memorail Museum, at Ottawa, a very full and representative collection of Iroquois specimens. When the branch was started in 1910 there was only one, while there are now about 700. Particular attention has been paid to the eastern tribes, which had been neglected. Dr. F. G. Speck, visited the Montagnais, on Lake St. John and the Lower St. Lawrence, and secured a large collection, including three birch bark canoes. All the specimens have been carefully labelled and catalogued. Mr. F. H. S. Knowles, of Oxford university, Eng., specialist in physical anthropology, has been engaged studying the physical anthropology of the Iroquois, measuring the men, women and children, and securing specimens of hair, etc.

HIS FIRST USE FOR WEALTH

For a Millionaire, Mose's Aspirations Would Seem to the Ordinary Man Singularly Modest.

E. F. Swinney, president of the First National bank of Kansas City, was born in the south, says the Saturday Evening Post. He goes back home once or twice a year and it is part of the homecoming program to have Old Mose polish his shoes. Old Mose prides himself on the fact that he has known "Mistah Eddie" since he was born—and "his daddy befo' him."

When Mr. Swinney was there recently Mose was polishing his shoes. He stopped and asked:

"Mistah Eddie, how much is a million dollahs?"

"Well, Mose," Mr. Swinney replied, "you have seen ten silver dollars, haven't you? Now, imagine ten of those stacks and you have a hundred dollars. Then ten times that and you have $1,000. Then ten times that and you have $10,000—and 100 times that and you have a million."

"Mistah Eddie," continued Mose, exceedingly troubled, "would all them silver dollahs go on that table yondah?"

"No, Mose—not if they were piled to the ceiling. What would you do if you had a million silver dollars, Mose?"

Mose stopped shining. He pondered for a minute. Then he said:

"Well, Mistah Eddie, I reckon I'd have mah cistehn cleaned out."

SUFFRAGISTS DARN SOCKS

Show They Are Good Housewives as Well as Politicians

Minnesota suffragists decided upon a measure whereby they hoped to counteract the impression that women who long for the ballot are not good housewives.

At the State Fair they maintained a booth where men, single or married, might have their socks darned. Having chosen the darning needle as their emblem, the following war cry was adopted:—

Darn the Government, darn the socks,
That's the way to the ballot box.
Patch the holes in hubby's hose,
March to the polls and voice our woes.

Long Engagements

Young ladies in Russia are not at all averse to long engagements, and use all sorts of artifices to stave off the wedding day as long as possible; but in no country in the world are courtships so abnormally long as in Bohemia, where engagements commonly last from fifteen to twenty years. In fact, there recently died there, at the age of ninety-nine an old man who had been courting for seventy-five years, and who was married on his death-bed.

To Remove Mildew

To take out mildew, moisten the mildewed spot with clear water, then spread over it a thick coating of castile or other good white soap and powdered chalk. Let stand an hour, then wash off. Sometimes one application suffices; but if not, repeat once or twice.

Electric Sewing Machine

A new electric motor for a sewing machine utilizes a machine's treadle to stop, start and regulate its speed.

Former Local People Heard From.

Judge Edmison yesterday received a letter written by his son-in-law, Mr. A. W. Brodie, a former local citizen, written aboard the White Star Liner Megantic, at Quebec. Mr. and Mrs. Brodie sailed yesterday for Europe. He also heard from his son Herbert, of Winnipeg, who, with Mrs. Edmison, is having a most enjoyable time in London, England.

A Prophecy That Failed.

Yesterday a Times scribe entering Riverside Park, asked the ticket taker, a Hamilton man, through infended ignorance, "Is Hamilton or St. Thomas at the top of the heap now?" This ambitious ball enthusiast, from the Ambitious City, replied "Wait till we get through with this game and you will see Hamilton on top." Signs, omens and predictions are sometimes purely fictions.

Stomach Always Baulked Had Constant Indigestion

Smell of Cooking Made Him Sick—Bilious Two Days a Week.

Cured by Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Mr. Clemmons' experience is not unusual. Nowadays poor stomachs are more the rule than the exception. But the proper treatment is sure to make a quick cure. You can always depend on Dr. Hamilton's Pills, they reach the trouble at once, go right to business, work while you sleep and have you feeling better if not cured next morning.

"My food seemed to decompose in my stomach," writes Mr. Ralph Clemmons, of Newbridge, P.Q. "I had a stomach that failed in some way to perform its work. Digestion seemed more or less arrested and I grew thin, yellow, nervous. The stomach became distended and impeded apparently the action of the heart, for often at night it would do great stunts. At times I would vomit a mucous mass, and at these times my head ached most terribly. A friend who had been cured of a similar condition, advised me to take Dr. Hamilton's Pills regularly, which I did. The result in my case was simply marvelous. Dr. Hamilton's Pills removed the cause, strengthened the stomach, excited the liver to normal action, the kidneys were relieved of excessive work. Health soon grew within me. I can now eat, sleep and live like a live man."

Be advised—use Dr. Hamilton's pills—they are sure to do you good. 25c per box, five for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers or by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

A Heavy Penalty.

Sheldon, who has been the house some weeks ago. The charge was laid under the Neglected Children's Act. Sheldon, who had been living with the 14-year-old girl in a tent, was sentenced to one year in Central Prison, in addition to a fine of $100, and a default of payment a year's imprisonment, the sentences to run concurrently.

May's School House Enlarged.

May's School House at Browntown, which through rapidly increased attendance has become altogether inadequate to accommodate its present population, is to be remodelled and enlarged. The senior room will be removed and another storey added, thus making a four room building. The basement will be construc-school, having two play rooms, one for boys and one for girls, also the building will be heated by a furnace. The work will be started as soon as the present term is over and will be completed by the first of September.

Cadets Were Inspected.

The annual inspection of the P.C.I. Cadets was held yesterday afternoon at Central Park, Major Gillespie of the R.H.A., Kingston, was the inspecting officer, assisted by Col. Clegg, Major Medd and Major Young. Major Gillespie complimented the boys on their drilling and appearance, it being the first time the boys were in uniform. Capt. Cluxton presented No. 2 company with a silver cup, while Mrs. Dennistoun gave silver medals. They turned out about 130 strong, and was in charge of Cadet Major H. Hill and Instructor Jamieson. The boys looked and acted smartly as trained soldiers in their new uniforms of khaki and sombreros.

Yesterday's Police Court

At yesterday's police court, John Middleton was charged with being drunk. "I guess that's all right, I was full, replied John; $2. William Kelly, who had a fine paid recently by Mr. Fred Cavanagh to send him back to the woods, did not go and got drunk again. $2, to be paid forthwith. A young man was fined $3 for driving an auto on the wrong side of the street. The projetariat was then sent away as a Juvenile Court was held. Five small boys were charged with having been disorderly on McDonnel street, last Sunday; they all pleaded guilty. Mr. D. Sullivan said the boys threw stones at his auto, as he was driving slowly and broke the glass screen. He was driving through Jackson Park. The boys threw stones from the bushes. He caught one boy and brought him to the police station, where the boy told the names of his pals. The glass cost $7.50. The father of the boy who broke the glass was ordered to replace it. The boys were discharged with a warning.

CITY IN PARAGRAPH

The Hamilton Baseball Club registered at the White House.

The 57th Regiment Band held a good practice last night.

Well, the Petes demonstrated yesterday that they are not yet back numbers.

Weynura, a free lance pitcher has joined the Petes, at his own expense.

The Church Women's Association of St. John's will hold their usual monthly meeting this afternoon at 3.30 in the Guild room.

The Peterborough Gun Club was in Campbellford yesterday for a match with the Campbellford Gun Club.

Some crank who seems to own a diamond ring has been scratching and disfiguring plate glass windows on Kent Street, Lindsay.

Yesterday a practical joker, who knows baseball, as she should be played, covered the word "bases" in baseball today with a card marked "Foot."

Mr. J. J. Lundy is an ardent admirer of the skill of Mrs. Emma Stevenson, who was recently fined here and at Millbrook for practising medicine.

The Peterborough Club yesterday bought a dozen "steins" at a local store. These "steins" have not covers to prevent flies getting into the nectar.

The storehouse near the G.T.R. and C.P.R. intersection, which collapsed a few weeks ago, is being removed. The machinery in the building is not damaged.

FIANCE AN "ANTI," NO WEDDING BELLS

New York, May 28.—"Being a suffragette has probably cost me a husband," said Mabel Carew, of 400 West Fifty-seventh street. She is the young actress who, a few days ago, went to the West One Hundred and Fifty-second police station and asked protection from the man to whom she was engaged and with whom she had quarrelled because she had been unable to bring him about to her ways of thinking. Now he is following her about and she wants it stopped.

Miss Carew is an ardent suffragette. Several years ago she was on the vaudeville circuit when she met a young man in Chicago. He is the son of a wealthy real estate man and the two fell in love. He followed her on the circuit east and they made up their minds to marry. However, the suffragette question came up and he said he was bitterly opposed to it. Then came a breach which was widened when Miss Carew appeared in the parade here two weeks ago. He upbraided her and she replied that she didn't want to see him again.

Last week Miss Carew was at a Broadway theatre. The young man appeared at every performance and sat down in the first row and did his best to attract her attention. Then he waited at the stage door and Miss Carew almost became a nervous wreck. Then she appealed to the police and asked that her former fiance be arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct.

"I really love him," said Miss Carew, "but I won't marry him or have anything to do with him because he is opposed to woman voting. I have already started a movement for woman suffrage among the actresses and I know that I will succeed in getting many to join the ranks. If he comes around, why I'm going to have him arrested, that's all there is to it."

SENATORS ACT ON MASTERS VOICE AND KILL THE BILL

Ross Amendment Carried by Large Vote Early in Morning --Debts Paid for Old Age Pensions

Ottawa, May 30.—The Opposition in the Senate cast principle to the winds at one o'clock this morning, and disemboweled the Navy Bill by a vote of 51 to 27. During the closing hours of the debate some of the speeches on both sides were eloquent and thoughtful. But actions speak louder than words and the Senate must be prepared to be judged by the result of its vote and not by its empty protestations of loyalty.

Senator Smith delivered as his maiden speech a short but earnest appeal to patriotism. The Navy Bill did not propose to make a contribution to England, but to the Empire. If there was Christianity, if they were but to protect the Empire that the ships would be built. They would also by so doing protect the shores of Canada and the commerce of Canada.

A Rambling Effort.

Senator Domville was no sooner delivered of a spasm of patriotic fervor than he conceived again in a spirit of caution. Loyalty was all right, but there was common sense in all things. If there was Christianity, if they were to have a future existence, were they not doing a greater work by building up a great nation of free people. They were all united to stand by Britain. They should take a statesmanship view of the whole thing. Then followed a dissertation on Home Rule for Ireland and a final oracular declaration that his vote would not be of partisan character.

The Chief Conspirator.

It is said that Senator Dandurand is the chief conspirator against the Navy Bill. Certainly he made a lengthy, impassioned plea for destroying it by the amendment. He quoted Mr. W. Churchill as having said that it would be ridiculous to pretend that one or two ships would make a serious difference to this fleet. Scoffing at the emergency, he declared that this must exist in future as it would take three years to build these vessels. Again British authorities were quoted to demonstrate the foolishness of building in advance of requirements, as ships bu... ahead of the time necessarily became obsolete when they were really needed. The fact that the British Exchequer has a surplus of over $32,000,000 not being devoted to additional construction showed that England did not require help from Canada.

HON. SAM HUGHES

Residents of Victoria and adjoining Counties feel a personal pride in Hon. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia and Defence. His administration of this important Department has been characterised by keen intelligence, based on practical knowledge, and by a progressive, though economic dispensing of the sums allotted him. Col. Hughes has fully justified our prophecy that he would make an exceedingly capable and efficient Minister. He has shown that he possesses administrative ability of rare merit and comprehensive grasp.

EUROPEAN PEACE SIGNED AS ALLIES FIRE AGAIN

Turkey Out of Game in Consequence of Ceremony Today in London--Bulgarians Open Attack On Greeks

London, May 30.—The preliminary treaty of Peace was signed to-day by the delegates in London of all the Balkan Allies and of Turkey at St. James' Palace. Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Secretary, presided at the meeting.

Dr. S. Daneff, the Bulgarian peace delegate, in the course of an interview after the signature of the preliminary treaty of peace, said:

"I am rejoiced. It means not only Balkan peace but general peace, for Europe is saved from one of the most thorny problems of the Near East.

Praise Grey, as Diplomat.

"We owe a great deal of gratitude to Sir Edward Grey, whose enduring and untiring mastery in treating diplomatic problems has brought about peace much sooner than some of us had expected."

The first meeting of the Peace Conference has been fixed for Monday, June 2.

Greece Wants What She Wants.

London, May 30.—Greece, it is learned, will persist in her demand for the cession to her of such Macedonian territories, even if occupied by Bulgarians, as are Greek by nationality and tradition.

Greece is prepared to yield on minor points to Bulgaria, but the unalterable basis of her policy will be a demand for all territories, the population of which is actually Hellenic.

IMPORTANT CONSOLIDATION INDUSTRIAL COMPANIES

Richardson & Co. Acquire Control of Three Large Ontario Manufacturing Concerns. Details of Re-organization

One of the most important amalgamations to have taken place in Ontario in recent years became known today when it was announced that the firm of Richardson & Co., stockbrokers of Montreal, had acquired the Gananoque Spring & Axle Co., Ltd., the D. F. Jones Manufacturing Co., Ltd., of Gananoque, and the Dowsley Spring & Axle Co., of Chatham.

This latest of steel mergers will be known henceforth under the name of The Canada Steel Products Company, Limited, and will continue the various lines of business of the older companies along similar lines as formerly except that activities in all departments will be considerably augmented and increased.

The capitalization of the new organization is placed at $2,100,000, divided as follows: 6 p.c. bonds, $600,000, 7 p.c. preferred stock, [illegible], and common stock, $750,000.

Over 75 p.c. of the securities in the new company have been taken in place of cash by the holders of stock in the amalgamated companies, and it is understood that Richardson & Co. have made arrangements to have the balance here and in the old country.

The three companies now become one have a history dating back for more than fifty years. Under private ownership they enjoyed a healthful and prosperous growth. In 1876 the Gananoque Spring Mfg. Co. Ltd. was incorporated, to be a few years later amalgamated with Byers Bros. & Co., manufacturers of axles. This firm then became known as The Gananoque Spring & Axle Co., Ltd. In the same year D. F. Jones & Co. also changed from private ownership, the D. F. Jones Mfg. Co., Ltd., being incorporated to take over the shovel business. In 1909, realizing the development likely to occur in the automobile spring business and desiring a factory in close touch with the Western Ontario trade, the Gananoque Spring & Axle Co. purchased the Dowsley Spring & Axle Co., Ltd., of Chatham. Since that time three large extensions to the factories have been made and the business at the present day finds the greatest difficulty in keeping pace with the numbers of orders received. culty in keeping pace with the number of orders received.

The prospects for the future are exceptionally bright. Large extensions in both the shovel works and the spring works at Gananoque have just been completed and another large extension to the auto spring factory at Chatham will soon be in operation. These extensions, if only partially operated, will increase the output of all plants by over 30 p.c., and this, too, with a very small proportional increase in fixed charges. From this it may be seen that the net profits from sales should increase correspondingly. Sales for the ten months ending on the last day of April of this year show an increase of over [illegible], as against the corresponding period of last year, and although there are still two months to be accounted for on current contracts, the spring and axle company alone have already closed contracts for the year ending 30th of June, 1914, amounting to over $400,000 in value.

THE WEATHER.

To-day—Moderate variable winds; mostly fair and moderately warm, but showers in some localities.

NEW PICTURE SHOW REGULATIONS OUT

Toronto, May 30.—The new moving picture theatre regulations were announced this morning by the Department of the Provincial Treasurer and go into effect on June 1st. The most important changes are the licensing of the cabinets, instead of the machines and the grading of the licenses according to the population of the town.

The fee for film exchanges remains unchanged at $150, with 50 cents for each reel of film. The fee of the operator is $5 upon examination on June 1st, with an annual fee thereafter of $3. In cities of over 15,000 the license on booths is $150, for those over 3000 and under 15,000 it is $100, and for those under 3,000, it is $75. Travelling licenses are fixed at $150 and special license fees are to be determined by the Provincial Treasurer.

FIRE, WATER & LIGHT COM. IN SESSION LAST NIGHT

Order for 800 Feet of Fire Hose at $1.10 ft. Placed With the Gutta Percha and Rubber Mfg. Co., of Toronto.

The City's Fire, Water and Light Committee met in business session last night, Chairman Ald. Gillespie presiding. There were also present, Mayor Bradburn, Ald. Buller, Langford, Green and Duncan.

On motion of Ald. Green, seconded by Ald. Anderson, an order was placed with the Gutta Percha Rubber Mfg. Co. of Toronto, for 800 feet of their three-ply "Paragon" fire hose at $1.10 per foot.

The committee will board Ald Green's auto car on Monday afternoon at two o'clock and tour the city with a view to reaching a decision as to the best localities at which to install several new hydrants this year.

THEY ARE VERY TIRED OF GEORGE'S INSURANCE ACT

Anti-landlord, Anti-middleclass Attitude Losing Asquith Votes

London, May 30.—The overwhelming Unionist majority at Altrincham following so closely the Ministerial defeat at Newmarket faces the Ministry with the urgent problem of how to regain the favor of the electorate.

Since the general election in December, 1910, the coalition majority in the Commons has decreased by 20, the Unionists only losing one seat, namely Londonderry.

The Altrincham result especially is interesting because the constituency is a mixture of agricultural and industrial workers, clerks, tradesmen, employers, the blend of Manchester and rural England.

The Times says what is happening throughout the country is that the silent voter who turns the elections is out of humor with Lloyd George and his works, tired of his anti-landlord and anti-middle class attitude, as expressed in the minimum rural wage proposal and the Insurance Act. It is significant also that the result was received with loud cries of "Marconi."

The successful Unionist is a whole-hogging tariff reformer, but laid especial emphasis on his approval of Ulster's armed resistance to Home Rule and condemnation of exactions of the Insurance Act, but this involves the much hated autumn session, or an entire revision of the timetable, upon which the Home Rule and Welsh Disestablishment depend.

A LOCAL SOLDIER IS TO COMMIT MATRIMONY

Mr. W. H. Cluxton, of the 57th Regiment, who has been connected with the porcelain department of the C.G.E. was yesterday presented with a gold-plated safety razor outfit, and the following address:

Peterborough, May 30, 1913.

To Mr. H. Cluxton,—

We, the employes of the Porcelain Department, wish you every happiness in your new life, with health, wealth and prosperity. We are sorry you are leaving us, but we feel you are going amongst more congenial surroundings. As a token of respect we wish you to accept this small gift, and hope you may live to use it for many years to come.

Signed on behalf of the Porcelain employes.

J. RICHARDS.
F. O'KEEFE.

Mr. Cluxton leaves Peterborough this afternoon, and will be married at St. Paul's-on-the-Lake, Chicago, June 26, after which he and his bride will cross the Atlantic and tour the continent for one year.

THE GRAND HOTEL HAS CHANGED HANDS

Yesterday a deal was consumated whereby the Grand Hotel, operated for some years by Mr. Charles Nixon, passes under control of Mr. W. B. Woodruff.

Mr. Woodruff comes from Oshawa. He formerly conducted the Commercial House successfully in that progressive little town and also a hotel of the same name in Whitby. Mr. Woodruff comes here highly recommended as a man who understands the right and legal way of running a hotel from "A" to "algebra." Over 20 years ago Mr. Fred Walker, of the E. F. Mason grocery boarded with Mr. Woodruff and speaks in highest terms of the latter's ability in his business. The license will be transferred to-night

COBOURG IS AFTER A LOCAL MAN

It is well known that Mr. W. Rudkins, of this city, Industrial Commissioner for Lindsay, has, a little more than made good. The town of Cobourg, that has done the Rip Vanwinkle act for many years, has at last awakened. The Board of Trade of Cobourg are now making tentative offers to Mr. Rudkins to secure his services.

HOW SEPARATE SCHOOLS WORK

The Ottawa Free Press recently gave one or two rather striking facts relative to the working out of our present law in regard to taxation for Separate Schools. A certain Ottawa property owner, a Protestant, has two houses rented to Roman Catholics. Recent increases in values has brought increased assessment and increased taxes. If the property were assessed for public schools, as the owner would desire, the taxes would be just $84.86, less than when it is assessed for Separate Schools. This means, of course, that it is worth $84.86 per year to the owner to have Protestant tenants. In such cases the owner usually adds the additional taxes to the rent, which means that the tenant must pay, in this case, about $3.50 a month more rent for the house than a Protestant would. This is pretty hard on poor tenants, and so not a few Roman Catholic tenants choose to be assessed as public school supporters rather than pay such addition to their taxes. Of course, in such cases, we presume the children would attend the public school. In Alberta, however, this refuge would not be possible, as the Roman Catholic in that Province is compelled to support Roman Catholic schools where they exist. From the standpoint of the heirarchy Separate Schools may be a great blessing, but the Roman laity may be pardoned if they sometimes deem than an almost intolerable burden.

AITKEN SAYS HE HAS BEEN A FAILURE IN PARLIAMENT

One Illness After Another Has Prevented Him Attending Duties--Offer to Resign Seat Met With Cries of "No"

London, May 30.—Sir Max Aitken, who sails for Canada to-morrow, addressed his constituents at Ashton, Lancashire, last night.

"I have been a failure as a member of Parliament," he said.

Voices: "Not at all."

"I have had one illness after another and been quite unable to attend to Parliamentary duties. The nature of my illness is such that for months to come I cannot hope to sit in Parliament.

"If my constituents think they cannot wait for me, I am ready to make way for another."

Cries of "No."

Sir Max concluded with sympathetic references to his opponent, who is also harrassed with constant illness.

NOW FOR THE WHITEHEAD TORPEDO.

VON JENNEY TELLS STORY OF IMPRISONMENT IN GUATEMALA

Reaches His Wife in Toronto Minus All His Property—Will Put in Claim for $250,000--Blames the Late Secretary of State

Toronto, May 30.—Mr. Belmont J. Von Jenney's extreme indignation at who was imprisoned for 40 days by the President of Guatemala, and finally released through the efforts of Secretary of State Bryan, is in Toronto, where his wife has been spending some years for her health. Mr. Non Jenney's extreme indignation at the carelessness of the late Republican Government was equalled only by deep and sincere gratitude to the merchants and people of Toronto.

"These have shown Mrs. Non Jenney such kindness and sympathy," said Mr. Von Jenney, "as I am quite unable to express. Mrs. Von Jenney quite believes that even in an American city she would not have been treated with such sympathetic and generous regard during my unjust imprisonment, and the troubles I endured."

At the time of his imprisonment, the whole of Mr. Jenney's property was confiscated. "They seized all my trunks, my property, $22,000 I had in the bank and sold five tons of my tobacco," he said.

At present Mr. Von Jenney is in Toronto, awaiting a telegram from the busy Secretary of State. Mr. Jenney will then proceed to Washington, where with his lawyers, he will consult the American Government officials. I shall put in a claim for $250,000 damages for my imprisonment, together with a demand for a full indemnity for all my property which was confiscated. I was in a dungeon for 39 days in daily peril of life, and when I did escape such was the haste that I got away with only a single suit of clothes."

CHILDRENS ORCHESTRA GIVE GOOD CONCERT

Last evening an audience of about three hundred people attended the concert given by the Children's Orchestra of the Conservatory, numbering twenty-four players. The playing of the little folks was simply a revelation as some of them were not much larger than the instruments upon which they played and demonstrated the thoroughness of the method of teaching at this institution.

PROGRAMME

The programme was as follows:—
Sacred Selection—Orchestra.
"The Swallows,"—Ernest Morgan.
"Nightingale Song" "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep" Hymn—Orchestra.

"The Bird and the Rose"—Ernest Morgan.
National Airs—Orchestra.
Under direction of Mr. R. Gliddon, assisted by Miss Palmer and Miss Logan. Miss Dean and Isobel Baird at Piano.

SPLENDID PROGRAM AT NO 8 SCHOOL

A very successful entertainment was held a few days ago, in No. 8 Public School, Otonabee. A splendid programme was presented by the teacher, Miss Hazel Reynolds, and her pupils.

The selections were mostly patriotic, and it pleased the audience immensely to hear these sweet childish voices singing and reciting patriotic selections. The scholars are being taught love for, and loyalty to, the crown and constitution of the British Empire, something that was not only neglected but ignored in that school during the past decade.

The whole interior of the school has undergone a change. The walls are tastefully decorated with papering and pictures. This change has been brought about by the refined taste and management of Miss Reynolds, and her capable trustees, Mr. Henry Crane and Mr. John Gillespie. The following was the programme of meeting:

Mr. J. Graham Weir was chairman of meeting. It was moved by Mr. James Thompson and seconded by Mr. Henry Crane that a vote of thanks be given to Miss Reynolds, for her able management of this entertainment and also for the rapid progress her pupils have made in their studies. The Rev. Mr. Johnston, of Keene, gave a very edifying address on "Our Empire." The meeting closed by singing "God save the King."

THE PROGRAMME

Chairman's address.

GYPSIES TURNED DOWN BY A SMITH FARMER

The Gypsies who have given the local police some cause for investigation in the vicinity of the Smith boundary line, folded their tents and fled away early yesterday morning. They invaded the grocery store of Dawson Bros. and picked up everything not watched. The Sultana, Queen, or Princess of the band went to a resident of Smith who wears whiskers, resembling a topsy-turvey bed of asparagus, and wanted to tell his fortune. The old gentleman, changing a 10 ounce chew of tobacco from the right to the left side of his mouth, said, "I know my fortune, right now. I married a widow with seven children, and a bad temper, and by heck, I'll follow misfortune with fortune, if you people will only get out right now." They got.

PETES CAPTURE ONE MORE FROM THE HAMILTON TIGERS

Yesterday quite a large number of fans turned out at Riverside Park to witness the second game between the Petes and Hamilton.

The game was full of life and many brilliant plays were pulled off. The boys worked hard and with Brodie in the box gave him the very best of support. The teams were very evenly matched yesterday, the visitors putting up a better class of ball than they did in the first contest Manager Notty Lee of the Hamilton team, seems to be running in a streak of hard luck for the last week and is very badly crippled. His star southpaw twirler, Rose, having taken leave of absence on account of the serious illness of his brother, who met with an auto accident; catcher Fisher, got put out of the game on Thursday by being hit in the head with a pitched ball and Killelea being benched for a week for making a pass at the umpire. The team is very seriously handicapped just now, but Notty hopes to pull up again in a few days.

The game yesterday was a good exhibition of ball. Davis's inoculation proving very satisfactory. In the eighth innings, McNeal batted for Brodie, when the score stood 3—2 against us, and made a hit, getting to first base hopping on one foot, the other being very sore on account of being spiked in the ankle the day before. In this innings the Petes tied the score, and in the ninth made another run, beating the visitors by a score of 4—3.

Batteries—Hamilton, Donovan and Barton; Petes, Brodie and Chapdelaine.

Umpire—Halligan.

GAMES TO-DAY.

At Riverside Park—The Petes vs. Hamilton.

At the Oval—The opening games of the Mercantile League will be played at 2 o'clock between the Typos and Machine Shop; at 2 o'clock, the Bankers meet the Quakers. Two good games are also to be played in the Brinton grounds, at 2 and 4 o'clock.

NUGENT'S SARSAPARILLA—PRICE FOR large bottle, 100 full doses, 50c. and well worth it, too. It's better to take no medicine at all than to depend upon cheap concoctions that are compounded to sell at low price and a big profit just because there is a large demand for certain remedies at certain seasons of the year. There are so-called Sarsaparillas offered to us to sell to our customers at 25c a bottle that would bring us a larger profit than Nugent's Sarsaparilla sold at 50c. Nugent's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, arouses the torpid liver, drives out all impurities, cleanses and tones up the system, and helps Nature throw off the dullness that comes from indoor life of winter. It arouses energy, brightens the eye, clears the brain, gives vigor to the movements. Nugent's Sarsaparilla is not the only thing you will find in this drug store, we make a specialty of Nugent's Remedies. Nugent Drug Co., 325 George St., directly opposite Cressman's store.

Nature's Barometers

There are two kinds of clouds—wind clouds and rain clouds, the former in summer being as black as night. Clouds banked together in the west mean coming rain. The walls of houses are usually damp before rain. Cows and sheep instinctively lie down when it is going to rain, in order to keep a dry spot for themselves. Swallows are good weather prophets. If, when flying low, they suddenly congregate and fly very high it is a sure sign of a coming storm. When geese cackle and peacocks scream, rain is pretty sure to be near. Flowers are highly sensitive to rain. The pimpernel has been called the "poor man's weather glass," its prophecies being so true:

"Closed is the pink-eyed pimpernel,
'Twill surely rain; I see, with sorrow,
Our jaunt must be put off till tomorrow."

NERVOUS DEBILITY

OUR NEW METHOD TREATMENT will cure you and make a man of you. Under its influence the brain becomes active, the blood purified so that all pimples, blotches and ulcers heal up; the nerves become strong as steel, so that nervousness, bashfulness and despondency disappear; the eyes become bright, the face full and clear, energy returns to the body, and the moral, physical and mental systems are invigorated; all drains cease—no more vital waste from the system. You feel yourself a man and know marriage cannot be a failure. Don't let quacks and fakirs rob you of your hard earned dollars.

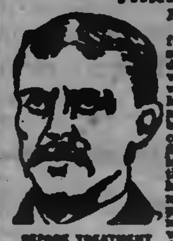
THREATENED WITH PARALYSIS



BEFORE TREATMENT

Peter E. Summers relates his experience: "I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, but received little benefit. I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the NEW METHOD TREATMENT and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and continue to do so."

The crocus forecasts rain by shutting up its leaves in a most determined way; so also do the dandelion, wood-sorrel, and [illegible]. The heads of wild oats curl up in dry weather, and contract in damp. Fir-cones are good weather indicators, closing for wet weather and open for fine. They retain this power even after they are gathered, so long as they have any seeds in them to protect. In villages round the coast seaweed is the homely weather-glass, becoming moist and clammy when rain is near. They have a curious method of forecasting the weather in some parts of Germany and Switzerland. A small green frog is kept in a bottle half full of water, with a flight of wooden steps leading down from the top of the bottle into the water. If the frog stays down below they say the weather will be fine, but if it comes up and sits down on the steps it will be dull, and rain and cold may be expected.

HOLY LAND BACKWARD UNDER TURKISH RULE

A British newspaper writer once wished to get some postcards at Jerusalem, and applied to the "post effendi." "Please give me ten postcards," he asked.

The Turkish official looked for a moment in surprise, and then replied: "But, honored sir, why should you carry on your correspondence with cards? You can writer at greater length in a letter; and, besides, every one can read what you say on a post card."

"I have very little to say, and they suit me better. Kindly give me ten."

"But, dear, worthy sir, you are not of those poor people who have to use postcards; rather write a fine long letter."

As the correspondent still insisted on having them, the post effendi murmured, "Honored sir, I would willingly give you them, but I cannot."

"But why cannot you sell postcards?"

"Because I have none. I have had none since the week before last. If you really must have some, you will be obliged to go to Joppa for them."

This being a journey of some seventy miles, the visitor naturally had no wish to go and fetch them.

On another occasion, the same visitor, being in Damascus, went to the post-office to ask for his letters and the postmaster remonstrated. "But, respected sir, you got some letters only last week, and now you are already asking for more!"

DISOBEYED PARENTS TO WIN WORLD'S TITLE

Jackson Who Won 1,500 Metre Race at Olympiad Had to Run Away From Home

A. N. S. Jackson, the young English runner who captured the 1,500-metre event at Stockholm, figured on John Bull's Olympic team against the wishes of his parents; in fact, he literally ran away from home to join the team, after having been selected for a place because of his splendid showing in the trials. Jackson's father is very wealthy, and even now that his son is a world's champion objects strongly to the young man's continued efforts on the cinder path.

As far back as two years ago, when Jackson took up a course at Oxford his parents were against his participation in athletics.

The Englishman is a truly remarkable runner. Students of athletics in England had little confidence in his ability to trim speed merchants like John Paul Jones, Abel Kiviat and Mel Sheppard. Jackson's victory is made all the more remarkable when you consider that 300 yards from the finish he was running in fifth position with only one chance in a thousand of winning.

Jackson comes of the best English stock. He is a clean liver and for his short career in the game has done remarkable work. Twenty years old, tall and lithe, he is bound to duplicate the wonderful run he showed in the Swedish stadium.

Last March he sprung a surprise on the experts in England by winning the mile event at a meeting between Oxford and Cambridge. The time was good and they say he could have done better had he been pushed harder. He is an example of what can be expected of a youth who pays strict attention to his trainer.

Cree Snowshoes

The Minister of Railways and Canals, Hon. Frank Cochrane, while on his trip to Fort Churchill and [illegible], picked up some interesting souvenirs. Among these were specially handsome walrus tusks and a pair of Cree snowshoes. The Cree ones, unlike the variety in general use, are shaped for the right foot and for the left. The inside of each shoe is a straight line, so that they will not interfere on the narrow trails of the north.

EDITORIAL NOTES

How many of us remember the time when the city had no public parks and the young people used to make love in the cemeteries.

Women who recently placed a bomb outside the Northumberland County Council offices left a large inscription, "Beware of the bomb! Run for your lives!" The caretaker, being a man, did not run, but was hunting for the bomb when it exploded. If he had been killed it would doubtless have been, according to feminine logic "all his own fault."

A CRUSADE AGAINST IMPROPER SONGS.

Chicago is proposing a crusade against the improper and suggestive song which should be joined by every city in the country. The smutty song is absolutely indefensible, and is much more harmful than is generally appreciated. It is sung before miscellaneous audiences and not infrequently in theatres patronized by the young who are most carefully guarded in their own homes.

These boys and girls should not be exposed to the danger when they attend a public entertainment of hearing sentiment and suggestions that can be only harmful to them. The managers of the theatres should protect their patrons from such insults, and do in most well-regulated playhouses, but to make sure of such action there should be legislation along the lines that Chicago proposes.

The insidious effect of improper songs and dances on the stage should not be underestimated. It has come about in recent years that many things that would have shocked theatre-goers of a generation ago are to-day accepted without a blush, and we should realize that it is high time to call a halt. While acceptance of the improper song does not imply indorsement, it at least denotes an indifference that is not likely to lead to better things.

TREATY REPUDIATION

Within the past year the most serious difficulties that have assailed the United States department of state have arisen out of actual and prospective breaches of treaties. First came the international complications following President Taft's announcement of the exemption of coastwise ships from Panama canal tolls. By this action it is felt by the greatest authorities on international law that the Hay-Pauncefote treaty was contravened.

The second serious treaty trouble was created by the passage of the anti-alien land law by the legislature of California. In this instance the treaty between the United States and Japan is infringed inasmuch as the new act provides that Japanese shall not be permitted to lease lands "upon the same terms" as native citizens.

Lastly comes the provision contained in the proposed tariff that a five per cent discount be given imports brought to the United States in ships owned in that country. This provision held to be a distinct violation of existing treaties with the leading commercial nations of the world.

It is seldom that one country in so short a space of time encounters an equal volume of international difficulties. As yet none of the problems have been settled. The Panama tolls question will likely go to arbitration. The logical outcome of the California land law trouble would seem to be the complete nullification of that law insofar as it contravenes a treaty. Treaties, according to the commission, are the supreme law of the land, and can hardly be over-ridden by any State legislature imbued with prejudice.

The last conflict with international treaties is still in embryo. The discount amounts to nothing less than a subsidy to American shipping but it is granted in a manner which may be expected to cause international complications. As the tariff bill has not yet made its way through the house the cause of the dispute may be wiped out before the bill becomes law. Viewed from any angle, one has to admit that Mr. Bryan and his department of state have their hands full.

Any Headache Cured, Tired Systems Re-toned

When You're Dull, Tired, Restless Day and Night Something is Wrong With the Stomach.

A Prominent Publishing Man Says The Quickest Cure is Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Headaches never come to those who use Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and this fact is vouched for by the Assistant Manager of the Poultry Success Magazine, of Springfield, O., Mr. J. H. Callender, who writes: "No better medicine than Dr. Hamilton's Pills. We use them regularly and know of marvelous cures that resisted everything else. They cleanse the whole system, act as a tonic to the blood, enliven digestion, help the stomach, and make you feel strong and well. For headache, indigestion and stomach disorders I am confident that the one prescription is Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

Being composed of natural vegetable remedies, Dr. Hamilton's Pills possess great power, yet they are harmless. They aid all organs connected with the stomach, liver, and bowels. In consequence, food is properly digested, the blood is pure and nourishing, the body is kept strong and resists disease, all druggists and storekeepers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, 5 for $1.00, or by mail from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

PUBLIC OPINION.

The Times does not hold itself responsible for the opinions of its correspondents.

APPEAL TO THE CITIZENS

Editor Morning Times.

Dear Sir:—The City Council has men at work, under the Board of Works, destroying the caterpillars on the streets and in public places, but this is not enough to save the trees of the city unless the citizens look after the trees on their own property. United action will rid the city of this pest, and will save the trees. One of the beauties of Peterborough is the large number of trees on the streets and grounds, and it will be exceedingly regrettable if a number of them are lost through neglect at this time. The Council asks all citizens to do their duty and destroy the caterpillars on their property. A little attention given by each one will have the most beneficial results.

Yours truly,

W. H. Bradburn,
Mayor.

A PARALLEL CASE.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir, — I saw in your paper a few days ago a letter about stopping the housefly pest that seemed to me well put. I agree with the writer of that letter that people should keep their garbage cans tightly covered. The greatest breeding places for flies are in garbage and manure. If the flies are kept from getting at garbage they will starve and untold millions of future flies will be prevented from coming into existence. The Sanitary Inspector for the sake of public health and comfort should see that people keep their garbage cans covered.

Anti-Fly.

THE FLY NUISANCE.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—In the House of Commons recently Wm. A. Charlton, M.P., set a fine example of inconsistency by preaching peace and voting for two fleet armaments. This reminds me of a story I heard the other day in which my old friend ex-Mayor Yelland figured. It is said he prayed so loud and so strenuously for temperance as to make the rafters of the George Street Methodist Church fairly rattle, but when Col. Miller, who does not know the taste of intoxicating liquor, ran for Legislature on the Conservative ticket, he failed to secure his support. It proves the truth of the old saying: "If temperance interferes with your politics, cut out temperance."

"LIKE MAGIC"

New Food Makes Wonderful Changes.

When a man has suffered from dyspepsia so many years that he can't remember when he had a natural appetite, and then hits on a way out of trouble he may be excused for saying "it acts like magic."

When it is a simple, wholesome food instead of any one of a large number of so-called remedies in the form of drugs, he is more than ever likely to feel as though a sort of miracle has been performed.

A Western man, in the delight of restored digestion, puts it in this way:

"Like magic, fittingly describes the manner in which Grape-Nuts relieved me of poor digestion, coated tongue and loss of appetite, of many years' standing.

"I tried about every medicine that was recommended to me, without relief. Then I tried Grape-Nuts on the suggestion of a friend. By the time I had finished the fourth package, my stomach was all right, and for the past two months, I have been eating with a relish, anything set before me. That is something I had been unable to do previously for years.

"I am stronger than ever and I consider the effects of Grape-Nuts on a weak stomach as something really wonderful. It builds up the entire body as well as the brain and nerves." Name given by the Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true and full of human interest.

A BISHOP'S CRITICISM

Wishes a More Vital Application of Christianity to Problems

In his address at Carlisle Diocesan Conference at Windermere, the Bishop of Carlisle, Dr. Diggle, claimed a more effective and vital application of Christianity to modern problems. "Our age," he said, "is an age of enormous material prosperity. Money is growing into a god and worshiped with an idolatrous and materialistic worship. On the other hand we are losing the sense of the dignity of labor. The heightening of the habits of living has everywhere increased the cost. These, with other causes, are producing an unrest amounting almost to perilious despair among the lower laboring classes, who often work eighty hours a week for twenty shillings. These things ought not to be. They turn the brotherhood of man into a sham."

POETS' CORNER

Readers are invited to contribute to this column. Matter to be either original or otherwise.

Casey at the Bat.

With a smile of Christian charity great Casey's visage shone,
He stilled the rising tumult; he bade the game go on;
He signalled to the pitcher, and once more the spheroid flew,
But Casey still ignored it, and the umpire said "Strike two!"

"Fraud!" cried the maddened thousands and the echo answered "Fraud!"
The Sheriff leaped upon the bench, the pitcher halted, awed.
Militia broke through every gate and poured upon the field,
'Twas Congressman O'Toole himself that bade the umpire yield.

A special train was chartered and to Washington it sped,
While bold O'Toole got on the wire and flashed the news ahead.
From lobby and committee room the solemn statesmen came
And gathered in the Senate to investigate the game.

With pistols drawn, with sabres bared amid an angry din,
Battalions met the special train and dragged the umpire in,
Where, clad in august majesty, the silent statesmen sat,
With Casey as exhibit A; exhibit B, his bat.

Chilled by the look of cold disdain he views on every face
The shackled umpire mounts the stand and slinks into his place.
And now Sam Untermeyer waves his mighty hand for speed;
"I'm here," says Sam, "and ready, so the chairman may proceed.

Now one by one the frenzied fans who saw the fatal game
Pour out their tearful stories of the tyrant umpire's shame.
"To low," "Too high," "To wide," they say—but one and all alike
Proclaim 'twas foul oppression to declare the ball a strike.

And now the case is almost done, and Samuel holds the floor,
He speaks of "sacred liberties" and "freedom's open door."
He asks with patriotic fire if free-born fans shall feel
Upon their dorsal vertebrae the umpire's hated heel.

The statesmen think, the statesmen talk, and then the statesmen vote;
The verdict's waiting to be read, the chairman clears his throat.
"Know all men by these presents that our justice cannot fail; Poor Casey gets a pension—and the umpire goes to jail!"

COLT WITH SEVEN FEET

Owner Has Refused $1,000 for His Curiosity

Richard Moore, a farmer living near St. Thomas, Ont., possesses a freak colt with the unusual number of seven feet. An eighth foot, which was only connected by a small ligament, fell off a few days after birth. The extra feet are attached to each leg immediately behind the regular feet and growing out of the fetlock. The supplementary feet are slightly smaller than the the others. The colt is a handsome young specimen and the owner refused $1,000 for his curiosity.

KILLING OFF THE WOLVES

Algonquin Park Rangers Have Bagged Sixteen Animals in December

Sixteen wolves were bagged in December by the rangers in Algonquin Park, according to T. W. Gibson, deputy minister of mines. The animals are being poisoned and at the present rate of progress their extermination will virtually be accomplished this winter. Numbers of deer were killed last year by the wolves, and more aggressive protection of this game has been decided on. The poison is being supplied by the government, and the rangers are being allowed the usual provincial bounty on the head of every wolf.

TURF.

New York, May 30.—J. R. Fall, an enthusiastic steeplechase devotee of this country, arrived home yesterday from England where he has been racing a string of American steeplechase horses with much success. He made the announcement that Highbridge, one of those picked to win the Grand National at Aintree last month, had burst a blood vessel during a race at Karlshorst, Germany, and will be forced to be given a year's let up.

ATHLETICS.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 30. — The faculty of the University of Pennsylvania is almost unanimously opposed to Pennsylvania students participating in Sunday sporting competitions, particularly as representatives of the university. For that reason action will be taken at this week's meeting which will prevent Penn men from entering Sabbath meets in the future. The faculty's action has been precipitated by the prominence given to Sunday afternoon, in which he de- Ted Meredith's race at Celtic Park Sunday afternoon, in which he defeated some of the best half-milers of the country in 1 56 4-5 sec. Meredith is captain of the freshman track team at Penn, and is considered one of the best middle-distance runners ever in the university.

RING.

Paris, May 30.—Reference to the National Sporting Club of London that causes surprise to every Englishman interested in boxing was made in a notice appearing in the Temps, which stated that the new National Boxing Union just organized, with headquarters in Paris, will prepare definite and final rules for all world's championship bouts and decide all disputed cases arising in the sport.

The Boxing Union will consist of representatives of the New York state athletic commission and the French boxing federation. The National Sporting Club, the statement further says, does not figure in a boxing union because it is not considered sufficiently important to take part in any such international organization. The Temps adds that the National Sporting Club will act through the French boxing federation in the International Union.

POWER BOATS.

New York, May 30.—Plans are now under construction for holding power boat races from Chicago and New York to San Francisco via the Panama canal in 1915 as part of the Panama-Pacific celebration. Word has been sent to the officials of the exposition by boat owners and builders that a number of boats will be entered for these races, which if held will be the longest races for power boats yet attempted. Boats will be started at Sandy Hook in one race and at Chicago in the other. The route for the latter will be to New Orleans and thence through the canal.

BILLIARDS.

San Francisco, Cal., May 30.—Alfred DeOro, the challenger, won the first of a series of three games for the three cushion billiard championship from John Horgan, the title holder, here. The score was 50 to 44. Horgan's high run was four; De Oro's three.

New York, May 30.—Willie Hoppe successfully defended his world's billiard championship title at 18 inch balk line, two shots in, against the challenger, Kodji Yamada, of Japan here, the score being 500 to 33.

BASEBALL.

Cleveland, O., May 30.—"Ite" Russell, prize recruit of the White Sox pitching staff, was ordered to undergo a medical examination when the Sox and Naps arrived here from Chicago. Manager Callahan feared that the injury to Russell when he was hit in the head by a pitched ball in the sixth inning of yesterday's game may have been more serious than the recruit thought.

It is reported that Captain Roxey Roach of the Bisons is ill.

Rex De Voght, the young Boston catcher, who was supposed to join the Bisons, is now playing with Toledo in the American association.

John Ganzel refuses to concede that the Buffalo Herd is the class of the league. He does admit that the Bisons were a pretty lucky ball club to win the first contest with the Hustlers.

"They had every break of luck there was to be had," he said. "They say that the Buffalo team is the whole works. Well, they have got a mighty good ball team, but they're not particularly fast thinking, and they haven't any wonders as baserunners. They sure can hit, though, and that-'ll probably win a large number of games for them. Newark looks equally as good."

FOR BETTER FARMING

A Western exchange says: "The farmers of this vicinity are inspired with the idea that industry is a good basis and are all out harrowing their wheat. Many your Communicate the fact that we must quit scratching over so much ground and get down to scientific farming and only farm what we can properly handle to get good results. Work is necessary to success in this country just the same as anywhere else. It is up to us to farm better and farm less land."

HOME HEALH CLUB

DR. DAVID H. REEDER,

WHAT TO DO. Part 2. If you have only one cow or even three and a couple of horses, then build a pit or tight box as a receptacle for the manure and other waste or garbage that is to be carted off. Put screens over a portion if you want the air to get in, but fix it so the flies cannot get in there to deposit their eggs and you simply prevent the breeding upon your place of countless millions of dirty pests. Then make it a rule to kill every fly you can. Trap them with screen traps, fly poison, sticky fly paper and any other device known to be effective, but kill them some way, also kill the rats, they carry disease, kill chickens and destroy food.

Five cents worth of plaster of Paris, mixed with corn meal and placed around their runaways in pans, will destroy hundreds of them. Mix about one tablespoonful with two tablespoonfuls of corn meal and set a small dish of water near by. Mr. Rat will want water after he has eaten a few mouthfuls and the trick is done. He will hurry himself in the deepest rathole he can find and there will be no odor.

Don't leave an uncovered rain barrel half filled or with any water in it. That makes an ideal breeding place for mosquitoes and one more thing, if you must sprinkle your lawn, do it in the morning, never at night. The eggs and larvae of the mosquitoes are in the water with which your sprinkle and during a warm summer night they hatch or develop into mosquitoes ready for business, but if the sprinkling is done in the early morning, the sun kills the eggs and larvae and the lawn does not produce a big crop of the pests to annoy you. If there is a pond near by or a marshy place where the mosquitoes breed, pour a little kerosene on it after every hard rain. If it is to be had, the crude petroleum is just as good.

Don't plant ferns around your porches, mosquitoes love them and breed under the leaves in the dew during the night. They dislike castor beans and that plant is much more attractive than ferns and grow to a great size in a single season. Try planting a lot of them about your house this spring and note the effect on the mosquitoes. Don't forget to swat the fly.

CLUB NOTES

I will gladly answer all inquiries for information on health subjects from readers of this publication if same are addressed to Home Health Club, 5039 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago. Send full name and address, with 4 cents postage.

Dear Doctor: Please tell me what to put on a fatty tumor to take it off. It was a kind of boil at first, that might have been opened. Now it is a good bit larger, and gets sore and swells and gets a raw kind of place on it on account of wind and dust and germs. W.P.J.

This is probably an abscess and should have been opened as soon as it was apparent that pus was present in it, if such was ever the case. In all probability there is still some there and should be allowed to escape by making a small incision. Some abscesses seem to be caused by an infection of a non-virulent type and these are slow and painless in growth. After opening such an abscess, it should be washed out daily with a p.c. solution of liquor cresolis compound and a small strip of gauze should be placed within it to all free drainage and to prevent healing on the surface before it had healed up from the bottom. Should it prove not to be of the type just referred to, further details should have been given and suggestions will be made regarding the treatment best adapted to it.

Dear Doctor: I would appreciate your advice regarding my husband's head. On the top near the crown of his head he always suffers with a pain, he has been suffering with it now for about a year or more. When it gets very bad the doctors give him some kind of a dope, but he is never clear of it. I know he has catarrh, because he hawks and spits so very often. What could I do for him. I am afraid if the pain goes on it may cause some serious trouble.

The pain in the crown of his head may be due to any one of many different causes. Catarrhal condition, such as you state are present, sometimes gives rise to pains, owing to infection of one of the bony cavities in the roof of the nose, which is brought about as the result of some obstruction in the latter interfering with free drainage from the cavities referred to. If any such obstruction exists, it must be removed. It is then necessary to raise the vital resistance of the system, by strictly adhering to the principles of health which have been given many times in these notes and are fully explained in the Home Health Club books. A nourishing diet should be used and care taken to prevent the development of constipation with its attending evils. The Compound Gentian would be a valuable aid in preventing this condition. A local wash to the nasal cavities of hydrogen peroxide or liquor antisepticus alkalinus, either of these being diluted with equal parts of warm water, should be used as a spray three times daily. The bed room should be thoroughly ventilated. A cold sponge bath each morning, followed by a brisk rub greatly stimulates the circulation in the skin and thus lessens congestion of the internal surfaces. Nervous disorders are also very common causes for headaches of the above mentioned type. Further details regarding various possible causes of this trouble would be given on the furnishing of more complete information.

Dear Doctor: I have a large swelling on my wrist, which the regulars call a tumor. It has troubled me more or less for ten years. I do not like the name they give it, neither do I wish to give them a chance to use a knife on it and pay an exorbitant price. I would appreciate your advice, and would be glad to have you tell me and perhaps others, what to do for a cure. Mrs. C.H.

Wring heavy flannel cloths out of hot vinegar and apply to the wrist as hot as can be borne. As soon as the cloth begins to cool, replace by another. Continue for half an hour. Repeat night and morning, until the lump of which you speak, disappears. I believe you will find that it will do so.

Do You Realize What This Means to You, Mr. Business Man?

UNWRITTEN LAW GOVERNS WARFARE

At Least a Good Many Principles Are Supposed to be Adhered to by Combatants

War—that is, warfare between civilized nations—has its code of etiquette, known as the customs of war, some of which are written, others tacitly agreed to. Obvious examples of fighting etiquette are the rules which protect the Red Cross flag of the ambulance and forbid the use of explosive or, within limits, expanding bullets.

Nominally, a General may use any means in his power to bring his foe to subjection, but there is a well defined boundary line. A leader may cut off his enemy's food and water supply. He may subject him to all the horrors of famine and thirst, but he must not poison his food or water. Suppose a place is besieged and that outside the walls are wells which the beseigers cannot effectively hold and which the besieged can reach under cover of night. The besieger would be justified in sending parties to fill up the wells with earth and stones or to destroy them with dynamite. On the other hand, to pollute the wells with poison or to throw dead animals into them would be an infamy.

A "prisoner of war" has his rights. He may be asked to give his parole to promise not to escape, but he must not be forced to give his parole and is not to be punished for refusing to do so. A prisoner on parole who attempts to escape is liable to be shot, either when escaping or if retaken alive. An unparoled prisoner may also be shot while in the act of escaping; but if recaptured it would be murder to shoot him, and he should not be punished for his attempt, though he may be placed in more rigorous confinement. A prisoner may be compelled to earn his "keep" by working at his trade, if he has one, or by doing work for his captors not of a purely military nature. Thus, he may be ordered to assist in draining the camp in which he is a prisoner, but it would not be fair to put him to building fortifications.

The customs of war justify the employment of spies, but under certain rules. If a soldier voluntarily turns traitor, the other side is entitled to make use of him, but it is not considered proper to tempt a soldier to betray his own side. If thus tempted, a man may pretend to turn traitor and deceive the enemy with false information. On the other hand, voluntarily to go over to the enemy, pretending to be a traitor or deserter, would be dishonorable conduct, that is, if the pretended traitor is an officer or soldier. A spy, of course, has no rights, and is at all times liable to be shot or hanged at sight. An officer, or soldier, however, caught in the enemy's camp, must not be treated as a spy, but as a prisoner of war, provided he is not disguised.

If a commander takes part in a charge or persistently exposes himself to fire he must take his chances of being shot; but in big affairs it is not the "game" to detail marksmen to try to "pick off" your opponent's general, though every effort may be made to capture him.

When a city or a town is bombarded public buildings, unless used for defensive purposes, are supposed to be spared so far as possible. When a place is captured, the victorious foe is entitled to seize art treasures and so on, and to hold them to ransom. To injure or destroy them would be the act of a vandal. When a country is invaded, the invader can compel the inhabitants to supply him with food and other supplies, and to act as guides, workmen and drivers.

A person who, not belonging to any recognized military force, takes up arms against an invader is liable to be shot when captured. Retaliation is sanctioned by the customs of war. It is military vengeance, and takes place when an outrage committed on one side is avenged by the commission of a similar act on the other.

CROOK'S QUEER EXCUSE

Canadian Claimed Dishonesty Due to Injuries to His Head.

A most interesting case of criminal physiology in police annals was presented by Phillip Van Tine, who was arrested at Milwaukee, charged with having raised a cheque from $7 to $70. Van Tine who is 25 years old, and claimed to be a native of Toronto, admitted the act, but insisted that he was morally irresponsible.

In his mental make-up, he claimed, there is a criminal streak, and he is so constituted mentally that at times he is unable to resist the temptation to steal. He asked that an operation be performed upon his brain to make an honest man of him. He claimed that at the age of 10 his head was injured in a runaway accident, and since then he had an uncontrollable desire to steal. The judge promised to consider his request.

A Canadian Baroness

A girl of twelve years of age was a peerage claim before the committee of privileges of the House of Lords. She is Mary Frances Katherine Petre, daughter of Baroness Petre, the widow of the fourteenth baron. Her mother made the petition in behalf of her daughter, claiming the barony of Furnivall, and submitting the pedigree, which started in 1383, when the first lord of Furnivall sat in Parliament. The girl is a grand-daughter of the late Professor William Clark, Trinity College, his daughter having married the fourteenth Baron Petre. She is the lady who established the claim of her daughter to the barony of Furnivall.

The world's youngest licensed aeroplane pilot is a 14-year-old English naval cadet.

Patrick Once More

A traveller who dropped into a North Ontario town vouches for the following: As the "Sudbury to the Soo" train was on its way west the other day a certain judge came aboard, and finding all the seats occupied, finally sat down beside an Irishman who was seated just in front of the judge, who got into conversation with the Irishman, and soon discovered that he had only been in Canada for about two years. His Honor was full of praise for Canada and especially of Northern Ontario. The Irishman listened to the glowing description for some time, but finally became restive and remarked that Canada might be a pretty good place but could in no wise compare with Ireland. To this His Honor objected, and to strengthen his argument said: "Now Pat, you know very well that you would be in Ireland many and many a long year before you would ever have the privilege of sitting with a judge." Pat was fairly bowled over for a minute, but with an Irish ready wit replied: "True for you, yer Honor, but sure now, yer Honor would be in Ireland many and many a long year before ye'd be a judge."

WORLD LANGUAGE OF SIGNS

Sir William Ramsay Has Plan to Use Pictorial Characters Based on Chinese.

To make possible the exchange of ideas among all peoples of the world Sir William Ramsay, the English scientist, has begun to develop a pictorial sign language, based somewhat upon Chinese, which he hopes will eventually spread among all races.

The Chinese character to express "man," for instance, is made with two converging lines that represent simply his legs, looking much like the legs of the crude man that the schoolboy draws.

Sir William's character goes further and adds a vertical straight line above the converging lines to represent the body.

"The first thing that one thinks of," he argues, "is existence expressed in the verb 'to be.'"

So he has selected the arithmetical equality mark to denote existence. All things relating to one's state and condition, he said, can be expressed by these two parallel lines.

For time which stretches away, or action that is constant, he uses a dash. Instantaneous time or action he represents with a dot. Thus a dot placed squarely between and in the middle of two lines of the equality mark denotes the immediate present, or "I am." Similarly the dot, when placed at the left and between the two lines denotes past, or "I was," and when placed to the right indicates the future tense, or "I am to be."

To denote a woman Sir William draws a line closing the diverging ends of the legs of the sign for man. On the theory that "I" is the most important thing in the world to any man, Sir William utilizes the straight vertical line that represents the body of his man figure to depict the word.

What He Was After.

It was a very hot day and the fat drummer who wanted the 12:20 train got through the gate at just 12:21. The ensuing handicap was watched with absorbing interest both from the train and the station platform. At its conclusion the breathless and perspiring knight of the road wearily took the back trail and a vacant faced "red cap" came to relieve him of his grip.

"Mister," he inquired, "was you tryin' to ketch that Pennsylvania train?"

"No, my son," replied the patient man. "No; I was merely chasing it out of the yard."—Saturday Evening Post.

Wisdom Comes Slowly.

Towne—"I believe it's a fact that a man must get to be at least thirty before he really knows anything."

Browne—"Yes; and he must be at least forty before he quits telling what he knows."—Catholic Standard and Times.

SYNOPSIS OF DOMINION LAND REGULATIONS

ANY person who is sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-agency for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any agency, on certain conditions by father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

Duties.—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, solely owned and occupied by him or by his father, mother, son, daughter, brother, or sister.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties.—Must reside upon the homestead or pre-emption six months in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and cultivate fifty acres extra.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may enter for a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties.—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

TENDERS FOR DREDGING

SEALED TENDERS, addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Dredging, Trenton, Ont.," will be received until 4.00 P.M., on Tuesday, June 10, 1913, for dredging required at Trenton, Ont.

Tenders will not be considered unless made on the forms supplied, and signed with the actual signatures of the tenderers.

Combined specification and form of tender can be obtained on application to the Secretary, Department of Public Works, Ottawa. Tenders must include the towing of the plant to and from the work. Dredges and tugs not owned and registered in Canada shall not be employed in the performance of the work contracted for. Contractors must be ready to begin work within thirty days after the date they have been notified of the acceptance of their tender.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, for five per cent. (5 p.c.) of the contract price, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary.

TENDERS FOR DREDGING

SEALED TENDERS, addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Dredging, Ontario," will be received until 4.00 P.M., Wednesday, June 4, 1913, for dredging required at the following places in the Province of Ontario:—

Cloud Bay, Whitby, Bruce Mines, Hilton, Killarney, Little Detroit, Walker River.

Tenders will not be considered unless made on the forms supplied, and signed with the actual signatures of the tenderers.

Combined specification and form of tender can be obtained on application to the Secretary, Department of Public Works, Ottawa. Tenders must include the towing of the plant to and from the work. Dredges and tugs not owned and registered in Canada shall not be employed in the performance of the work contracted for. Contractors must be ready to begin work within thirty days after the date they have been notified of the acceptance of their tender.

A separate cheque for each place for which a tender is submitted must accompany the tender. This cheque must be equal to five per cent (5 p.c.) of the amount of the tender, based on the approximate quantities set opposite the name of place, but in no case must the cheque be for a less sum than $1,500. The cheque must be accepted, on a chartered bank, and payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary.

SOME SAGE ADVICE FOR YOUNG MOTHERS

As Good at Least as the Babble of Advice Handed Out by Callers

One of the trials of the young mother is the amount of advice which is hurled at her from all sides. For months she cannot call her child her own. Knowing very little about babies, she feels bound to listen to the advice which comes from every point of the compass, but to her confusion she discovers that the moment she has decided to follow the advice of A her faith is demolished by the protests of B. One will tell her that on no account must she ever wake the baby. Another will tell her that she must wake him regularly to give him food. A third will tell her that she must bath him twice a day. A fourth will warn her that she will wash him away to nothing. A fifth will insist on flannel next to the skin. A sixth will protest that there is nothing so bad as flannel. In addition she will be told all kinds of fantastic things, and there are even people who will tell her that she must hold the baby's hand when he sneezes.

It is necessary, therefore, that the young mother, being in so alarming and helpless a position, should have something on which she can fall back with safety, something which will make her independent of the confusing advice of her friends.

Here is some sage advice: "Don't preach at your child. If he persists in giving away to temper, simply make him feel that he is a nuisance, and that therefore his society is unwelcome, by sending him out of the room until he gets over it. Don't fetch him back angrily because you hear him stamp outside the door to 'let off steam.' If he had no temper he would not be worth much. You don't want to 'break his temper,' as people often say; merely teach him to control it.

"Don't snub your children, especially before other people. It may be necessary to repress their exuberance or prevent them from interrupting others, but do it without snubbing, which ruins their self-respect.

"Don't be upset if your child seems selfish. It is as natural to a child as to a wild animal to take what he wants if he can get it. The remedy is to let him play with other children, and interfere as little as possible unless you find him either too yielding or too domineering. He will soon find his level, and realize that there must be 'give and take,' with very little direct teaching. If he persists in quarrelling, make him play alone for a time; he will soon be anxious to play amicably with the others.

"Don't allow your children to put on airs with servants. Teach them to be always polite. Snobs are made in the nursery.

"Don't punish your child for accidental breakage, etc. If you do, you need not be surprised if he learns to tell lies to hide his responsibility for something he knows will anger you. Let him see how sorry you are that you have lost something you valued; show him how to avoid such a mishap in the future; but don't treat him as if he had committed a crime. Teach him to tell the exact truth about everything that he does.

"Don't wait hand and foot on your boy, and don't let your girls do it. If he is an only boy don't idolize him. He is a very ordinary boy after all; and you make him selfish, conceited and ill-mannered. The son of a doting mother has generally a very poor opinion of women, and his wife's life will not be a happy one. Foolish mothers make unhappy marriages."

BURIED TOO QUICKLY

Montreal's Health Officer Confident Many Tragedies Occur as a Result

That many people are buried alive in Montreal was the belief expressed by Dr. Louis Laberge, Medical Health Officer. This, he claimed, was because of the habit of quick burying. Many people are interred inside of twenty-four hours after they are pronounced dead, and there is no means of knowing whether or not they are in a state of lethargy.

He called attention to a vault in point in Winnipeg and advocated that a law be passed to force the relatives of the deceased to wait until all possibility of the supposed dead persons being alive is past.

LAST BUFFALO RELICS

Immense Collection of Horns Gathered From the Prairies

An interesting shipment of buffalo horns, probably the last one of any size that will leave the West, has arrived in Ottawa. There are 10,000 horns of the noble bison and they are valued at about $5,000. They were taken to Ottawa by Mr. Samuel Breadner who purchased them from an Indian curio dealer at Winnipeg.

This shipment does away with the last of a store of about 30,000 of the headgear of the former proud masters of the prairie. The horns were picked up on the prairies by the settlers and Indians. If the brave warriors could have thrown a glance into the future when they, after killing the buffaloes, rode away with only the skin, the tongue and heart, leaving the rest of the carcass to the tender mercies of the elements, and then seen that they a few years later would be walking around digging the half buried horns up from the ground to sell them to the palefaces, they no doubt would have shown more care in disposing of them.

The man who bought the buffalo horns from the Indians and the settlers was the late W. F. White, first a blacksmith, and later curio dealer.

"The horn trade with the dusky braves was not without trouble and inconvenience. The original lords of the western plains were not exactly famous for their honesty. They would come in large numbers to Mr. White's store and, one at a time, bargain with him for the sale of their pickings, or rather those of their wives. The horns were usually wrapped up in bundles looking very much alike and when Mr. White had bought one he usually would throw it out in the back yard and then turn to the next customer. The one who had disposed of his bag then took a stroll around to the said backyard, and if nobody was watching, he simply helped himself to the very same bundle and sold it to Mr. White over again.

On a successful day, the Indians thus made good profits and the dispensers of fire water, who in the good old days were not subject to such strict rules as now, did a rushing business as long as the Indian's money lasted.

MANY INDIAN RELICS

Island Near Manitoulin Evidently Scene of Many Conflicts

About five miles from the south shore of the Manitoulin Island lies Lake Mindemoya, or, in the Indian tongue, "Lake of the Old Woman." It is about seven miles long, and varies from one to three miles in width, and, with its pretty, sandy beaches, sheltered bays, and its island, is one of the most beautiful lakes in Ontario. It is in the limestone area, and, consequently, part of the shore is formed by high, precipitous cliffs of limestone rock, moss-grown, weathered, and cleft by frost and storm.

High up in the face of this rock, a large cave was discovered many years ago. A man was walking along the cliff, when he suddenly saw before him this huge chamber in the rock. Strewn upon the floor were Indian skeletons and weapons, just as they must have fallen when hemmed in by a hostile tribe. One skeleton was of gigantic size. As further proof that this was an Indian stronghold, the whole front of the cave was once walled up with flat stones to a considerable height; this defence has fallen down, but still the form of the wall can be seen in the mass of stones lying on the ground.

About nine miles northeast of the cave lie what are supposed to be the remains of another old Indian fort. A row of stakes, planted in a circular form, is all that remains, and most of these are decayed and just visible above the level of the earth. Tradition says that this was used as a defence during an Indian war. Several places near Lake Mindemoya are known as battle grounds because of the stone arrowheads and other weapons found.

Deserted Township

An unusual memorial was unveiled in the desolate district on the borders of Caithness and Sutherland to the former residents of Badbea, on the Duke of Portland's Langwell estate. Badbea was at one time a township of some dozen houses, with a population of 100 people, but lately the last of these left the district, which is now totally uninhabited. The memorial is a substantial cairn of masonry, built up from the stones of the former crofters' houses. It was presented by Mr. David Sutherland, [illegible], New Zealand, the son of a former resident.

AIRMEN'S TELEPHONE

Special Device Needed on Account of the Noises up Aloft

A telephone apparatus has been invented which makes it possible for an aeroplane pilot to talk to his passenger. Owing to the roar of machinery and the rushing air, conversation between pilot and passenger is exceptionally difficult without a telephone apparatus of some sort. Two receivers, made especially for the purpose, are mounted in the ear laps of each cap or helmet in such position that they are held snugly and comfortably against the ears when these flaps are fastened under the chin. Constructed to fit properly with the rest of the apparatus is a special lightweight transmitter which is held in place over the mouth by a band of soft leather, the ends of which are attached to the ear flaps. The batteries and speech magnifying apparatus are contained in a box attached to the framework of the aeroplane. Communication is established by plugging the lead with the flexible cords with which each helmet is provided. The apparatus, it is expected, will also be used as part of the equipment for wireless communication with stations on the ground or with other aeroplanes. On one end of the box are two binding posts for connection with the receiving side of the wireless set.

NEW GOLD COINS BEING "SWEATED"

Dishonest Persons Taking Advantage of Design—Canadian Money Being Mutilated for Profit

Although only a short time has elapsed since the appearance of Canadian five and ten dollar gold coins, struck at the Ottawa branch of the Royal Mint, the possibility for "sweating" the new currency has already been discovered. Since the design on the coins is raised, it is necessary, in order that the coins may stack properly, to have raised milled edges and of this the "Sweater" takes advantage.

The process of "sweating" is a simple one. The practice is to put newly made gold coins to the value of three or four thousand dollars in a chamois bag and shake them together in order to abrase the rough edges. The metal being soft, a considerable amount of gold dust is the result.

The object is to reduce the coins from the mint weight to the least current weight.

It is currently reported that dishonest persons have already done considerable "sweating," and many of the new coins show the effects and will have to be returned to the mint and melted over.

On the ten dollar piece the Currency Act has fixed the standard mint weight at 258 grains and the least current weight 256.71, while the figures for the five dollar coin are in proportion.

It is a matter of common knowledge that the abrasion on English gold coins entails an enormous annual loss to the Treasury, and the edges on the Canadian gold coins have an even more pronounced flange than the English sovereign. It is not noticeable on the reverse side of the coins.

In the matter of fineness the Canadian gold differs from the English. The English sovereign is eleven twelfths fine, but the Currency Act provides that Canadian gold coins should be nine-tenths fine.

LONELY BACHELORS

Letters Asking for Wives From Homesteaders in the West

The most pressing problem of the west, according to J. Burke, Manitoba's immigration officer, is the need of domestic servants and wives. Mr. Burke estimates that even 5,000 would scarcely meet the demand of the three provinces.

Some of the letters received from western bachelors in search of companions and helpmates are interesting and frank. In the west, the male sex is predominate out of all proportion, and the idea of matrimony, fostered in the heart of some solitary bachelor, cooking his flapjacks and salt bacon on his homestead, soon mounts to something approaching mania.

One local monthly printed a letter from one of these unmated ones, in which the matrimonial bureau of that monthly was asked to send him anything, regardless of nationality and every other attribute, as long as "it" was feminine. Not all are in such straits; but there is a letter, earnest and detailed, on file in the provincial immigration bureau in which the qualifications desired in a wife are set forth painstakingly, and a plea made that such a one be sent with as little delay as possible. This is not the only letter of the kind, but it is typical of those received.

CHAPTER XIX—Miss Mortimer appears, explains the mystery and Lawrence is held a prisoner of war, and is again locked in the strong room.

CHAPTER XX—Lawrence escapes through plans arranged by The Lady and sees Grant attack Miss Mortimer.

CHAPTER XXI—Grant is knocked out by Lawrence, who comes to Miss Mortimer's relief, and then makes his escape.

CHAPTER XXII—Captain Grant's base villainy revealed.

CHAPTER XXIII—Lawrence returns to Valley Forge, where he learns more of Grant's perfidy.

CHAPTER XXIV—Washington forces Clinton to battle and Lawrence gets a trace of Eric Mortimer.

CHAPTER XXV—The battle of Monmouth.

CHAPTER XXVI—Gen. Washington again starts Maj. Lawrence on an important mission.

CHAPTER XXVII—Lawrence finds Miss Mortimer in soldier's uniform, acting as a scout under her brother's thumb. Explanations follow.

CHAPTER XXVIII—Lawrence delivers Washington's dispatches to Gen. Arnold, and is assigned to the special service of capturing Fagin, the cutthroat.

CHAPTER XXIX—Eric Mortimer is found a prisoner of Fagin's, and released by Maj. Lawrence.

CHAPTER XXX—Young Mortimer tells his story, and Lawrence's men surround the Mortimer home to capture Fagin, who has been discovered inside.

CHAPTER XXXI—Lawrence hears Grant and Fagin discuss details of plans to force Miss Mortimer to wed Grant.

CHAPTER XXXII—Fagin is shot and a bloody fight follows.

CHAPTER XXXIII—The militia comes to the assistance of Lawrence.

CHAPTER XXXIV—After the battle Miss Mortimer was found to be missing, and search for her started.

CHAPTER XXXV—Miss Mortimer is found in the secret chamber. She confesses her love for Lawrence.

"You are to marry this officer here to a young lady."

"What—what young lady?"

"Mortimer's daughter—Claire is the name, isn't it, Grant? Yes, Claire; you know her, I reckon."

I could hear the unfortunate man breathe in the silence, but Fagin's eyes threatened.

"Is—is she here?" he faltered helplessly. "Does she desire the—the ceremony?"

"That doesn't happen to be any of your business," broke in Fagin bluntly. "This is my affair, an' the fewer questions you ask the better. If we want some fun, what the Hell have you got to do with it, you snivelling spoilsport! I haven't asked either of them about it. I just decided it was time they got married. Stand up, man, and get to that door," he drew a derringer from his belt and flung it onto the table. "There's my authority—that, an' fifty hell-hounds outside wondering why I don't loot the house, an' be done. Do you want to be turned over to them? If you don't then speak up. Will you tie them, or not?"

Jenks' eyes wandered toward Jones, who stared blankly back at him, yellow fangs showing beneath his beard.

"Why—of course—yes," he faltered weakly. "I—suppose I must."

"Don't seem much chance to get out, does there, parson? Well, I reckon it won't hurt your conscience particularly. Bill! Where's Bill?"

"You sent him to guard the front door," explained Jones.

"That's right, I did. You'll do just as well. Go up stairs, an' bring the girl down. She's with the old man, an' Culberson is guarding the door. Better not say what she's wanted for. Just tell her Captain Grant wishes to speak to her a moment."

Jones straightened up, and pushed past the preacher, the stairs creaking under his weight as he went up over my head. Grant arose, and stood looking out the window into the glow of the sunshine, and Jenks dropped into the nearest chair, still staring across the table at Fagin. For the first time I seemed to entirely grasp the situation. I got to my feet, yet dare not move so much as a step, for Fagin was facing the hallway. It apparently would be better to wait until after the girl came down stairs, until those in the house were all together, before we struck. I wanted to know what she would say, how she would act, when she understood what was proposed. The time allowed me for decision was short, as it seemed scarcely a minute before I heard their footsteps above.

CHAPTER XXXII.

A Threatened Marriage.

Fagin heard them coming and took his boots from the table, and sat up straight in his chair; the preacher pushed his back until half concealed behind the door; Grant never looked around. Jones came into view first, and behind him walked Claire, her cheeks flushed, her head held high. At the door she paused, refusing to enter, her eyes calmly surveying the occupants.

"You sent for me, sir," she said coldly. "May I ask for what purpose?"

Even Fagin's cool insolence was unable to withstand unmoved her beauty and her calmness of demeanor. Apparently he had never met her before, for, with face redder than ever, he got to his feet, half bowing, and stammering slightly.

"My name is Fagin, Mistress," he said, striving to retain his accustomed roughness. "I reckon you have heard of me."

"I have," proudly, her eyes meeting his, "and, therefore, wonder what your purpose may be in ordering me here. I wish to return to my father who requires my services."

The guerilla laughed, now angered by her manner.

"Well, I thought I'd tell you who I was so you wouldn't try any high and mighty business," he said coarsely, and eying her fiercely. "That ain't the sort o' thing that goes with me, an' yer ain't the first one I've taken down a peg or two. However, I don't mean you no harm, only you'd better behave yourself. Yer know that man over there, don't yer?"

He indicated with a nod of the head, and Claire glanced in that direction, but without speaking.

"Well, can't you answer?"

"I recognize Captain Grant, if that is what you mean."

"I was speaking English, wasn't I? Yer ought to know him—yer engaged ter him, ain't yer?"

"Certainly not," indignantly.

Grant turned about, his face twitching.

"This is not my fault, Claire," he exclaimed swiftly. "Don't blame me for it. I am also a prisoner, and helpless."

She never looked at him, never answered, her entire attention concentrated on Fagin, who was grinning with enjoyment.

"That's sure right, young lady," he said grimly. "The Captain is only obeyin' orders ter save his own neck. There's no love lost atween us, let me tell yer. But we're not so blame merciless after all, an' I reckon, we've got about all thar is in the house worth cartin' away. Now we're goin' to have some fun, an' leave two happy hearts behind. Ain't that it, Jones? Clinton's licked; Washington has his hands full up north; an' this hull blame country is ours. Somewhere, Mistress, I've heard tell that you an' this Captain was pretty thick—how is it?"

Her eyes exhibited indignant surprise, but, after an instant's hesitation, her lips answered.

"I hardly know what you mean, sir. We were children together."

"An' engaged ter be married—eh?"

"There was an arrangement of that nature between our parents. But why should this interest you?"

He ignored the question, but his eyes hardened.

"I heard it this way. You were engaged until a few weeks ago. Then you met a damned Continental, a spy, an' imagined yer fell in love with him. Now do yer know what interest I've got? I'm with the Red-coats, an' if I can turn a trick for that side I'm a-goin' ter do it. You'll be blessin' me for it some day. Now, see here, girl, I'm a-goin' ter marry yer off before leavin' this house. I reckon yer ain't intendin' to make no fuss about it, are yer?"

She did not appear to comprehend, to realize the man was in earnest; she even smiled slightly.

"Is this some joke, sir, that I fail to grasp?" she asked. "Will you not explain?"

"Explain, hell!" and Fagin slapped his hat on his head, uttering a rough oath. "I spoke plain enough. Yer a-goin' ter marry Grant, here an' now, an' there's the parson, waitin' ter do the job."

She partly turned, and as she recognized Jenks, the color deserted her cheeks, and her hands grasped the side of the door for support.

"Marry Captain Grant! I?" she exclaimed, horrified. "No, never!"

"Oh, I guess yer will, my beauty. Good Lord, why not? He's not so bad; there's many a girl would jump at the chance. Your plantations join, an' he's a King's officer."

"Listen to me, sir," she broke in, now cool and determined. "I'll give you my answer. I have already given it to Captain Grant. I will not marry him—not even to save this house from destruction; not even to release my brother from your hands. We can suffer, if necessary, for we are of a fighting race, but I shall never yield to threats."

She swept past him, around the end of the table, and confronted Grant, who drew back a step, scowling.

"So this is your way, is it, to win a woman you cannot gain by fair means? No, there is no need of your answering; I understand the whole despicable scheme. You masquerading as a prisoner of this creature! You are his puppet. I've known it for months. I learned the truth from Eric, and from that moment I despised you. While I believed you an honorable soldier I was able to treat you with outward respect, but no longer. You threatened me with a forced marriage once before, and failed. Now you endeavor to succeed with the help of this outlaw. But you never shall! No, do not speak! do not hold out your hands to me! You are not a prisoner. These men are here at your instigation; you are concerned in their infamy. I would rather die than have you touch me!"

She turned her back upon him, her face white, her eyes blazing, but Fagin stood between her and the entrance, grinning savagely.

"Let me pass, sir; this is my father's house."

"Not while I am here, Mistress," he snarled, without moving. "The old man isn't ridin' after me with a squadron of cavalry today. This happens to be my turn to give orders, and yer to obey! Do yer hear—yer'll obey! Those weren't pretty words yer spoke to Grant, but they don't hurt me none. You damned little spitfire, I'd marry yer myself if I could, just to break yer spirit. As it is, I'll show yer yer master for once. So it's the spy yer went, is it?"

She stared at him without a word, a depth of hatred but no fear in her level eyes.

"Lost yer tongue, have yer? Well, we'll find it for yer fast enough. What's the fellow's name?"

"To whom do you refer?" she asked, her passage blocked.

"The Continental who's put Grant out of the running."

"I presume you mean Major Lawrence, although no one has authority to couple my name with his."

"Oh, indeed! I'll show yer authority in plenty, Mistress. Come, now I'm done discussing this matter. As long as yer father isn't able ter attend ter this affair I am a-goin' ter act in his place. We'll have a loyalist marriage, by God! an' have it now. Come, move, you coyote—Jones, hustle him along. Now, Captain, there's a good place ter stand, in between those windows. Mistress Claire—"

I was all ready, pistol in hand, burning with a determination to shoot Fagin down, yet her voice halted him.

"Wait!" she cried, standing erect and scornful. "I will not consent to this. I am going to leave this room."

"Oh, I reckon not," and he leered into her eyes. "Don't rouse me, or yer'll find out I'm a wolf ter bite. Yer get back there beside Grant, or I'll make yer."

"You will? You dare not!"

"Don't I, Mistress?" he cried savagely, "I'll show yer."

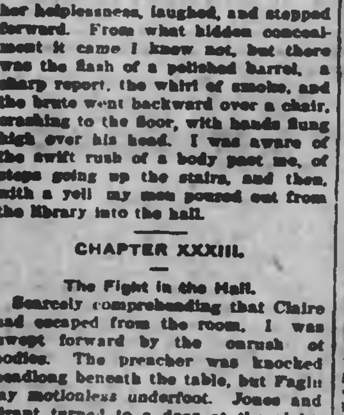
He reached forth one great hand, the fingers gripping her sleeve, but she wrenched away, the cloth tearing as she sprang back.

"Fagin, I know you, but I'm not afraid of you. I know you for a cruel, cold-blooded murderer, an outrager of women, a thief, and an outlaw. No, you cannot stop me now. You are a low-down cowardly cur, making war on women and children, sneaking around in the paths of armies, plundering and looting the helpless. I despise you and every man associated with you. Neither you, nor all your company, can make me marry Captain Grant. I will die first. No, don't move, and don't think you are dealing with a frightened girl. I am desperate enough, but I can act—"

"Hell! Jones, take that hell-cat by the arms!"

"Jones will do nothing of the kind—and you—stand back, Fagin; don't dare to lay a hand on me again!"

Her face was white, her lips set, her eyes blazing, but Fagin, assured of her helplessness, laughed, and stepped forward. From what hidden concealment it came I know not, but there was the flash of a polished barrel, a sharp report, the whirl of smoke, and the brute went backward over a chair, crashing to the floor, with hands flung high over his head. I was aware of the swift rush of a body past me, of steps going up the stairs, and then, with a yell my men poured out from the library into the hall.



A Sharp Report, a Whirl of Smoke and the Brute Went Backward Over a Chair, Crashing to the Floor.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

The Fight in the Hall.

Scarcely comprehending that Claire had escaped from the room, I was swept forward by the onrush of bodies. The preacher was knocked headlong beneath the table, but Fagin lay motionless underfoot. Jones and Grant turned to a door at the right, and I leaped after them. One of the two fired, and the ball struck my shoulder, the impact throwing me back against one of my men. An instant I felt sick and dizzy, yet realized I was not seriously hurt, and managed to stagger to my feet. The door was closed and locked, and, although my head reeled, I began to think clearly.

"The other way, lads!" I cried. "Quick, into the hall!"

We tumbled out through the narrow entrance, and I found myself next to Eric. But we were too late to head off the fugitives, or prevent their achieving their purpose. In through the rear door, confused as to what had occurred, yet shouting fiercely, poured Fagin's wolves, seeking trouble. They were a wild, rough-looking lot, ill-dressed, and dirty even in that dim light. For an instant, congested within the limits of the hallway, both sides paused, staring at each other in mutual surprise and hesitation. Then I heard Jones' bellow of command, and Grant's nasal voice profanely ordering them to come on. With us there remained no choice; we must fight it out where we were, regardless of numbers.

"Fire! you damned fools—fire!" roared Jones, and there was a crashing of guns, the dense smoke swirling between us. A Dragoon at my right went sprawling; another behind gave vent to a yell as he plunged head first down the basement stairs. There was the sound of splintering wood, of breaking glass. I felt the blood in my veins leap to the fever of it.

We were upon the fellows with a rush, firing in their very faces, and leaping madly at them. There was little room between the walls, barely space for a half-dozen to fight in, shoulder to shoulder, but those behind, eager to strike also, pressed up so recklessly that we hurled them back. To me it was all confusion, uproar, deadly fighting. I could think of nothing to right or left, only of the struggling devils in my front. Faces, forms, came and vanished in the swirl of smoke, brown gun-barrels whirled before me, flashes of fire burned my eyes, strange features, bearded, malignant, glared at me. I lunged straight at them, striking fiercely. Once I saw Grant, and aimed a blow at him. Then he was gone, swallowed in the ruck.

Our mad onrush swept them back, helpless, demoralized. I stumbled over bodies, slipped in pools of blood, yet kept my feet. Every muscle ached; I was cut and pounded, yet drove into the mass, shouting to those behind:

"Come on, lads! Come on! We're driving them!"

A yard, two yards, three—beyond the door where th[illegible] we won our way. Then they could [illegible] no further. Blocked, unable to retreat, wedged helplessly against the far end of the hall they turned like cornered rats. I could see nothing of Jones, but I heard him, raging like a fiend.

"Now, you curs, now!" he stormed. "You cowardly scum—perhaps you'll fight when you can't run! What are you afraid of? There's only a handful; you can chew 'em up, if you will! Push 'em back, there! Push 'em back!"

With a yell of rage, those crushed against the wall hurtled forward, driving the others; men were lifted and hurled at us; others gripped at our feet; by sheer force of numbers they swept us backward. It was hand to hand, neither side having time to reload their weapons. The smoke rose, permitting a view of the shambles. There was a tangle of arms, a jumble of faces. They were maddened beasts, desperate, revengeful. Hands clutched at us, gun butts were thrust into our faces, the crush too dense to permit of their being swung overhead. My Dragoons had their sabres out, and stood to it like men, the steel blades dripping as they tasted blood. But killing one only brought a new man to the front. One does not see so much as feel in such a jumble. Yet I knew we were worsted, outnumbered. They came at us like a battering ram. I saw the sergeant shot through the forehead; I saw Eric go down beneath a crushing stroke, and roll under my feet. I stepped on bodies, fighting for my own life as I never fought before. Somewhere I had gripped a gun out of dead fingers and swung it savagely, smashing the stock at the first blow, but retaining the twisted iron. The intensity of excitement seemed to clear my brain. I began to distinguish voices, to notice faces. I heard Grant yell safely in the rear; I heard Jones' roar, "To hell with 'em! To hell with 'em!" Out of the murk of struggling figures I made out his black beard, the gleam of yellow fangs, and leaped toward him, striking men down until I was able to swing at his head. He went over like a stricken ox under a butcher's ax, knocking aside two men as he fell. It gave me chance to spring out of the melee.

"To the stairs, men! The stairs!" I cried. "We can hold them there!"

I cannot describe now how we made it, but we did. I only know Tom and I held the rear, sweeping circles of death with our whirling gun-barrels, falling back step by step as we fought. At last I felt the bottom stairs with my foot, and heard a voice shout:

"Come up sir! We'll hold 'em now!"

Then I was above the heads of the mob, gripping the rail, and sobbing for breath. There followed a moment's wait, an instant of hesitancy. I began to see and feel once more. Below us the hall was jammed with men, so closely pressed together as to be almost helpless. Blood streamed from a cut in my forehead, nearly blinding me, but I wiped it away, and took one glance at their angry upturned faces, and gained a glimpse of my own men. There were but six of us, and one of these lay helpless propped against the wall. Tom and I stood alone, his face blackened by powder, his shirt ripped into rags; the other three were above, pistols in hand.

"Are they loaded?" I gasped.

"Yes, sir."

"Stand ready then, but look out for above; there was a guard up there—Tom."

He turned his face slightly.

"Move back a step or two more; we've got to hold them."

"All right, sir."

I felt weak from loss of blood, my head reeling, and had to hold to the rail. Below us, growling like wild beasts, but seemingly leaderless, the mob crushed forward to the foot of the stairs. Suddenly I saw Grant, and the sight of him gave me new life.

"You black-faced hound," I called down angrily. "You've kept yourself safe so far. Now come on."

He snarled some answer, what, I know not. There was an empty pistol in my belt, and I flung it at him with all the force of my arm. He dodged, the weapon striking the man behind. With a howl of rage the fellows leaped toward us, bearing Grant on the crest of the wave. The pistols of the Dragoons cracked; three fell, blocking the stairs with their bodies. We had room now in which to swing our iron bars, and we battered them like demons. I lost sight of Grant, the red drip of blood over my eyes making all before me a mist. I only knew enough to strike. Yet fight as we would there was no holding them. We were forced to give way. Guns began to spit fire. I saw the wounded Dragoon dragged down under the feet of the mob; hands gripped my legs, and I kicked at the faces in my effort to tear loose. Tom reeled against the wall, his arm shattered by a blow, and one of the men above came tumbling over me, shot dead. The fall of him cleared the stairs an instant; then the rail broke, and several toppled over with it. I stumbled back almost to the top, sweeping the hair and blood out of my eyes. What—what was the matter? They were running, those fellows down there—struggling, fighting among themselves to get away. Oaths, yells, cries of sudden fear, made a perfect babel. I could not understand, could not grasp the meaning of the sudden panic. Who were these men surging in through the front door, pouring out through the library? Then a voice roared out:

"Bedad, they're Fagin's hell-hounds, boys—ter hell wid 'em!"

Where had I heard the voice before? I sank down, too weak to stand, my head hanging over the edge of the stairs. Some hand drew me back, but I had no strength left. Only I could think—and the truth came to me. Camden militia! Camden militia! By all the gods, Farrell was there! It was the voice of the Irish minute man I hear the night we captured Delavan's raiders. Then I closed my eyes, and forgot.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

Searching for Claire.

I was unconscious, yet not for long. The first touch of water served to revive me, and I became aware that an arm supported my head, although everything was indistinct before my eyes.

"More water, Mike," said a voice close at hand. "Yes, that will do. Where is Farrell? Oh, Dan, this is Major Lawrence."

Every Weak Throat Quickly Strengthened and Bronchitis Cured

Grand Results Follow the Direct Breathing Remedy, Which Cures Without Drugging.

The country is fairly wild over the wonderful recovery that throat sufferers are making every day with Catarrhozone. From ocean to ocean come letters telling of rapid cures—and cures when the complaint was chronic and long standing. It's a brand new principle upon which Catarrhozone works—not a single dose of medicine to take—nothing to upset the stomach or spoil digestion.

You can breathe through the Catarrhozone Inhaler medicated air that is full of healing, soothing balsams, full of piney antiseptic essences that resemble the air of the pine woods in the Adirondacks. The piney vapor has a truly marvelous action on weak throats. It brings strength and health to the bronchitis, stops that hacking, irritating cough, prevents hoarseness and difficult breathing. You can't find anything for weak-throated people on earth more beneficial than Catarrhozone. It means heaven on earth to the man that has had bronchitis, catarrh or throat irritation. You will realize this the first time you use Catarrhozone, which is a scientific preparation specially designed for diseases of the nose, throat and bronchial tubes. Get the large size, it lasts two months, costs $1.00; medium size, 50c.; sample size, 25c. All storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Water Commissioners Stand Pat.

The Peterborough Water Commissioners are in receipt of a letter from H. D. Gamble, Toronto, solicitor for the Bishop Construction Co. suggesting without prejudice, a settlement of the suit against the Water Commissioners for $11.750 and costs. The Commissioners will not consider a settlement of the case for the sum mentioned.

A Heavy Penalty.

The new provincial legislation is now in force prohibiting the holders of tavern licenses from selling liquor in bottles to be removed from the premises. The legislation is very rigid. A license holder who knowingly permits liquor purchased on his premises to be taken away for consumption, or any person who takes such liquor away, is liable to a heavy penalty.

Two For Castle Nesbitt.

At yesterday's police court H. Innis pleaded to having been drunk in Victoria Park. $2 or 10 days. William Jones pleaded guilty to having been drunk, $2 or 10 days—10 days. Edward Maher, when charged as drunk, did not deny the soft impeachment. $2 or 10 days—10 days. Herbert Johnston was called but was not present. He would have completed a quartette of drunks.

Lindsay Man Insane.

A Lindsay man was jailed a few days as being insane. He became violent within the last few days and endeavored to smash anything breakable in and around the corridors of the jail, but his game was intercepted by Turnkey Ashmen, who promptly placed him in a cell where he could do no injury to his person or county property. The unfortunate man received an examination by the jail surgeon and Dr. McCulloch on Monday, May 26th, inst., and was remanded for one week.

Fenelon Falls Man Nervous

Lindsay Warder:—Mr. Thos. Flynn, of Fenelon, was in town Wednesday, and feels uneasy about his wife, whom he expected to arrive home this week. It appears that Mrs. Flynn left several weeks ago for Pincher Creek, Alberta, to attend her son, who had been kicked severely in the abdomen by a horse which he was attending.

The accident was attended by a critical operation in order to save the young man's life, and Mrs. Flynn remained with her son through the time of his convalescence.

She wrote home to the effect that her departure from Alberta would be on a certain day, and as sufficient time has elapsed to permit of her arrival home, her husband naturally feels perturbed over her non-arrival.

A Female Fan and Her Boys.

At the ball game yesterday, among others, was a young mother and her tin headed two boys. The lady referred to has the baseball bacteria. When her two little boys began to yell "Put it over, Peggy!" "Make him put it over the plate, Hilliard," etc. etc., this, for the moment staid matron sternly remarked, "You children should learn that it is bad form to call out like that at a ball game." "Well," replied the elder boy, about the size of a grasshopper suffering with elephantosis, "You yelled yourself, mother!" The matron replied, "I am a year or two older than you. What I tell you, I want done, not what I do followed." This is an absolutely true story.

WOMEN SING THE PRAISES OF DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

Saskatchewan Lady Adds Her Testimony to What Has Already Been Said of the Great Work Dodd's Kidney Pills are Doing.

Caesarville, Sask., May 30.—(Special).—The scarcity of female help in a new country subjects the women of the prairies to unusual strain, and careful observation has established the fact that this strain first makes itself felt in the kidneys. For this reason Dodd's Kidney Pills are making an enviable reputation from the Great Lakes to the foothills of the Rockies.

Everywhere you will find women singing the praises of the great Canished their pains and weariness, and brought them back to health. Among the many is Mrs. Edgar Cowen, an estimable lady of this place.

"I have found Dodd's Kidney Pills very beneficial," Mrs. Cowen states "If anything I can say will help any sufferer I am glad to add my testimonial to what has already been said."

The kidneys strain all the refuse material out of the blood. If they are out of order this refuse remains in the blood, and becomes poison. That's why sound kidneys mean pure blood and good health. Dodd's Kidney Pills make sound kidneys.

WHITE SLAVER IS CAPTURED

Jules Raoul Blanc Was About to Sail for France When Nabbed--Jumped His Bond Here in December

New Orleans, May 28.—Surprised in a stateroom on the French liner St. Laurent, on which he would have sailed in an hour for France, desperately resisting capture with a furious leap at Deputy United States Marshall Frank Patten, but instantly cowed as he looked down the muzzle of the plucky deputy marshal's pistol, Jules Raoul Blanc, alias Jules Blanc, one of the most notorious white slavers in America, was arrested early last Friday. Blanc jumped his bond of $2000 after being indicted here last December on a charge of white slavery. Federal authorities all over the country have been searching for him, under the direction of United States Marshal Victor Loisel.

Crestfallen at the trick fate played him, Blanc realizing that his attempt at disguise by having shaved off his moustache and wearing spectacles was a failure, made no further efforts to deny his identity and was led from the ship to the marshal's office in the customs house in custody of Marshal Loisel and Deputy Marshal Patten.

There he sat, sullen and dejected until the formalities of entering his arrest on the records were completed, after which he was taken to th parish prison.

The capture of Blanc is regarded by Federal authorities as the most important arrest made in New Orleans in years, and is the result of clever work on the part of United States Marshal Loisel. In the sensational culmination of the long chase, Deputy Marshal Frank Patten, played a part that showed rare pluck and skill. Deputy Marshals Kinler, Pecot and Galbreath and Chief Deputy Marshal Leache have also at different times assisted in the efforts to recapture Blanc, whose escape was keenly felt by Marshal Loisel, who declared that he would never let up on the case until he recaptured Blanc.

Blanc fled from New Orleans in January. He had been indicted with Charles Berger, alias David Brenner, and Bertha and Charlotte Ferrari, alias Blanc, on the charge of white slavery. Blanc's bondsman, E. P. Bernett, a real estate dealer, was left in the lurch. The bond was declared forfeited in the United States Court and Bernet has paid the government $1,500 of the $2,000 bond. No man was more delighted at the capture than Mr. Bernet, who said he had expended over $500 in the search for the white slaver.

Of the four accused, Charles Berger, alias Brenner, was the only one convicted. He was sentenced in January to three years in the Atlanta penitentiary by Judge Foster in the United States District Court. He and the others were charged with bringing a girl named Jennie Bruno from Chicago to New Orleans.

Bertha and Charlotte Ferrari jumped their bonds of $1,500 each at the same time that Blanc disappeared, just before the three were to be brought to trial. The two women were recaptured at San Antonio, Tex., while trying to escape into Mexico. They were acquitted, but are awaiting deportation by immigration authorities.

In a statement after his arrest Blanc declared that after the arrest of the women he went to Vera Cruz, where he took steamer for France. He says he returned to Vera Cruz and came back to New Orleans two weeks ago.

THE ST. LAWRENCE INVESTMENT & TRUST COMPANY.

was incorporated by act of the Quebec Legislature, 5 Ed. VII, Chap. 75, in 1906, having for its object the extending and absorption of the St. Lawrence Investment Society. This Society, formed in 1896, carried on a successful business on a small scale, paying regular annual dividends varying from 5 p.c. to 15 p.c. and the assets gave the shares of the Society a value of about $150 at its absorption. The Charter under which the new Company is organized is a valuable one, it being difficult to obtain a Charter of like character. The powers conferred by it are wide and give an opportunity for the transaction of a profitable business.

FUTURE OF THE COMPANY.

The new Company will do business on a much larger scale than the old Company, will operate largely in the ~~owning of~~ buying and selling of well selected real estate, in the development of tracts of land in the City and its suburbs by selling same as Factory Sites and building lots, and in the purchase of agreements of sale, a business very profitably engaged in, in Toronto, Winnipeg, Calgary, Vancouver and other Cities. The purchasing of agreements of sale has not, to any extent, been carried on in Montreal, and it is intended that this Company pay particular attention to this Branch, which shows even better opportunities of profit, with a larger margin of safety, than those of the West, inasmuch as the values of Real Estate in Montreal are more firmly based.

FIELD OF OPERATION

The operations of the Company will be confined chiefly to the City and District of Montreal and there is no city which offers the same advantages to Investors seeking safety with large returns. Montreal's commercial supremacy in the Dominion is universally known. The population in 1901 was 266,826, and in 1912 611,297. The assessed valuation of Real Estate in 1912 showed an increase of $125,000,000 over the previous year. Montreal is an Island, therefore its area is fixed. Real Estate values, though increasing, are still low, and leave room for great expansion. The City proper covers an area of 18 square miles, the smallest area of any city with the same population in either Canada or the United States.

MANAGEMENT

The Company have appointed Findlay & Howard, Limited, Managers. Mr. Findlay is recognized as one of the foremost judges of Real Estate in Montreal, and the Firm's success is shown in the results of the following companies managed by them, which in addition to placing substantial amounts to reserve have paid dividends as follows:—

Applemount Land Company, Limited,	Incorporated	1909	paid	55 p.c.
Birnam Realty Company, Limited,	"	1910	"	30 p.c.

rep Opening.

A man had been absent from home for some time, and during his absence had raised a luxuriant beard and mustache. Shortly after his return he paid a visit to his sister, who had a little daughter of whom he was especially fond.

The little girl made no effort to embrace him or offer him a kiss, but hung back, reluctantly.

"Why, Eleanor," said the mother, "why don't you give Uncle Ed a kiss?"

"Well, mother," returned the child, with the most perfect simplicity, "I don't see any place."—Harper's Bazar.

TO CONTRACTORS

Tenders will be received by the undersigned till June Eighteenth for the erection of a Methodist Church at Simcoe and Scott streets, Peterborough. Drawings and specifications may be seen at my office or at the offices of Burke, Horwood & White, Architects, 28 Toronto street, Toronto.

A LOAN MUST BE GOTTEN TO COMPLETE THE G. T. P.

Railway Will Borrow Ten Millions From Government at Four Per Cent, Guaranteed by System

Ottawa, May 31.—President Chamberlin and Mr. William Wainwright of the Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Railway System.
here to-day in connection with the application of the Grand Trunk Pacific for a loan of $10,000,000 from the Dominion Government.

The loan is to run for ten years, bearing 4 per cent. interest, and is to be guaranteed by the Grand Trunk Railway System.

Mr. Wainwright stated to-day that the G.T.P. could not be finished in 1911, unless this loan is obtained.

"There is no scarcity of labor," he said, "but in the present market conditions we cannot borrow this money except at ruinous rates."

Members of the Government decline to discuss the matter to-day, although it is rumored that the announcement of the proposed loan, which appeared in the Conservative party papers this morning, was inspired by the Government.

Private members on both sides of the house say they have not been consulted, but the general sentiment seems to be that no preference should be shown to one railway over another in the matter of financial help.

MONTREAL CUSTOMS BREAK ALL RECORDS

Nearly Two and a Half Million Dollars Collected in Duties During May.

Montreal, May 31.—The customs duties collected in the port here for the month of May broke every record for the harbor of Montreal.

It totalled $2,395,377.30 an increase of $251,111.16 over the same month last year. The previous high water mark was made in October, 1912, when the duties collected amounted to $2,349,008.99.

THE BULL MOOSE HAS WON HIS CELEBRATED LIBEL SUIT

Michigan Editor Who Charged Intoxication Withdraws Defence of Action

Marquette, Mich., May 31.—Newett withdrew his defence and confessed judgment in the Roosevelt libel suit.

Newett is editor of a paper at Ishpeming, Mich., and in the presidential campaign he had said therein that Roosevelt had been intoxicated, and that not frequently. Mr. Roosevelt declared on the witness stand, and brought others who stated that he rarely touched liquor, and then only white wines, chiefly Maderia, of which he drank moderately.

Marquette, Mich., May 31.—W. Emlen Roosevelt, first cousin of Theodore Roosevelt who is probably more familiar with the life of the former President than any other of the witnesses in the Roosevelt-Newett libel suit being tried here, testified to-day to the abstemiousness of the plaintiff.

Mr. Roosevelt was preceded on the stand by Joseph E. Bayless of Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., who identified the alleged libelous article in the Ishpeming Iron Ore as one he had read. This affirmation was practically all that was required of him, as it was introduced to show that the allegations of drunkenness against Colonel Roosevelt had general circulation.

The examination of Mr. Emlen Roosevelt was very brief.

"What has been your association with your cousin?" asked Attorney Pound, plaintiff's counsel.

"Very intimate. I have been with him for two weeks at a time. When we were boys we lived near each other. Later I was with him on hunting trips. I was with him both times when he was sworn in as President at Buffalo on the death of President McKinley. I made trips with him in the Mayflower, the Government boat placed at his service. I have been in a position to know every detail of his public and private life. My observation was that he is not a drinker."

The witness was excused without cross-examination.

William Loeb, Jr., collector of customs of the port of New York, and formerly private secretary for Roosevelt, was the next witness. He testified that the Colonel was "as temperate as any many I ever saw."

STRONG DIRECTORATE FOR STEEL PRODUCTS COMPANY

Board of Newly-Formed Amalgamation is now Complete and Names of Prominent Men in Steel Circles Appear Thereon. Members of Firm of Richardson & Co. also on Board

Montreal, May 30.—The list of directors of the Steel Products of Canada, Limited, the announcement of the formation of which was made a few days ago by Richardson & Co., stockbrokers of Montreal, is now complete. Mr. Wallace W. Jones, the President of the D. F. Jones Mfg. Co., Ltd., is the President, while Mr. Walter T. Sampson, Managing Director of the Gananoque Spring & Axle Co., Ltd., and a Director of the Ontario Wheel Co., Ltd is the Vice-President and General Manager. The remainder of the list is as follows: W. M. Byers, Director Gananoque Spring & Axle Co., Limited; D. Ford Jones, Managing Director of D. F. Jones Mfg. Co., Ltd.; W. E. Brough, of Richardson & Co., Montreal; Frank P. Jones, Director Canadian Bank of Commerce, Director of Montreal Trust Co., Managing Director Canada Cement. Co.; Fred Bacon, of Bacon Bros., Montreal; Newbold C Jones, Physician, Toronto; Norman F Nash, of Richardson & Co., Montreal.

From this it may be seen that the practical end of the business, as well as the financial end, will be well looked after. No one better qualified than Mr. Sampson could be obtained for the general managership. Mr. Sampson has been for many years the Manager of the Gananoque Spring & Axle Co., and his long association with the Jones Co., and the Chatham concern, the latter of which was a subsidiary of the Spring & Axle Co., renders him particularly well qualified to direct the Steel Products Co., and the future of the consolidation is looked upon as being exceedingly bright.

The policy of the management of the original organization since their inception will be continued. Their aim in business has been to turn out the highest quality of wares at the most reasonable prices. Owing to the growth of the business in all departments, it is expected that for the year ending the last of June the company will be able to show the largest earnings in the history of the organizations, being nearly $30,000 in excess of the previous year. At the same time, too, it is interesting to note that the management expects to be able to sell goods at lower prices than has ever been the case in the past.

Up to the present no organization has been built up for selling the products of the various companies, the goods practically selling themselves on their merits. With the taking over of the various plants by the Steel Products Ltd., a selling department will be organized and the various articles of manufacture put in all markets.

The principal factories of the new amalgamation are located at Gananoque and Chatham. In both places labor conditions are most favorable for the operation of works of the kind. Water power is cheap and abundant, water transportation is at hand, natural gas may be had at figures which mean next to nothing, whilst tax exemption or low taxation rates reduce the overhead charges to no inconsiderable extent. Labor conditions are also good and not a cloud in the sky is to be seen for the future of the new merger.

M. P's. WILL WORK FOR SAME MONEY

Can't Raise Their Own Pay Without Also Giving the Senators the Same Boost.

Ottawa, May 31.—At the conclusion of to-day's cabinet sitting the Prime Minister stated that the Government had no announcement respecting the Grand Trunk Pacific loan, or the application for relief by the depositors of the Farmers' Bank.

The general impression here is that the sessional indemnity will not be increased, because the members of the house cannot raise their own pay very well without raising the pay of the senators. It would be somewhat incongruous for the Government to increase the senatorial salaries immediately after the killing of the naval bill.

Row in House Over Charges

Ottawa is ringing with the charge brought against the ex-Postmaster-General in the House of Commons last week. No one can accuse the Conservatives of not making good their platform charges of scandal. Scarcely a day elapses without a revelation. It seems that in May, 1911, the Hon. R. Lemieux made a contract, signed by his deputy-minister, with an automatic stamp-vending machine company for the long period of twenty years, of which the Department not only gives a bonus or commission of 2 per cent. to the company, but grants them all the paramount privileges and powers of the Crown and Government as well. No company can place the boxes where they like in public or private property. They have the advantage of the Royal Arms. The advertising alone is worth hundreds of thousands of dollars.

FRIEDMAN'S TURTLE SERUM FAILS WITH MONTREAL WOMAN

Miss Yvonne Cloutier Slowly Grew Worse After Being Treated by German Physician

Montreal, May 31.—Growing steadily worse since receiving an injection of Dr. Friedmann's turtle tuberculosis "cure," Miss Yvonne Cloutier died last night. Miss Cloutier is the second Friedmann patient to die here within the week.

The parents of the girl, who believed before Dr. Friedmann came to the city that their daughter was slowly gaining ground against the disease, say that only one of her lungs were affected up to the time she was treated with the turtle serum.

The patient herself believed that only one of her lungs was affected until after the treatment, and when she began to grow worse, she consulted Dr. Grenier, supervisor of the Bruchesi Institute for consumptives, who, after examining her, said that both organs was affected.

Dr. Friedmann decided not to give Miss Cloutier a second treatment, Dr. Grenier says. The doctor also contends that the German physician must now prove that his non-virulent bacteria do not become virulent after a while, as the cases of the two patients who have died here seem to indicate.

SORTER ARRESTED FOR STEALING MAIL

Nineteen Year Old Student Charged With Tampering With Letters.

Montreal, May 31.—Sules Lamoureux, 19 years of age, a student at Laval University here, was arrested in the general post office this morning, charged with tampering with the mails. Lamoureux who was taken into custody by Detectives Lajoie and McCann, works as a sorter in the office during his spare time.

The T. Eaton Co., Ltd., has been complaining that some of its letters were going astray and a watch was set. A marked letter was sent through the mail and its contents were found later on the post office stairs.

Lamoureux denied vigorously that he was guilty of the crime when he was arrested.

FOUR THOUSAND MEN STRIKE IN TORONTO BUILDING TRADE

Brotherhood Carpenters by Eleven to One Vote Late Saturday Afternoon to Join Amalgamated

ON STRIKE.

Carpenters	3000
Hydro-Electricians	250
Cabinetmakers, mill hands	400
Garment Works	200
Structural Iron Workers	100
Glass Workers	20
Total	3970

Toronto, May 31.—Four thousand men on strike is the alarming situation which will face Toronto Monday morning. Saturday noon over one thousand members of the Amalgamated Carpenters' Union laid down their tools and Monday morning as many members of the Brotherhood of Carpenters will join in the effort to obtain an increase in wages.

After a somewhat stormy meeting Saturday noon, when the members of the Brotherhood of Carpenters met in the Labor Temple, a vote was taken and it was decided by 11 to 1 to follow the lead of the Amalgamated Carpenters.

When the cabinetmakers and mill hands and structural iron workers also strike for increases in wages the labor situation will have taken a very grave aspect, especially affecting the building trade of the city.

Nor is this movement going to stop apparently. It was stated by an official of the Painters', Paperhangers' and Decorators Union that their men had decided that they would leave the question of striking to the district council of their union and a meeting will be held some time throughout the week, when they will go into the matter. The general feeling among the painters is that of deep dissatisfaction and no doubt if their demands are not acceded to they will take definite action.

BILL PINCHED IN NIGHTIE, WAS DISCHARGED

At Saturday's police court, Mr. Bailey, generally known throughout the city, as "Bill," was charged with assaulting a little boy, named E. D. Smith. Mr. Bailey said the boys bombarded his house with stones and broke three windows. He gave the boy Smith three spanks with his open hand on the place made by nature for spanking. The boy admitted being with others who were throwing stones. Mr. Bailey said the boys broke three panes of glass in one day. The charge was dismissed. It seems that when officer Meagher was serving the summons, Bill got ugly. He was pinched attired in his nightie and brought part of the way to the station, but allowed to return. The boy's mother, when Bill was discharged, said, "If he ever lays a hand on my boy again, I'll break every window in his house, if I get six months."

Capt. Bartlett is of the opinion that the name Karluk is unsuitable for the craft carrying an expedition of this calibre and makes the suggestion that it be renamed the Canadian Premier. The vessel is rapidly being made ship-shape for the journey. Cabin quarters have been completely remodelled to comfortably accommodate 26 men forming the expedition party.

PRESBYTERIAN CONGRESS BEGINS PRAYER SWAYS DELEGATES

General Mass Meeting of Presbyterians to Run Parallel With Annual Parliament of Church

Toronto, May 31.—The second item on the great congress program has been called. It is the psalms of thanksgiving, the prayer for power, and the official benediction. Cooke's church has the honor of being selected for the memorable service. The text over its historic pulpit had its silent and significant message to the gathering peoples, who were here to worship together—"I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto myself."

The first of this unique program will never be fully reported. Like small tributaries of mighty rivers, the branch lines of railway have collected the dispersed of Presbyterian Israel. These became the tribes of east and west, as the numbers thickened. And who can find anything better than to travel along with a band of ministers, their wives and elders? That is number one of this interesting series of events.

Flood of Delegates.

It is still an hour before the opening, and the flood of delegates is pouring through the doors. Six stalwarts, all men from Glengarry, fill a front seat. They are all laymen. Rev. H. McKellar, Calgary, who preached the cross among the Northwest Indians when the west was a foreign land, shows no sign of age. Rev. A. McWilliam and wife Calgary; Dr. Murdoch McKenzie, China, and Rev. R. G. McBeth of Paris, are the first of the four leaders to appear. About half are ladies, which proves that the celibacy of the clergy is a great way off. Dr. Scott, editor of the Record, was the first of the scribes. Mr. Hope Ross of the Manitoba Free Press has also come, and is looking at the prospects for news.

The greeting and handshaking are now in full swing, and a sea of faces stretch out to the doors. But it is close to the appointed hour, which brings ex-Moderator R. P. McKay and Moderator D. G. McQueen to the platform. They are both serious, as all the leaders must be these days. They are men of stress and strain, and have the marks of their toil upon their faces.

FORTUNE TELLERS. VICE AGENTS, SAYS WHITMAN

Declares Girls Were Made Easy Victims of White Slavers.

New York, May 31.—District Attorney Whitman is trying to find five fortune-tellers who formerly operated in New York, but who left town two months ago. Two of these are reported to be in Boston and the other three in Providence.

The search for the fortune-tellers is a part of the district attorney's efforts to run down reports of a form of police graft which is said to have flourished in this city for some time in connection with fortune-telling.

According to the information obtained by the prosecutor the police have demanded and received 50 per cent of the total profits of a number of these soothsayers whose admitted business is in violation of the law and who, in addition to the telling of fortunes, are said to have worked in conjunction with white slavers in obtaining young women for immoral purposes.

The investigation into this branch of the fortune-telling business and its accompanying police graft was caused by a middle-aged widow who appealed to the district attorney.

To Help Small Breeders

Canadian National Exhibition Making Special Efforts to Encourage the Small Investor

The prize list of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, August 23 to Sept. 8th, is being distributed and it shows that the Management have given special attention to the Agricultural Department generally, and to the encouragement of the smaller exhibitor in particular.

In cattle, more money is given to both the beef and dairy classes, and the list has been extended so that in some classes, as many as eight prizes are given. Thus the small breeder with a good animal, is practically sure of recouping, at least a part of the expense of shipping to Toronto.

More money is also given to Horticulture, Floriculture and Poultry. The entire list totals $55,000, and as no prizes are given for Manufactures, every dollar of this goes to the products of the home, the school, the farm, and the garden.

The special attractions this year are featured by three high-class bands—the Irish Guards, and one other from England, and Conway's band from Chicago, while of the spectacle, "The Burning of Rome," it is enough to say that it will be staged by England, who has put on all the big spectacles of recent years in Britain.

JOHN D's WEALTH IS "STOLEN GOODS"

Washington, May 30.—Efforts in Congress to incorporate the $100,000,000 Rockefeller Foundation were scored by Senator Works, who declared them a "proposal to 'farm out' to John D. Rockefeller and his associates the right and power to educate the people of the country with money accumulated by criminal means." Senator Works' statement was made in connection with a speech he delivered in the Senate on the trusts and combinations, the existence of which he blamed to the high protective tariff policy.

Scores John D.'s Methods.

"We do not want our children to be taught the ways nor the methods of John D. Rockefeller or his kind, nor to be generous with ill-gotten gains, nor to touch, handle or profit by gold that should blister the fingers of the man who has accumulated it by extortion, oppression and crime, and is now attempting to rid himself of it by giving it away; nor to become the receivders of stolen goods in the name and under the guise of charity."

The continued existence of trusts and monopolies, the Senator said, was due to the inadequacy of the Sherman anti-trust law, which he declared should be so amended that specific restraints of trade shall be unlawful, with suitable punishment for those who violate the law. While he was not in favor of high protective tariff which fostered capitalistic combination, he said he would be in favor of an effort to protect the wage earner in his warnings and that he believed it would be 'and excellent thing to harmonize the tariff and wages.'

HAMILTON WELL POUNDED PETES CAPTURE THE THIRD

About 1500 people gathered at Riverside Park on Saturday afternoon, to witness the third defeat of the series between the Petes and Hamilton in the Canadian League fixture. The Petes were in excellent form and started in from the very first to trim the visitors, and trim them good. And they succeeded, as the score indicates. Some fast playing was done by Sargent and the boys generally were full of pepper.

Smith, the first pitcher for the visitors was touched freely for hits and Manager Lee replaced him with Barlow, but the boys didn't seem to notice any difference, and just hammered away at the old pill till they piled up a score of 14 runs to nil, until near the end of the game, the visitors tallied four runs through errors on the part of the Petes.

NUGENT'S SARSAPARILLA—PRICE FOR large bottle, 100 full doses, 25c. and well worth it, too. It's better to take no medicine at all than to depend upon cheap concoctions that are compounded to sell at low price and a big profit just because there is a large demand for certain remedies at certain seasons of the year. There are so-called Sarsaparillas offered to us to sell to our customers at 75c a bottle that would bring us a larger profit than Nugent's Sarsaparilla sold at 25c. Nugent's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, arouses the torpid liver, drives out all impurities, cleanses and tones up the system, and helps Nature throw off the dullness that comes from indoor life of winter. It arouses energy, brightens the eye, clears the brain, gives lightness to the movements. Nugent's Sarsaparilla is not the only thing you will find in this drug store. We make a specialty of Nugent's Remedies. Nugent Drug Co., [illegible] George St., directly opposite Commoner's store.

WHO WILL MARRY PRINCE OF WALES?

Only a Limited Number of Eligible Princesses From Which a Choice Can be Made

It is the habit of Royalty to mate early, and that is why the match-makers are already discussing the matrimonial possibilities for the Prince of Wales. That Edward is the most desirable "catch" in the world, even apart from his heirship to the British throne, is a point that has been brought out in the discussion, but his rank removes him from all calculations respecting ladies not of Royal blood. There have been cases of Royal British princesses being married to other than princes, as, for example, the Marquis of Lorne and the Duke of Fife, but while such matches were extremely popular, it is not likely that the heir to the British throne would be permitted to wed one of his fair countrywomen, since he will be expected to marry for reasons of State rather than for reasons of sentiment. This is not to intimate that Royal marriages are not the result of affection, for very often they are true romances, but the love match is merely incidental, and while it is not likely that a Royal pair would be thrust into a union absolutely hateful to them, neither would they be permitted to let their fancy rove where it pleased from cottage to castle.

The Czar's Daughter

There are two princesses whose names naturally occur as filling all the conditions necessary for a marriage with the heir to the British throne. One is the Grand Duchess Olga of Russia, the eldest daughter of the Czar; the other is the Princess Victoria Louise of Germany, the only daughter of the Kaiser. The Princess Olga is about the same age as the Prince of Wales, and is said to be a very pretty girl, though not such a beauty as her mother. It is thought that a match between this pair would be very gratifying to both the Dowager Empress of Russia and the Queen-Mother Alexandra. From a political point of view it is believed that the match would be approved by the present Government, but opposed by the Unionists, who have no great fancy for further Russian alliances. The King and Queen, too, it is hinted by those who are supposed to know, would not be favorably inclined, though it is not expected that they would actually oppose anything decided on by the Government. It is only natural, however, that in the matter of this sort the wishes of King George and Queen Mary would have especial weight.

The Kaiser's Only Daughter

As regards the German princess, it is said that as she has been brought up with a family of brothers, who are all supposed to be anti-English, the young people would not likely be congenial. Moreover, there are political objections to still further Germanizing the British Crown. That such a union would do much to wipe out the existing relations between the two countries, which are far from being as cordial as might be desired, is claimed by those approving this match. It is doubtful, however, if these hopes would be realized by a marriage alone, for it is to be borne in mind that the situation with regard to Germany and Britain has developed with the grandson of Queen Victoria, the nephew of King Edward, and the cousin of King George, on the German throne, and of the Kaiser's deep affection for his grandmother, there never has been any question.

A Roumanian Princess

Another charming princess against whom there could be no political objections is the Princess Elizabeth of Roumania. This princess is the daughter of the Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Roumania and granddaughter of the Duke of Edinburgh, who later became Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha. She has been brought up in English fashion, and her mother, "Carmen Sylva," is undoubtedly one of the most popular of the Royalties that visit England, which is the land of her birth. A union between the Roumanian and the British crowns could hardly be of great advantage from a political point of view, but, on the other hand, it would be free from the objections that might be urged against a match with either the Russian or the German princess. Princess Maud of Fife, the youngest daughter of the Princess Royal, is a lovely girl, and is mentioned among the eligibles, though she is the first cousin to the Prince of Wales.

Must be a Protestant

The British Constitution debars the Prince of Wales from marrying a Roman Catholic, although it does not prevent English princesses from taking Roman Catholic husbands, as was the case with the Princess Ena, who became the Queen of Spain, and abandoned her religion. In the case of the bride of the Prince of Wales it would not be enough for her to change her religion. She must have been born and brought up a Protestant, though it does not matter what Protestant sect or denomination she has been a member of.

HIS IDEAL WIFE

Japanese Author's Six Conditions Which Bride Had to Fulfil

Mr. Ichiba, a well-known Japanese author, celebrated, under remarkable conditions, his second marriage. His first wife died less than a year ago, and the mourning spouse immediately set about finding another partner.

He commissioned all his friends to keep their eyes open for him, and gave a standing order to the various matrimonial agencies in Tokio to report immediately any likely candidate for the honors of being the second Mrs Ichiba. He laid down six primary conditions which the successful candidate would have to fulfil. They were:—

The lady must have passed through all the various conditions of life and the various phases of society, from A to Z, as only by ripe experience can perfection be attained.

Except the clothes she could stand up in she should have no worldly possessions whatsoever.

She must be severed from her family entirely.

She must contract to keep the kitchen and bathroom absolutely spick and span and ready for instant use.

Her style of hairdressing must be strictly Japanese—no foreign frills, pads or switches to be permitted.

She must stand five feet high and her limbs and body be "of a proper plumpness"—as to face, features, and other points, these were not to matter.

As might be expected, Mr. Ichiba had considerable difficulty in finding his Juliet, and looked over forty-seven candidates before being satisfied with a young lady of twenty-eight. The wedding was private in every sense of the word—only the two contracting parties being present. Over two cups of sake they performed their own ceremony and then announced their marriage to their friends.

OUR POPULATION

An Analysis of the Figures on the Census Returns

The rural population of Canada in 1911 was 3,924,394, and the urban population 3,280,444. In 1901 the rural population was 3,349,516, and the urban population 2,021,799. The increase of rural population in the ten years is therefore 574,878, and of the urban 1,258,546, which is 17.16 per cent. for the former and 62.25 per cent for the latter.

In Alberta the increase of rural population in the ten years was 30[illegible]327, and of urban 121,314. In British Columbia the increase of rural population was 100,318, and of urban 1[illegible]3,505, and in Manitoba the rural increase was 70,511, and the urban 129,892. New Brunswick lost 1,49[illegible] rural and gained 22,262 urban, while Nova Scotia lost 23,[illegible]61 rural, and gained 56,746 urban.

Ontario's Figures

Ontario lost 52,184 rural and gained 392,511 urban. Prince Edward Island gained 16 urban, but lost 9,546 rural. Quebec shows gains of both rural and urban population, being 39,951 for the former and 313,162 for the latter. Saskatchewan also shows gains in both classes, being 287,338 for the former and 113,515 for the latter. In Yukon the rural loss was 12,430 and the urban loss 5,277. In the Northwest Territories, whose population is wholly rural, the loss was 2,933.

Another interesting feature is the tabulation of people by conjugal status. There were 1,331,564 married men and only 1,251,182 married women, probably accounted for by the fact that the surplus of husbands had left their wives at home in Europe until they were able to make good in Canada.

Two Million Bachelors

That there is ample opportunity for cupid to get busy is proven by the fact that there were 2,369,160 bachelors, and 1,941,354 spinsters in Canada when the census was taken. There were 89,121 widowers and 179,508 widows.

The growth of the divorce habit is shown by the fact that there were 339 divorced men in Canada in 1911, as against 337 in 1901, whilst the number of divorced women grew from 334 in 1901 to 691 in 1911.

The largest gain during the last forty years was made by Montreal, being 356,[illegible]80; the second largest by Toronto, being 317,538; the third largest by Winnipeg, being 135,794. Vancouver's growth was 100,401 in less than thirty years.

Males totaled 3,821,106, and females 3,383,77[illegible].

The number of occupied dwellings in the sub-districts of the Dominion in 1911 was 1,413,913, and the number of families 1,485,353, compared with 1,028,892 dwellings and 1,070,747 families in 1901.

CHEAPER MONEY

Hon. W. T. White, Canadian Minister of Finance, is authority for the statement that the next few months will see the return of less stringent financial conditions. Mr. White is in a position to know and his announcement will be heralded with rejoicing by the dozens of Canadian communities that are now experiencing much trouble in marketing bond issues at reasonable rates of interest.

While there have been other financial stringencies of more marked severity than the present one it is doubtful if any has exerted equal pressure for so protracted a period over the markets of the entire world. Every borrowing community has felt the pinch of what, though commonly designated as a stringency, was little more than a tightening of purse strings. There was plenty of money available but the uncertainty of European stability in the face of the Balkan war caused tremors to circulate up and down the spine of the great magnates. The funds stayed in the strong boxes to be pried open only by exceptionally high rates of interest, and as we had to have the money we had to pay the piper.

With the return of normal conditions there is every likelihood that four per cent bonds will soon find a market at fair quotations. Canada, in unison with every other country, is hoping that the time for a change is not far distant.

JAPAN'S CLAIM FOR EQUALITY.

Japan is taking the situation in California very seriously and is basing her protest against the land act passed by the legislature on the ground that the discrimination it is intended to ensure touches her national honor. As amended, after Mr. Bryan had explained the attitude of the federal executive, its phraseology closely follows that of the existing treaty between the United States and Japan which is interpreted so that Japanese may own houses or places of industry but not land and it is against landowning that the measure is directed. Whether or not this interpretation is correct, and it can be tested in the federal courts, the Japanese are evidently convinced that it separates them from nations of European stock in that alien immigrants into California who are eligible for American citizenship, may freely acquire and cultivate land holdings. The Japanese see in this question the whole issue of the status of Japan among civilized nations. They claim equality of treatment with white races and to be exempt from anti-Asiatic legislation because they are not of Mongolian origin and have adopted western civilization.

California is not alone in its opposition to Asiatic immigration. All the Pacific states are antagonistic to it and the sentiment is just as pronounced in British Columbia, in Australia, and in New Zealand. The latter Dominions have protected themselves by imposing an arbitrary educational test while Canada has an understanding that the flow will be checked by the government of Japan itself. In all cases the antipathy is avowed to be founded on impolicy of permitting the growth of large populations alien in spirit and tradition to Anglo-Keltic civilization. But the real reason is fear that the lower standard of living will drive the home worker to the wall. The Chinese and Japanese are admittedly thrifty and industrious. They do not meddle in politics and rarely become burdens on the community. Having made their pile they fold their tents like the Arab and as silently steal away to their native land, there to spend the remainder of their days. As agriculturists the Japanese are unsurpassed, toiling early and late, and producing more from a given acre than their white competitors. The Japanese Government is standing on its dignity and pressing its demand for equality, has raised an issue fraught with serious possibilities of dangerous controversy.

Sergeant-Major Under General French

Veteran of Boer War Who Lost Health on the Veldt Tells Experience.

Good Advice for All who Have Indigestion or Stomach Disorders

In his home at Waldegrove, N. S., no one is better known than Sergt.-Major Cross, late of the 4th Queen's Own Hussars. Speaking of the ill-effects of a campaign upon a man's constitution, the Sergt.-Major writes "I served under General French during the late Boer war, in the capacity of Sergt.-Major. It was perhaps owing to a continued diet of bully beef, hard tack, and bad water, but at any rate my stomach entirely gave out. I was in such a state that I could eat nothing without the greatest suffering. The army doctors did not help me much, and since leaving the service I have been very miserable. Some few months ago a friend told me he had been a great sufferer from indigestion until he tried Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they cured him. I confess it was without much faith I bought a box, but the first dose made me feel better than I had been for a long time. Dr. Hamilton's Pills completely cured, and now I can eat everything and anything. I have recommended them to others and in every case the result has been similar to mine."

Quick, sure results attend the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They cure disorders of the stomach, correct indigestion, make you feel uplifted and strengthened. To renew or maintain health, Dr. Hamilton's Pills always prove a good prescription. 25c. per box, five boxes for $1.00, all dealers, or the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Ont.

WHO OWNS LOCAL MOVIES

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I am pleased to see that your newspaper is demanding that the moving picture houses be required to live up to the law, for the protection of, especially, women and children, who frequent them. Such places should have every safeguard possible against the too common danger of fire. For my information, and that of others, could you kindly publish the names of the actual owners of the three "movies" of Peterborough.

"J. M. W."

Reply—In this modern age it is hard to say who owns anything. We understand that Mr. H. Clayton is owner of the Red Mill and the Royal Theatre, formerly owned by Mr. M. Pappas. We note that R. G. Dun's mercantile agency report, of May 15th, states that Hon. J. R. Stratton, holds a mortgage against Mr. Pappas for $10,000. The Princess Theatre was recently placed in the name of Mr. Roland Glover, who is Mr. Stratton's manager in the Examiner.—Ed.

MARRIAGE TOO EASY

Detroit Judge up in Arms Against Gretna Green Methods

Judge Codd of Detroit who is determined to put a stop to the easy manner in which Windsor marriages are dissolved made the announcement from the Bench that hereafter the decree in such cases will be held up thirty days for investigation of the marriage, and, unless it is found the couple cannot live together again, the decree will not be granted.

The Judge was moved to his declaration against the "Windsor marriage bureau" because of the large number of complaints filed in the Detroit Divorce Court, the principals in which declared they had been wedded in Windsor and then parted after a few weeks.

AN OLD ROCKING CHAIR

Once Used by Sir Isaac Brock, Now Over Two Centuries Old.

E. J. Corwin, of Niagara Falls, Ont., has in his possession an old-time rocking chair which was presented to him by an old lady friend. She claimed at the time ofpresentation that the at the time of presentation that the General Sir Isaac Brock had rocked in it. Mr. Corwin prizes the chair very highly as a relic. On making some repairs and in removing the varnish he discovered the maker's stamp, plainly engraved on the inside of one of the rockers, and the date 1712, so this old chair has passed its two hundredth anniversary.

Grinding Pulp-Wood

A study made of methods of making the paper for newspapers or magazines by grinding up wood on a grindstone, in the government laboratory at Madison, Wis., showed that a dull stone will make the best paper. The grindstone grinds the wood into wood pulp. If it is rotating in thick pulp, the pulp, water, and stone are kept hot; if it is revolving in water, the wood is ground in the cold. Before grinding, the log is always kept in steam for a few hours.

Green wood gives a paper of a much better color than seasoned wood, and the upper is stronger if the wood is steamed before it is ground than when it is ground in the natural state.

RETURNING TO THE LAND

Canadian Born Artisans Find Little Attraction in Eastern States Now

"The tide is turned and the pressure is backwards," writes Dr. Andrew Macphail in the University Magazine. "The word has gone forth that the Eastern States are finished for the wage earners. Men who went there thirty years ago as artisans find themselves with scant savings and their sons growing up as factory hands. In their extremity they call to mind the pleasant hillsides of Quebec and the fertile valleys of the Maritime Provinces from which they came, where their fathers led the lives of freemen and not the mere existence of slaves. The problem will solve itself in terms of freedom, to which eventually all men come who are born free. In the return to the land it is the first person who counts. Others follow, and more because they must. It will attach itself to the soil again to love the land of its birth. One part of the country is as good as any other to one who was born there. A tree is more easily transplanted than a man, and once rooted it should not be disturbed. City dwellers are much like driftwood which yet has some capacity for regeneration. When they come to a full comprehension of the futility of the machines and the factory, they will learn to apply their labor to the thing itself and not to the making of machines which yet leave the thing undone. Ancient wars had their origin in the desire to bring a people into bondage, or in the resolve of a people to be free. Modern wars have their origin in the desire to exploit a people by planting industries amongst them upon the fictitious plea of economic necessity. To-day the war is between those, on the one hand, and those who produce more than they consume. Rising prices are a sign of the conflict. There can be but one ending to it."

BLACK DIAMONDS VERY VALUABLE

Costly Stone Used in Drills Composed of Same Material as the Flashing Gems of Commerce

The black [illegible]

than the ordinary white diamond, are not used for ornamental purposes, as they have no more attractive appearance than an ordinary bit of stone or fragment of coal, being dark in color and opaque without crystalline form. They are irregular in form and are found in sizes ranging from [illegible] to 500 karats.

The origin of the black diamond is a subject on which science remains silent. They are found in but one spot on the earth—an area of not over 225 miles square, in Brazil. Here they are recovered from the gravel and washings of the river beds.

No fine specimens of the gem diamond have ever been found in the black diamond fields. Yet—and this is the point over which science has vainly puzzled—both black and white or gem diamonds are simply pure carbon, being of practically identical composition.

The gem diamond is translucent and crystalline in form, while the other is not; the black diamond is harder, tougher, and not so brittle, and there the difference ends.

Practically the entire output of black diamonds is used for tipping diamond drills, the precious bits of carbon being set in pieces of soft steel or iron. These diamond-pointed drills will cut through any substance known, and have eaten their way through the hardest known rock down to a depth of 6,000 feet. Ordinary gem diamonds would be crushed under the enormous pressure it is necessary to put upon the drills when the bore has gone to a great depth.

No substance is known which could be used in place of the black diamond for drill points used in boring for mineral deposits, and should the supply become exhausted there would be no more deep borings, as there was none before the black diamond was discovered.

The diamond drill is a decidedly expensive tool, as it is usual to place eight stones in each bit or drill point, and fair-sized stones of three or four karats each are more satisfactory and economical in the long run than small ones. As the carbon is worth about $85 per karat, a single drill armed with stones of medium size would cost in the neighborhood of $2,500.

A LAND OF PROMISE

New York Business Man's Views of Canada's Untold Wealth

Mr. A. Barton Hepburn, ex-president of the New York Chamber of Commerce, in an article in the Monetary Times says:

"The area of the Dominion exceeds that of the United States, and, although climatic conditions prevent so great a diversity of products from the earth, and interfere to a considerable extent with the personal comfort and convenience of living, which go with a milder climate, nevertheless all of Canada's available arable land is bound to come into requisition all too soon, in furnishing homes for your growing population and the immigrants who seek to better their condition by making your country their own.

"The greater advantages which go with a comparatively new and undeveloped country, Canada possesses in abundance. Forest and farm, mines and manufacturing, all the varied industries of our complex civilization, present inducements and opportunities which older countries no longer possess. Judicious investment in real estate must bring to the investor an "unearned increment" of large proportions. Farms not only support your own population, but are under requisition to supply the needs of the people across the Atlantic and the Pacific as well. The magnitude and variety of your mines are as yet little ascertained, because demand has not yet enforced their development."

THE GRAVES OF A HOUSEHOLD.

They grew in beauty side by side,
They filled one home with glee,
Their graves are severed far and wide
By mount, and stream, and sea.
The same fond mother bent at night
O'er each fair sleeping brow,
She had each folded flower in sight—
Where are those dreamers now!

One midst the forests of the west,
By a dark stream is laid;
The Indian knows his place of rest
Far in the cedar shade.
The sea, the blue lone sea, hath one,
He lies where pearls lie deep,
He was the loved of all, yet none
O'er his low bed may weep.

One sleeps where southern vines are drest,
Above the noble slain;
He wrapt his colors round his breast
On a blood-red field of Spain,
And one—o'er her the myrtle showers
Its leaves, by soft winds fanned;
She faded midst Italian flowers,
The last of that bright band.

And parted thus, they rest — who played
Beneath the same green tree,
Whose voices mingled as they prayed
Around one parent knee!
They that with smiles lit up the hall
And cheered with song the hearth—
Alas for love, if thou wert all,
And naught beyond, oh earth!

THEY TREK NORTHWARD

Heavy Exodus to Canadian Northwest From State of Wisconsin

[illegible] gration to Canada of United States citizens seeking new homes in the far north west, hit Wisconsin hard, according to figures given out by George P. Hall, agent in that state for the Canadian government. His figures show at least 5,200 persons left Wisconsin during one year for new homes in the Canadian Northwest.

"The great success of farmers on the Canadian side of the border has greatly influenced Wisconsin people," Mr. Hall said, "for in Wisconsin development work means an enormous amount of labor in rooting up old pine stumps." Wisconsin is conducting an elaborate campaign to settle farmers on the up-country cut over timber lands, but the Canadian agent is campaigning for the same class of people

GOT A JOB.

There is a true story of a young woman who had devoted almost a year to using all possible influence to gain an interview with a certain theatrical manager. At last her hopes were realized. She got her appointment, and she was finally ushered in to the manager's office. He received her most cordially and offered her a chair.

"Thank you," she said, gratefully. "I think I will sit down. I've been just ten months getting here and I'm a little tired."

And the manager, who is really a great man, and hence has a sense of humor, promptly engaged her.

MOTOR.

Indianaplois, Ind., May 31.—Joe Dawson, who won the 500-mile sweep stake race here last year, probably will drive a machine in the third annual automobile race, Memorial Day, it was announced Wednesday.

The contest board of the American Automobile Association has refused to license the inventor of one of the cars to drive in the race on the ground that he lacked experience. Dawson, it was said, would steer his machine.

The elimination trials will start today and continue until 6 o'clock Thursday night. Each car must do 75 miles an hour and come within certain technical requirements in various dimensions.

Referee A. R. Pardington, of New York, who will have charge of the race, has arrived and will direct the preliminary contests. Wednesday night the drivers will be instructed in the rules governing the event.

FULL-MOUTHED SHEEP

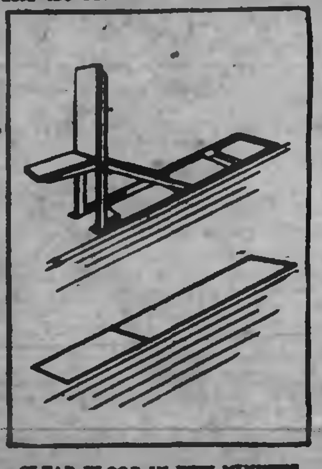
Good Teeth a Prime Requisite to Successful Feeding

At two years of age a sheep's teeth are in their prime; at three, four and even five years of age they are usually in good working order; but it is rare to find a sheep older than that that has a good set of teeth. When a sheep gets to be six or seven years old its teeth become long, sharp and brittle and they break off very easily, if, indeed, they have not worn off by that time. A broken-mouthed sheep can not eat either grass or grains to advantage. Proper mastication is important to the complete digestion of food in the case of a sheep, as it is in the case of man, and a broken-mouthed sheep labors under a handicap both in not being able to eat very much and in not being able to get much good from what it does eat. It does not pay ordinarily to keep such a sheep in the flock. It often seems hard to sacrifice a ewe that has given good service, but no matter how good a lamb a ewe has had in her younger days, in this condition she is not likely to again be able to produce, or nurse a lamb. Those who buy sheep should investigate their mouths carefully and see that they have good teeth, as good teeth are one of the prime requisites to successful feeding.

FOLDING THEATRE CHAIR

Collapses Into Floor and Leaves Flat Space Above.

Here is the latest idea in the design of a theatre chair. It folds up perfectly flat and drops into a space in the floor behind it. A pair of straight standards with a board across their upper half, to form the back of the chair, are hinged to the floor. The seat is hinged to the back and is supported in horizontal position by two legs that slant up from the floor at the back and hold the back in a reclining position.



CLEAR FLOOR IN FEW MINUTES.

It is not likely that a seat of this type would ever supersede the chairs in first-class theatres, but in small auditoriums, that are often used for other purposes when there is no play in town, it should prove very convenient. In a few minutes a couple of men could clear the floor by collapsing the chairs into the spaces behind them.

An Engineer's Invention

Chief Engineer George Brown of the Pere Marquette car ferry International, which plies between Sarnia and Port Huron, invented an indicator which enables the captain of a vessel to know just what is going on in the engine room of his boat. The machine shows accurately the direction the engines are moving, the speed and other important points. Marine experts pronounce it a big success.

Double-headed Calf

A cow owned by Mr. Anson Hughes of Dereham township, Oxford county, gave birth to a double-headed calf. The calf was normal in all other respects. Both heads were fully developed. The additional head was attached to the shoulder, and it evidently performed the usual functions. A veterinary surgeon also detected the presence of a second windpipe connecting with the additional head. The calf died at the time of birth.

MILK GIVING BULL IS SOLD FOR $500

Delaware College Experimental Farm Owned Animal Which Aroused Great Deal of Curiosity.

Newark, Del., May 31.—King Beda, the registered Guernsey bull at the Delaware College experiment farm that recently startled many farmers and attracted national attention by actually giving milk, has been sold for $500 to Scoville brothers, thoroughbred cattle breeders, at Chapinville, Conn. Since the statement was made in newspapers about a week ago that the bull gave milk, Professor Hayward director of the experimental farm, has received a number of communications from prominent persons asking for confirmation of the report and several days ago he demonstrated to a minister and a business man who visited the farm that the bull gave milk.

Professor Hayward said the college authorities were loath to part with the animal and were only induced to sell it because the college owns a half brother to King Beda, who was sired by the great imported May Rose King and is valued at $2,000.

BURNING THIRTEEN YEARS

Mining Engineer Tells of Gas Jet in Alberta

A solid shaft of flame fifty feet high, and which has been burning for the last thirteen years!

This striking commentary on Canada's want of economy is to be found at Pelican Portage, Alberta, and it consists of a huge gas jet which became ignited thirteen years ago, and has been burning steadily ever since, drawing new supplies from its source below. This and many other interesting things connected with the problem of conservation in Canada's mineral industry were related in an address to the Ottawa branch of the Canadian Mining Institute by Mr. W. J. Dick, mining engineer of the Dominion conservation commission.

Mr. Dick took up the different branches of the mining industry, and showed how great was the waste in each on account of the slack and inefficient methods and the want of care which too often prevailed. Valuable by-products were allowed to go to waste which would amply repay utilization.

In no branch of the industry was this more pronounced than with coal mining. The lecturer exhibited a number of slides of enormous heaps of slack coal outside Canadian mines, and showed how this could be made into briquettes by a purely mechanical process. Germany, for instance, turns out more briquettes per year than Canada does coal. The vast deposits of lignite, or low grade coal, in the West make this problem a peculiarly important one as far as Canada is concerned.

TWO OLD TOWERS A LINK WITH PAST

From Them the Early Settlers of Montreal Defended Their Community Against Indians

In front of the Montreal College, on Sherbrooke Street, Montreal, there still stand two towers from which the original band of colonists defended themselves against the Indians in the year 1600, or thereabouts. There were originally four towers, but two are gone.

When the Sulpicians came out from Paris, having either received the island as a gift or bought it from the Company of One Hundred, which has always been their claim, they occupied the house of Maisonneuve, which stood on what is now St. Paul street.

It is said that the Sulpicians, once they got into possession, made it so hot for Maisonneuve that the poor man was glad to leave. Any way, the Sulpicians, after some years of occupancy, moved to the base of the mountain, on what is now Sherbrooke street, building a modest place in which to live and study and teach.

In front of the building four large towers were built for defensive purposes. Hochelaga, the Indian town, was not far away. In fact, it occupied what is now the McGill University campus. The primary object of the Sulpicians was to teach; but they soon found that their immediate business must be to fight. They built the forts as they built all their establishments—to last. They mounted cannon in the loop holes—such rude armaments as they possessed of this denomination; and in repeated attacks, defended themselves with success.

The towers have walls two feet thick. There is a sort of gallery above where the defenders slept after the arduous duty of fighting all day. During the intermission of fighting the Sulpicians obtained a number of Indian children and held school for them in the forts. The names of the pupils are given in a framed record, which also shows how many Indians were converted to Christianity, and how one of the chiefs, together with a squaw, are buried beneath the forts, in which they died through disease.

In building the present college in 1858, two of the towers which were in the way, were taken down; but the remaining forts are an object of curiosity to the antiquarian, as recording the early history of the colony in a heroic aspect.

No Drunks on Boats

Because the Governments of both Canada and the United States objected to the number of drunks carried back and forward across the St. Clair River at Sarnia and Port Huron the ferry company placed signs on its boats warning the public that no intoxicated person could travel on them. The agitation started by Sarnia people, who were awakened by the loud

PRIMITIVE SURGERY

One of the most interesting studies in connection with the evolution of the surgeon's art is the extraordinary similarity which may be found between the procedure of modern native practitioners and those that were apparently practised by their remote ancestors, for the native practitioner is a remarkably conservating type.

The earliest form of splint known, discovered on the body of an Egyptian of the Fourth Dynasty, finds its exact counterpart in that which is at present in everyday use among the barber surgeons of Upper Egypt.

Many modern savage and semi-savage people perform surgical operations—and have done from time immemorial—that wholly surprise those who, following a rather prevalent mode of thought, regard the major operations of surgery as being of a very recent development. And yet surprise at the boldness of these operations should always be tempered by the reflection that the more primitive the state of society the greater the familiarity with the details of severe wounding and subsequent repair of the human body.

Tenders will not be considered unless made on the forms supplied, and signed with the actual signatures of the tenderers.

Combined specification and form of tender can be obtained on application to the Secretary, Department of Public Works, Ottawa, and plan of work may be seen at the Office of the Assistant Chief Engineer of Public Works, Ottawa, and the Office of the District Engineer, Confederation Life Building, Toronto, Ont. Tenders must include the towing of the plant to and from the work. Dredges and tugs not owned and registered in Canada shall not be employed in the performance of the work contracted for. Contractors must be ready to begin work within thirty days after the date they have been notified of the acceptance of their tender.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, for five per cent. (5 p.c.) of the contract price, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,

FASHIONS IN TOMBSTONES

The Celtic Cross is Quite the Proper Thing in Tombstones

"There are fashions in tombstones just the same as in hats and clothes," said a monument worker, "and even if they don't change quite as often we have to keep up with them. A few years ago broken columns were all the go, and we had our hands full executing such orders. Then came the St. Andrew's Cross. It's shaped like an X and most of our orders ran to that sort of cross.

"Now the Celtic cross is in vogue and it is quite the proper thing to have put on your monument. They offer a considerable field for decoration and traceries, but I suppose they will have their run and something new will come in. An experienced tombstone maker can tell approximately when a monument was put up without looking at the date on it, if he has kept up with the fashions."

KING AT BREAKFAST

Interesting Facts About the Morning Meal at Buckingham Palace

Breakfast at Buckingham Palace is now a family meal. In the late reign both King Edward and Queen Alexandra took breakfast in their private apartments, but King George and Queen Mary come downstairs to their morning meal, and are joined by the Princess Mary and the Prince of Wales, and the Princes George and Henry, when the latter are at Buckingham Palace. The other two princes take their breakfast in a room off the Royal school-room.

Breakfast is served usually either in the Bow Room or Chinese Room on the first floor. There are also one or two other rooms where it is occasionally served. Their Majesties signify to the Master of the Household overnight the room in which they desire to breakfast, and the Master communicates the order to the House Steward.

Two sideboards and a round table have to be put into the room chosen by their Majesties, and these are removed at once after breakfast.

Breakfast is served at 9 a.m. The service used is a white porcelain one, with a gold band, and each piece bears a Royal crown and a monogram underneath it. The dishes generally used are part of a very massive silver breakfast service, which was a wedding-present from the Empress of Germany to Queen Mary.

In the centre of the table is placed a massive silver flower-bowl, filled with white and pink flowers.

Porridge made from the finest meal always forms part of the breakfast menu. It is served in silver bowls. Fruit is another feature of the Royal breakfast. Bananas, grapes, melons, hot-house peaches, and apples are among the fruits regularly served. Frequently the King breakfasts off porridge and fruit.

When the breakfast dishes have been placed on the table the servants leave the room, and do not remain in attendance to wait at table, as they do at other meals.

The ladies and gentlemen of the Household who are "in-waiting" breakfast together in the Household dining-room. The Household breakfast is served half an hour earlier than the Royal breakfast. This is done so that the secretaries may go through the morning mail whilst the King and Queen are at breakfast, and have the vast volume of correspondence sorted and arranged for their Majesties' inspection and attention directly breakfast is over.

When a foreign monarch is staying at Buckingham Palace, breakfast is, of course, served in the State dining-room, and the meal is then of a much more ceremonious character.

The whole Royal party assemble at 9 a.m. in the Bow Room, and the King with the visiting Sovereign's consort, and the Queen, with the visiting monarch, lead the way to the State dining-room, and are followed by the members of their respective households.

The German Emperor customarily eats a heartier breakfast than any other foreign Royalty, and he is the only European monarch who drinks tea at breakfast.

The King of Spain drinks chocolate and a cup of chocolate and some wheatmeal biscuits form the Spanish monarch's usual morning-meal. The King and Queen of Norway both drink coffee at breakfast, and the King of Norway never eats anything at breakfast but a little fruit. The Tsar's breakfast usually consists of thin, dry toast and thick cream, followed by a small cup of black coffee.

BRITAIN'S WAR SCHOOLS

Her Soldiers Trained by Mechanical Devices in Various Branches

Thanks to a number of ingenious inventions, the British soldier is now being trained under conditions that are as near to those of actual warfare as they are ever likely to be. By the use of moving pictures, the new recruit can now experience the sensation of desperate situations, with complete safety to himself. He can learn the thrill of facing a squadron of charging cavalry, and train his nerve to frustrate the death-dealing bullets of sharpshooters skulking in the undergrowth.

Although it is so deadly effective a weapon at close quarters, the bayonet is not an easy fighting instrument to handle. It requires considerable practice to learn to make those quick short jabs characteristic of this sort of fighting; for the rifle is a clumsy weapon to handle for other purposes than shooting. To teach a recruit to handle it with speed and skill, mechanism is again introduced.

A square frame of wood about ten feet high is erected in the ground. Down the center of this structure runs a wire, on which are threaded a number of balls composed of thickly woven straw. The man with the bayonet stands in front of this apparatus, and the balls are drawn up to the top of the wire. A mechanical device then releases them at quick speed, and they travel down the guide wire in rapid succession. As they pass the waiting soldier he has to stab each one of them with a quick movement and with a subtle twist of the wrists—achieved by long practice—withdraw the weapon in time to stab the sphere following closely behind. The advantage of this machine is that not only does it teach quick and accurate bayonet work, but it develops the wrist muscles necessary to withdraw the weapon immediately it has completed its deadly design.

In several military riding schools it is possible to see erected a most interesting device, consisting of a dummy horseman pivoted on a wooden steed that runs on wheels, guided by a rail. Sometimes this dummy is mechanically propelled, but more often it runs on a sloping rail. The lay figure is started on its way along the rail, and a cavalryman gallops to meet it. As he dashes by he delivers a cut with his sword at the padded figure, and if his stroke is well directed, it topples the rider over. The dummy is counter-balanced by a weight beneath the horse, but if it is hit with accuracy and strength, this weight is overcome, and the sham rider falls backwards or forwards, wherever the blow directs it. If the blow is badly judged, then the figure only swings, and the attacking cavalryman is only credited with having wounded his strange opponent. The idea, of course, is to bring horseback fighting as near to reality as it is possible to do without danger to the attacked or the attacker.

The menace of the airship as a death dealing factor in modern warfare soon brought into existence a gun specially designed to cripple aerial craft. But how to practise with such a weapon for some time puzzled the authorities. But now a successful plan has been devised. A captive balloon of large cubic capacity is attached by a long wire cable to a powerful motor lorry. A number of artillerymen with guns are stationed some distance away. The balloon is sent aloft, and when it has attained a considerable height, the motor-lorry proceeds to drag it across the front of the firing party. As it sways and dips in the atmosphere aloft, the attackers endeavor to pour a hail of lead into the delicate fabric of the balloon. This is no simple task, for the constant change in the position of the mark is most disconcerting. So far, however, this apparatus has proved very successful in familiarizing gunners with this strange form of marksmanship. At Farnborough and the military grounds on Salisbury Plain, one can see the other aspect of aerial warfare being practised. A number of the most stable and solidly constructed army aeroplanes of the biplane type are fitted with lightly built machine guns for use under favorable weather conditions against dummy targets on the grounds.

EX-PREMIER'S NOSE BROKEN

It Was a Marble Reproduction, However, And Was Quickly Repaired

The statute of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, which was supposed to have gone down with the Titanic, while it was actually on La Bretagne, has been put in place at the Chateau Laurier at Ottawa. Monsieur Paul Chevre, the sculptor watched anxiously while the product of his art was moved by the workmen. How his fingers twitched to take it himself. How careful he would be with it—how much more gentle! Then one cannot tell how it happened. But that statute was dropped. It fell on its nose. The nose of Sir Wilfrid Laurier was broken.

The workmen stood back amazed, horror stricken. M. Chevre tore his hair. He shouted till his throat was hoarse. He stopped in his wrath. He looked at the men. "Allons," he said. That was all. And they went. He remained alone with his work. As the afternoon sped drearily on, he sat at work in his sleeves. He heeded nothing going on around him. He was an artist again. And the nose of that statue was broken. But he worked on till the twilight. Then he got up and looked at it. One more touch there and one here. The nose of Sir Wilfrid was not broken. So it appeared. But the statue, Monsieur Paul Chevre and Le Bon Dieu all knew the truth.

In after years the people who hear of this accident and ask the elevator men at the Chateau when the nose was broken will be told it is a fabrication.

Dear Sirs.—

It is just one year ago that we put in the first stock of SANOL and SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES CURE, and we wish to state that we have been amazed at the remarkable sale of these remedies. We have had many repeat orders in both our stores and have sold retail $1000.00 worth of these remedies. In spite of all these sales we have yet to hear of one dissatisfied customer, while many have come back to tell us of the wonderful cures resulting from the Medicine.

Another striking feature of this business is that so many customers come in stating that SANOL has cured Mr.—— their intimate friend, and they wished to try it for themselves.

Wishing you continued success, we are, Yours truly,

COMMUNAL LIFE IN THE BALKANS

Family Rather Complicated Affair—Many Relatives Under One Roof

In the Balkans the family constitutes an association, a clan, a community known as the zadruga. There the people live to a great age and in the zadrugas are often found great-grandfathers and still more antique relations sharing the same roof with babes and sucklings and the intervening generations.

Family ties are very strong among Slav nations. Parents are treated with the utmost veneration, and a Servian saying is that a man is only half a man till he marries.

The zadruga is the collection under one roof of an entire tribe. In the first place this was no doubt the father in command of his family, but the children have married and settled at home, until perhaps at last the chief may be only a distant relation of some of them. The head of the zadruga is chosen by election. He keeps all the money of the clan, makes all the purchases, and nothing can be done without his consent.

This scheme of life, of course, has its disadvantages, for imagine the army of mothers-in-law, and sisters-in-law, all with very voluble tongues, packed into one building! Needless to say, when the tribe numbers nearly 100 persons the building is of considerable size.

However living is very cheap in the community on account of the co-operation, people are safeguarded against poverty, and nursed in illness by others of their clan. Practically all necessities of life can be produced in a large country zadruga. Linen is woven on hand looms, woolen clothes are manufactured entirely at home, carpets are likewise made; indeed nothing is bought but a few groceries, such as sugar.

In well-to-do families the food is excellent, sucking pigs being a very favorite dish. Chicken is also to be found on most menus, but, strangely enough, the drumstick is the tit-bit.

A housewife in the Balkans is up betimes in the morning, and it is marvelous to think what she can get through during the day. She does the housework, the cooking, makes the clothes, first spinning and weaving them, knits socks and stockings, milks the cows, makes the cheese, does the washing, besides nursing the sick. Some of them even cultivate the land as well.

In spite, or perhaps because, of all this, a woman is of small account. At meal times she lays the table, waits on the men, and does not venture to sit down till later, when she finishes up the scraps. When men visit the house the women kiss their hands. Still more humiliating is the fact that when a boy is born the rejoicings are unbounded, whereas whenever a girl comes into the world the mother weeps. Indeed, in Montenegro until recent times they went so far as to allow a man to divorce his wife unless she bore him sons.

"One of the Dragoons said he was in command. Hurt badly?"

"No, I think not; but utterly exhausted, and weak from loss of blood. They put up a game fight."

"Only three on their feet when we got in. Hullo, Lawrence, getting back to the world, lad?"

"Yes," I managed to answer, feeling strength enough to lift myself, and vaguely noticing his features. "Is that you, Farrell?"

"It certainly is," cheerfully. "Duval has his arm about you, and the Camden boys are herding those devils down below. You had some fracas from the way things look. How many men had you?"

I rubbed my head, endeavoring to recollect, staring down into the hall. It was filled with dead and wounded men, and at the foot of the stairs was a pile of bodies.

"Twelve, altogether," I replied finally. "They—they were too many for us."

"Three to one, or more, I should judge. We got here just in time."

I was up now, looking into their faces, slowly grasping the situation.

"Yes," I said, feeling the necessity of knowing. "How did it happen? What brought you? Washington—"

"All natural enough. Clinton got away night before last with what was left of his army. Left fires burning, and made a forced march to the ships at Sandy Hook. Left everything to save his troops. Washington, realizing the uselessness of holding them longer, sent most of his militia home. About six miles out there on the pike road a half-crazy preacher named Jenks came up with us. He was too badly frightened to tell a straight story, but we got out of him that there was a fight on here, and came over as fast as our horses would travel!" His eyes swept the hall. "Five minutes later would have been too late."

"But Farrell, the girl! Do you know anything about the girl?"

"What girl? Do you mean Claire Mortimer? Is she here?"

"Yes, her father is lying helplessly wounded up stairs, and she must be with him. Eric is somewhere in the hall, either dead or wounded. I saw him fall just as we retreated to the stairs."

Farrell leaned over and called to some one below.

"Not yet, sir," was the answer.

"Well, hunt for him. Now, we'll go up and find Claire. Major, can you climb the rest of the stairs? Help him, Duval."

I experienced no great difficulty, my strength coming back rapidly. There was a wounded Dragoon leaning against the wall, and half-way down the hall lay another body, face down. Without doubt this was the guard Fagin had stationed there. Duval paused to help the wounded man, but Farrell and I moved on across the dead guard to the open door beyond. Colonel Mortimer, unable to move, was propped up on his pillow, one hand grasping a pistol. With shaking arm he levelled it at us.

"Who are you? Quick, now!" he quavered. "I've shot one, and I'm good for more."

"You know me, Colonel," and Farrell stepped inside. "I am 'Bull' Farrell; this is Major Lawrence." He looked at us with dull eyes, his hand falling weakly.

"Farrell—Farrell—surely, the blacksmith. What Lawrence? The—the officer Claire knows?"

"Yes; he's a rough-looking object, I admit, but there has been a fight down below, sir, in which he had a share. We've just cleaned out Red Fagin's gang. We came up here to tell the good news to you and your daughter."

The Colonel's head sank back upon the mussed pillow.

"My daughter—Claire—she is not here?"

"Not here!" I cried, aroused by the admission. "Did she not return to you?"

"No; they came for her to go down stairs—a tall man with a black beard, and two others. They took her away an hour ago, and I have seen nothing of her since. I—heard the shots, the sound of fierce fighting, but could not move from the bed. Tell me, Major, what has become of my little girl?"

"I do not know," I confessed, gazing about in bewilderment. "She came up the stairs, I am sure. It was just as the fight began, and I had scarcely a moment to observe anything before we were at it fiercely. She shot Fagin down, and then ran."

"Shot Fagin! Claire!"

"Yes; she was justified. Had she not acted so quickly I would have done so myself. He was forcing her into marriage."

"Into marriage! With whom?"

"Captain Grant," I answered passionately. "It was a deliberate plot, although he pretended to be innocent, and a helpless prisoner. Later the man fought with the outlaws against us; after Jones was killed he even assumed command."

"He has been hand and glove with these fellows from the first, Colonel," chimed in Farrell hoarsely. "I've known it, and told Lawrence so a month ago. I only hope he was killed down below. But what can have become of Claire?"

"She never passed along here," insisted Mortimer, "for I haven't taken my eyes from that door."

"Then she is hiding somewhere in those front rooms. Come on, Lawrence, and we'll search them."

We went out hurriedly, leaving the wounded man lying helplessly on the bed, and stepped cautiously across the dead sentinel lying in the hallway. The memory of Peter recurred to me. He was not the kind to desert his mistress at such a time. Stopping Farrell, I stepped back to inquire. The Colonel opened his eyes wearily at sound of my voice.

"He is not here," he explained slowly. "Both Peter and Tonepah were sent away to find a surgeon, and have not returned. We anticipated no danger here with Captain Grant present."

I ground my teeth savagely together, recalling the treachery of the latter, his insults to Claire, his deceiving of Eric, his stealing of papers, hoping thus to ruin his own Colonel, his alliance with Fagin, his selling of British secrets. Here was a villain through and through and I hoped he had already paid the penalty. If not, I vowed the man should never escape. But the thought of the missing girl came back, driving all else from my mind. She was in none of those rooms we searched, nor did we discover the slightest evidence of her having been there. As I stood in the door of the deserted music-room staring helplessly about, a sudden possibility occurred to me. Ay! that must be the truth, the full explanation of her vanishing. She had come flying up the stairs, frightened, desperate—so far as she knew, alone against Fagin's unscrupulous band. She had not returned to her father, or escaped by way of the hall. Where then could she have gone? The secret staircase, down which she had hurried me, and which was known only to herself, Eric and Peter. I gripped Farrell's arm eagerly.

"You know this house well—did you ever hear of secret passages in it?"

"I have heard it whispered in gossip," he answered, "that such were here in the old Indian days. Why?"

"Because it is true. The girl hid me here from Grant. And that is where we will find her. The opening is there by the false chimney, but I have no conception of how it works; she made me turn my back while she operated the mechanism."

He stooped down, and began search along the fireplace, and I joined him. Together our hands felt over every inch of surface. There was no response, not even a crack to guide us. At last he glanced aside, and our eyes met.

"Who knew of this beside Claire?" he asked.

"Eric and the servant Swanson. She told me she and her brother discovered it by accident through reading an old memoranda."

"And the colonel is not aware of its existence?"

"I understand not. Do you know if the boy lives?"

He left the room, and I heard his voice calling down the stairs, but did not distinguish the words of reply. I was still on my knees when he returned.

"He is alive, but unconscious, Lawrence. Do you consider it impossible for her to escape from here alone, providing she took refuge in this place?"

"I could find no opening, except underground, and that is blocked now." I shuddered at the thought. "Besides, she must be in utter darkness, for I used all the candles."

"Then we must get axes, and cut our way in. Wait here, and I will bring up some of the men."

I straightened up as he left the room, and my eyes looked into a small mirror above the open grate. Good Heavens! Could that be my reflection! Bareheaded, my face streaked with blood and dirt, my coat rags, my shirt ripped to the waist. I scarcely looked human. In sudden burst of anger I reached out and gripped the mirror, jerking it savagely. Then I sprang back. Slowly, with a faint click of the mechanism, the mantelpiece was swinging open.

CHAPTER XXXV.

A Confession of Love.

I could scarcely believe my eyes as the mantel swung slowly outward, revealing the black hole beyond. I glanced about helplessly, and sprang to the door to call back Farrell. He was not in the upper hall, but as my eyes swept its length I remembered a half-burned candle in the chamber opposite. By the time I returned with it lighted, the mantel had turned on its pivot, leaving the way clear. The narrow stair was vacant, stretching down into the black depths. I listened, my heart throbbing, but no sound came from below. Could she be there? Was there any other secret passage by which she could have disappeared? I shuddered at memory of what it meant to be shut up in that dismal hole, without the companionship of light. Fearful of some accident I paused long enough to wedge a heavy piece of furniture in the opening, and then, shading the bit of candle, began groping my way down. I had reached the lower floor before the flickering yellow rays revealed any evidence of her presence. Then I saw a girl lying head down upon the table. My hand touched her arm before she moved, but then she faced me, wild-eyed, the pistol gleaming in the candle-light.

"Claire! Claire!" I exclaimed, startled at her sudden movement. "Surely you know me."

For the instant she did not, her eyes full of terror.

"No! no!" she cried hysterically. "Oh, it cannot be! It is a dream! You—you—tell me who you are?"

I caught her hand, the pistol falling to the floor, and placed the candlestick upon the table.

"It is no dream, dear. I am Allen Lawrence, and I have come for you. I know I look disreputable enough, but there has been fighting—surely you know me now."

She caught her breath quickly, clinging to me with both hands—her eyes softening as she studied my face.

"Allen—Allen Lawrence!" she repeated softly. "Oh, I can scarcely believe it true. Let me feel of you. I—I believe I was going insane—the dark, the awful dark, and, and no way out—no way out."

"Yes, yes, I understand," I whispered, drawing her to me. "I was hidden here once, remember. But it is over with now."

"But—how did you find a way to me? I—I never thought until it was all over that I had shut myself in here to die. I was so frightened, I just ran and hid. Oh, you cannot conceive what I had gone through."

She drew away from me, and again hid her face on the table.

"Oh, but I can, Claire," and I bent over her, my hand touching her hair. "I was there in the hall below, ready even then to act in your defense. I heard all that was said, saw all that was done."

"You—you were there?" sobbing out the words. "You saw me kill him?"

"Yes, and had you delayed another instant I should have done it."

"Then—then," she glanced up, tears dimming her eyes, "you do not blame me? You do not think me a wicked wretch?"

"I think you a brave, noble woman," I burst forth. "How could I feel otherwise? Look up, little girl; I want to see your face. No, don't shrink back from me. There is no cause. I know the whole story without your speaking a word. You asked me to come back to help you, and I came."

"Yes," she whispered, "I know. You have been so good."

"Good! I loved you, dear. From the moment I lifted you out of the way of that mob in Philadelphia, I have loved you. I did not understand much that occurred, but I have never doubted you. Now I realize the cause of your masquerade and know you were justified. I can bring you good news—Eric is not a traitor, but was a prisoner, captured by Fagin, and held at Grant's request. We found him bound and under guard out yonder, as we approached the house."

"And he is here now?"

"Yes; he was hurt in the fight, and is still unconscious, but will live."

"His reputation—"

"Is safe. Washington believes he brought him the news of Clinton's route of march, and will never know otherwise."

She arose to her feet, standing straight and slender before me, the flickering light of the candle on her face.

"Major Lawrence," she began, "I wish to get out of here—it seems like a grave to me—but I must speak first. Oh, I am so glad I have accomplished what I endeavored to do for my brother. Captain Grant tried to make me believe him a deserter, but I would not. When he failed to come back to me as he had promised, I could hardly determine what my duty was. I knew his plans, his orders, and the thought came that I should carry these out myself. We looked sufficiently alike so that this could be done with little danger of discovery. He had uniforms concealed here, and I felt driven to impersonate him. I do not insist that I did right; I do not know—only it seemed right to me. Then—then" her voice faltered, "I met you, again and again, and I—I began to doubt myself. I had no one to confide in, no one to advise me. I was simply compelled to go ahead, and keep my own secret. The only ones I knew I could absolutely trust were our old house servants."

"You doubted me, even?"

"Yes, at first, but you must not blame me. We met strangely; you were a gentleman and an officer; I felt sure of this, and was tempted oft-times to tell you my story. But before I dared do so, you—you spoke of other things and—and then I was afraid."

"Afraid of what?" and I caught her hand in mine. "That a knowledge of what you were attempting to accomplish would turn me against you?"

Her eyes fell, shaded by the long lashes.

"Yes; once, do you remember I almost began a confession, when you spoke of your old-fashioned mother, and her conception of womanhood. How could I tell you then that I had dressed as a man, and played the part of a spy? I—I thought you might despise me, and—and I wished so to retain your respect. It was an accident we were with Delavan that night. We were endeavoring to waylay a courier, and rode suddenly into his party. I had to invent a tale on the spur of the moment. Major Lawrence, now that you know all, tell me the one thing I must know before we join the others—would you wish your own sister to do as I have done?"

"Not to pass through the dangers, surely," I returned eagerly, "but I should rejoice at her loyalty, and be proud of her. Claire, Claire, there has never been in my heart aught but love for you. As Lady of the Blended Rose, as daughter of a colonel of Queen's Rangers, even in the disguise of a dragoon, I have never questioned the depth of your womanhood. Once I guessed you a British spy, yet ceased not to lo[illegible] reward? You know [illegible] of [illegible] you say, but as an officer and a gentleman, I ask you to repeat again what you whispered to me once yonder under the stars—do you remember, dear?"

Farrell Stood Bareheaded, a Great Figure. "This Has Been a Fine Night's Work," He Said.

"It was only to compel you to leave me."

"And now it is an invitation to remain."

Her eyes were uplifted to mine. Slowly I drew her toward me, her arms were upon my shoulders, and our lips met.

"I love you," she said slowly. "Yes, dear, I love you."

Above us, his head thrust through the opening, Farrell called:

"Have you found her, major? Shall I come down?"

"It's not necessary."

"The colonel is half crazy, and the boy is getting back his senses."

We went up together, I bearing the candle in one hand, and helping her along the circular stairs with the other. In the upper hall I glanced below, but the bodies of the dead had been removed. Farrell stood bareheaded, a great figure on his short legs.

"This has been a fine night's work," he said steadily, "the last of Fagin's gang."

"Dead?"

"Ay, and Grant with him—begging your pardon, mistress."

Her eyes glanced from his face into mine, and my hand-clasp tightened. It was thus we went in together, and stood opposite the colonel's bed.

[THE END.]

MYSTERY OF BIRD FLIGHT

Tip of the Wing Moves at Same Speed in Every Species

A curious fact concerning birds is that the tip of the wing moves at practically the same speed in every species. This is 650 feet per minute, or nearly 7½ miles per hour. Whether it is the tiny wren, or the huge stork, the rule holds good, and even the bee comes within it.

Thus the bee has a wing only a quarter-inch long, the sparrow's wing is four inches, and the stork's twenty-seven. But the bee's wing beats 11,400 times in a minute, the sparrow's 730, and the stork's only 406 times. If you multiply together the length of the wing and the number of beats you will get almost exactly the same result in the three cases—namely, stork, 2,836; bee, 2,850; sparrow, 2,880.

But a machine made to fly like a bird has to develop far more energy than these figures stand for. A bird's energy in flight is not so great as is supposed. Although such skilful flyers when aloft, many birds cannot rise from level ground.

World's Oldest Museum.

The oldest museum in the world may be found in the city of Nara, the former capital of Japan. Since its foundation, in 756, it has gone through all the changes of the Japanese empire without one single addition to its collection. Dr. Otto Kummel is one of the few Europeans who were permitted to visit this museum. It opens its doors but once a year, on a day in spring, when a special committee inspect the collection, and a new list is made out. The museum contains about 3,000 articles, which are said to be the most beautiful specimens of decorative work which have ever been produced by human hand, such as lacquer ware, decorative furniture, enamel ware, cambric-like fabrics, etc. The origin of the majority of the articles is uncertain; some came from China and others from Korea, but most of them appear to be of a more exotic origin. All, however, came of a year prior to the year 756.

'Old Folks' Coughs Permanently Cured

The Public is Loud in Its Praise of the Modern Direct Breathing Cure.

Elderly people take cold easily. Unlike young folks, they recover slowly, if ever. That is why so many people past middle life die of pneumonia. Even though pneumonia does not develop and kill, coughs certainly weaken all elderly people.

Cough Syrups seldom do much good because they upset digestion. Any druggist or doctor knows that a much more effective treatments is "CATARRHOZONE," which heals and soothes the irritated surfaces of the throat.

In using Catarrhozone you do not take medicine into the stomach—you simply breathe into the throat, nose and lungs rich piney balsamic vapor, so full of healing power that colds, catarrh and bronchitis disappear almost instantly.

"At sixty-eight years of age I can testify, that I am never troubled with coughs or colds," writes J. E. Pilgrim, of Kingston. "They used to be the bain of my life, and that was before I used Catarrhozone, which was recommended to me by C. L. Prouse, druggist. To use Catarrhozone is just like being in an immense pine woods. The balsamic vapor of Catarrhozone is like a tonic, it is so stimulating to the breathing organs, so soothing to sore spots, so full of power to drive out colds and congestion. I will always use and recommend Catarrhozone as a preventive and cure for coughs, colds, bronchitis, throat irritation and catarrh.

(Signed) "J. E. PILGRIM."

A Catarrhozone Inhaler in your pocket or purse enables you to stop a cold with the first sneeze. Large size costs $1.00 and supplies treatment for two months; small size, 50c.; trial size, 25c.; all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

SICK, SOUR STOMACH, INDIGESTION OR GAS

Take "Pape's Diapepsin" and in five minutes you'll wonder what became of misery in stomach.

Wonder what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in a revolt; if sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps; head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food; breath foul, tongue coated—just take a little Pape's Diapepsin and in five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

Millions of men and women to-day know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps this delicate organ regulated and they eat their favorite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless relief is Pape's Diapepsin which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful — it digests food and sets things straight, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. Please, for your sake, don't go on and on with a weak disordered stomach; it's so unnecessary.

An Apology

There have been so many of our old customers coming to our store and being disappointed at our not being ready for business, as we expected that we feel called upon to apologize for the delay, which has been caused by our inability to obtain locally the materials required for the fitting up of our new parlors at 410 George street. But we hope to be ready for business about the second week in June. The Tait Optical Co.

WAS SWINDLED BY SMOOTH WOMAN

Passed as Relative of Empress Borrowed $200,000 and Spent it

Berlin, May 30.—An extraordinary story of a German, Mme. Humbert, the daughter of a Bremen retail coal merchant, who succeeded in borrowing and spending some $200,000 in four or five years on the grounds of her supposed relationship with the Empress Frederick of Bismark, is related by the "Taegliche Rundschau."

Anna Fruehling was born in 1873 at Bremen. She appears to have gone to England and to have taken some sort of degree, but on returning to Germany she failed to pass the elementary school teachers' examination at Danzig. Then she began a career of fraud which has landed her in the dock at Dresden. At the age of 19 she married Herr Fruehling, the organist of Christ Church, Hamburg, who was earning $1,200 a year, whereas he and his wife spent $3,000 per annum. He explained to the court that he had very little to say in the household, and quite believed his wife's story of "mysterious birth" connected somehow with Bismarck or the Emperess Frederick.

The accused woman told the court that in her youth she had "done the royal family signal service owing to her fearlessness," and that Bismarck in the last year of his life secured a state pension for her. She also said that in 1904 she received official information that $750,000 had been placed at interest for her, and that she received $25,000 immediately and $2,500 yearly up to 1908. Three years after her marriage she and her husband were made bankrupt for $5,000.

Two years ago she arrived at Ostram, in Saxon Switzerland, near Dresden, where she bought a house for $3,500 and lived comfortably. She imposed on everybody with the story of her high lineage, and a few months before the final crash borrowed $12,500 cash and obtained $15,000 worth of goods, including $4,000 worth of clothes. She declared that the kaiser gave her an audience and complained about her debts. She also made a formal will, leaving instructions that if she died abroad the nearest German ambassador or consul was to be informed immediately; that her heir-at-law had only to go to Princess Sophie of Hohenzollern and say "Suum cuique" to receive the balance of the money due to her. She had a permanent reserved suite at a wellknown Berlin hotel.

Findlay & Howard, Limited, 211-213 Notre Dame Street, West, ... Montreal

THE ST. LAWRENCE INVESTMENT & TRUST COMPANY.

was incorporated by act of the Quebec Legislature, 5 Ed. VII, Chap. 78, in 1905, having for its object the extending and absorption of the St. Lawrence Investment Society. This Society, formed in 1895, carried on a successful business on a small scale, paying regular annual dividends varying from 5 p.c. to 15 p.c. and the assets gave the shares of the Society a value of about $150 at its absorption. The Charter under which the new Company is organized is a valuable one, it being difficult to obtain a Charter of like character. The powers conferred by it are wide and give an opportunity for the transaction of a profitable business.

FUTURE OF THE COMPANY.

The new Company will do business on a much larger scale than the old Company, will operate largely in the owning of, buying and selling of well selected real estate, in the development of tracts of land in the City and its suburbs by selling same as Factory Sites and building lots, and in the purchase of agreements of sale, a business very profitably engaged in, in Toronto, Winnipeg, Calgary, Vancouver and other Cities. The purchasing of agreements of sale has not, to any extent, been carried on in Montreal, and it is intended that this Company pay particular attention to this Branch, which shows even better opportunities of profit, with a larger margin of safety, than throughout the West, inasmuch as the values of Real Estate in Montreal are more firmly based.

FIELD OF OPERATION

The operations of the Company will be confined chiefly to the City and District of Montreal and there is no city which offers the same advantages to Investors seeking safety with large returns. Montreal's commercial supremacy in the Dominion is universally known. The population in 1901 was 266,826, and in 1912 611,297. The assessed valuation of Real Estate in 1912 showed an increase of $126,000,000 over the previous year. Montreal is an Island, therefore its area is fixed. Real Estate values, though increasing, are still low, and leave room for great expansion. The City proper covers an area of 16 square miles, the smallest area of any city with the same population in either Canada or the United States.

MANAGEMENT

The Company have appointed Findlay & Howard, Limited, Managers. Mr. Findlay is recognized as one of the foremost judges of Real Estate in Montreal, and the Firm's success is shown in the results of the following companies managed by them, which in addition to placing substantial amounts to reserve have paid dividends as follows:—

VOL. XL, NO. 129. PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO, TUESDAY, JUNE 3, 1913 PRICE TWO CENTS.

CIVIL WAR WAS ADVOCATED BY THE NATIONALISTS PARTY

A Quebec Member Urged Extreme Measures in Opposition to the Navy Bill

Quebec, June 2.—Admitting that he had advised Hon. L. P. Pelletier, Postmaster-General, to carry his opposition to the Borden Naval Aid Bill even to the point of civil war, if that should be necessary, Armand Lavergne, the National lieutenant, yesterday at Montmagny delivered an address in which he denounced practically all the Quebec members on the Government side of the House; denounced both the Laurier and Borden naval policies; denounced England and her treatment of Canada in the past; denounced almost everything in sight and out of it, and suggested nothing beyond an appeal to the people, which he thinks will be the panacea for every ill, alleged or otherwise, of which he complains.

After making his statement about the advice he gave Mr Pelletier, Mr. Lavergne stated that he had qualified it by saying that it would hardly be necessary to go thus far as the English members, who loved power just as much as the French, would give in if they were hard pushed. Had the French members elected in the fight against Sir Wilfrid Laurier in 1911 stuck to their guns, the Borden Bill would have been defeated in the Lower House.

Plebiscite Demanded.

Mr. Lavergne described the defeat of the bill in the Senate as being the result and the culmination of five years of effort on the part of the Nationalists. As things were now, there could be no navy unless the people were consulted. There must be either a plebiscite or a general election. For his part he preferred a plebiscite, as it would tend to eliminate the party spirit. He accused Mr. Lesperance, the Federal member for Montmagny, of having been elected on false pretences and of having betrayed his mandate.

He also said it was thanks to himself that Quebec had been allotted three Ministers with portfolio and that Mr. Lesperance would have sacrificed one of these portfolios on condition that Sir Rodolphe Forget should be Minister without portfolio.

Passing the affair of the Keewatin schools, he read a telegram from Mr. Langevin saying that the Catholics of Manitoba were not satisfied with the outcome of the issue.

No Debt to England.

Then turning to the occasion of the Foreign bill, he said that Canada owed nothing to England, that the Dominion should do nothing beyond the defence of her own shores, that Canada had never involved England in any wars, but on the other hand had been involved in two by the Mother Country. In his opinion the interests of Canada had been sacrificed by England on several occasions which he enumerated. He considered there was no emergency, that England had no need of the money, that the King and the Kaiser had just sworn eternal peace, that the Laurier policy was preferable to Borden's because it left the decision as to whether Canada would engage in a war or not with the Canadian Parliament, and that, if England had the Imperial prerogative of settling foreign affairs, Canada for her part had the national prerogative of safeguarding her autonomy.

At the conclusion of the meeting a motion was passed censuring Mr. Lesperance as having betrayed his election pledges and requiring him to resign his seat.

FIGHT ON NAVY BILL

Death of J. P. Brown, M.P., Means a Warm Bye-Election.

Montreal, June 2.—The death of James P. Brown, member of Parliament for Chateauguay, throws open a Quebec constituency in which there is likely to be an interesting contest, as the Conservative candidate in the 1911 election, Mr. James Morris, was defeated by a majority of only 40.

The Naval Aid Bill will likely be an important issue in the campaign in Chateauguay.

WORKING FOR PROROGATION

End of Session Expected at Ottawa on Thursday or Friday

Ottawa, June 2.—It is expected that the House will prorogue this week. That is the plan and both sides are working with that end in view. The order paper has been practically cleared of business and a number of measures, including parcel post, will be held over until next session. All that remains now are the supplementary estimates, the railway subsidies and the proposed Grand Trunk Pacific loan and unless there is an unusually long debate on this subject prorogation will come about Thursday or Friday.

The one man who is delighted to see the end of the session is Mr. R. C. Miller, Canada's first state prisoner, for as soon as Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, the Deputy Governor, prorogues the House, he can walk out of County Carleton jail a free man.

CHIEF HOWARD GETS A PATHETIC APPEAL

Chief Howard has received the following letter from Chas. Gibson, of Toronto, father of Charles Gibson, who is sentenced to be hanged on July 9th, for murder in Toronto:

148 Berveley street,
Toronto,
May 31, '13.

Dear Mr. Howard—I enclose copy of petition, which speaks for itself. Do what you can to help me free Charlie. I had a very nice letter from Mr. R. D. Little, of Owen Sound, also a petition signed by 75 of the leading citizens, headed by the Mayor, and enclosing a cheque for $27.25. I am almost heart-broken over this terrible trouble, but there is a silver lining to every black cloud, and it is commencing to appear in my case. Kindest regards and best wishes. Believe me.

Yours sincerely,

THE IMPERIAL BANK HAS SUCCESSFUL YEAR

Attention is called to the annual statement of the Imperial Bank of Canada contained in this issue. This bank has had a most successful year, the 38th in its progressive history. It will be seen that the nets profits of the bank, after providing for bad and doubtful debts, etc., amounted to $1,126,971.61, being at the rate of 17.28 per cent. on the average paid up capital. A dividend of 12 per cent. per annum, was paid to shareholders. Many new offices have been opened, demonstrating that, under the efficient management of Mr. D. R. Wilkie, the Imperial Bank holds a high position in the financial world of Canada.

WANT THOUSAND DOLLARS

Ottawa, June 2.—The movement to secure an increased indemnity this session for members of the House is at full swing to-day, but no decision is yet announced. If anything is done, it will be in the form of a bonus rather than a straight statutory increase.

Owing to the length of the session, $1,000 extra is being agitated for, and the round robin is largely signed. The Senate will not be in on the grant.

"We have not decided the matter, but I should say the outlook is not unfavorable," said one of the Ministers to-day.

THE SENATE'S ACTION

Liberal leaders are endeavouring to show that the Prime Minister is bound to dissolve the House now that the Senate has thrown out the Navy Bill. They quote his utterance in Montreal, in which he said that he would appeal from Parliament to the people if Parliament rejected the Bill. In no sense is the Senate a Parliament when it comes to the question of a money bill. The Government side of the Senate has already declared that the Senate has no power to amend the Bill, inasmuch as it is a money Bill. The Senate has power to pass it or reject it in toto but has no power to amend. The Liberal majority in the Senate rejected this view, but from purely partisan motives.

What possible advantage would be gained by appealing to the people because the Navy Bill is rejected by the Senate? Mr. Borden could and probably would come back with double the majority he has now. That would not increase the Government side of the Senate, nor would it modify in the least the bitter partisanship of the Liberals in the Upper Chamber. Mr. Borden could pass the Bill in the House only to have it thrown out again in the Senate.

The only result of the Senate's action will be to make Canada look small in its own eyes and in the eyes of the Empire. It can only hurt the Senate itself and the cause of the Liberal leaders who are responsible for the ill-advised action of the irresponsible Chamber.

THE UNIONISTS FAVOR NAVY THREE DREADNOUGHT INCREASE

Radical Pacificists Still Grumble at Expectation of New Vote

London, June 2.—A group of radical pacificists still grumble at the expectation that Churchill will propose supplementary estimates for three Dreadnoughts, which apparently are not forthcoming from Canada for the critical year of 1915. The Admiralty view was expressed by Churchill when he said, Whatever Canada's decision Britain will not under any circumstances fail in her duty to the overseas dominions and the Crown. These three ships are essential to the whole world defence of the Empire. If for any reason they are not forthcoming from Canada we must supply them. The Observer explains why they are essential. Without them the navy in 1915 will be one ship short of the bare sixty per cent. standard adopted by the Admiralty.

Moreover, if adequate provision be made for the Mediterranean the number of Dreadnoughts available for home waters will fall far from the superiority of five squadrons to three, which even Admiral Von Tirpitz accepts as a justifiable margin.

Thus even if the Canadian ships be cut perilously fine.

It is quite certain Churchill expected the proposal to have the whole-hearted support of Bonar Law and the Opposition.

Ambassador Says Reception to King in Berlin Indicates Friendship.

London, June 2.—Prince Max Lichnowsky, the German Ambassador to London, at the Anglo-German press banquet Saturday evening said he was deeply impressed by the warmth of the welcome which Germans of all parties gave to King George and Queen Mary.

"It proves," he said, "how unfounded and erroneous are all rumors of unfriendly feelings on the part of my countrymen and how fully they appreciate the visit of the British sovereigns as a fresh proof of the bonds of sympathy between the two courts and two nations. The visit will be remembered as a new token of the peaceful collaboration of the two countries."

MONTREAL A "DRY" TOWN

French Catholics and Branch Dominion Alliance to Fight Liquor Traffic to Finish

Montreal, June 2.—French Catholic temperance leagues, under the direction of the Anti-Alcoholic League, at the head of which is Judge Lafontaine, will hold a meeting on Wednesday night to formulate plans to unite with the Dominion Alliance branch in this city to bring about a vote on the question of making Montreal a prohibition town. The plans for the campaign will be formulated at a joint meeting of the two organizations to be held shortly.

Temperance advocates say Montreal has become the stronghold of the liquor interests, and it is here the fight must be waged, especially as the crusade has met with such success throughout the other parts of Quebec. Liquor interests are getting active, and a strenuous fight is expected. There is great jubilation over the action of the French section in coming out so strongly for a "dry" town.

COUNCIL TO CONSIDER BUILDING RESTRICTIONS IN RESIDENTAL DISTRICTS

Five New Fire Alarm Boxes to be Installed---Citizen Ferguson Claims He Lost His Leg Through Freight Cars Overlapping Sidewalk on Bethune Street

The City Fathers met in regular monthly session last night, Mayor W. H. Bradburn presiding. There were also in attendance Aldermen Johnston, Anderson, McIntyre, Duncan, Langford, G. Walter Green, Gordon, Duffus, Buller and Gillespie.

Mr. Alex. Ferguson, who lost his leg at the corner of Simcoe and Bethune streets in March last, by being struck by a G.T.R. freight while as he claims, walking on the sidewalk, appeared before Council with a view to ascertaining if he could secure from the city some redress for his unfortunate accident. Mr. Ferguson said the walk at the corner of Bethune and Simcoe streets is but 2½ feet wide and he was on the sidewalk when struck by the freight.

Ald. Gordon offered that the siding in question, (west side of the street) is the G.T.R's own property, they having secured a right of way from the late Mr. Stevenson. Subsequently Mr. Ferguson pointed out that on this particular siding at the point in question freight cars overlap the sidewalk to the danger of pedestrians.

Mr. Ferguson was instructed to state his case to the City Solicitor who in turn would report to the Legal Committee.

St. James' Church executive asked permission for the little folk to use that portion of the King Edward Park south of the church as a playground—the church authorities that in consideration of the young trees and the fact that the ground is not yet thoroughly sodded, it would not be wise to permit the park's use at this point as a playground at present.

Miss Catherine E. Wallace, wrote, asking if she might look forward to receiving this year an order for a monumental statue of the late Mrs. Nicholls, who contributed so much money toward the public weal of this city. Council will thank Miss Wallace for her reminder in this connection and assure her that, while financially speaking, the city is not prepared this year to provide for the cost of such a monument, arrangements will be made for the matter being actively taken up by next year's Council.

The Property Committee was instructed to consider the question of Council passing a by-law to restrict a man from depreciating the value of his neighbor's property by crowding a house on fifteen feet of ground as in the case at present on Princess street, and report. Council considers that it is high time that building restrictions should prevail in residential districts as well as within the fire limits, to guarantee property-owners against loss in value by reason of unfair building operations.

New Fire Alarm Boxes.

Ald. Gillespie submitted the following:

Gentlemen,—Your Fire, Water and Light Committee beg leave to report as follows:

1. Your Committee received tenders for 800 feet of fire hose and after examining them, recommend that an order be given to the Gutta Percha & Rubber Co. Limited, for 800 feet of paragon hose at $1.10 a foot and that the Mayor and clerk be authorized to sign and attach the Corporate seal to the usual form of agreement for the purchase of the hose.

2. Your committee recommend that the fire alarm boxes at the corner of St. Joseph and Gilmour streets be moved to the corner of St. Joseph and Charlotte streets and that five new fire alarm boxes be placed as follows:

One on Park street at Princess street.

One at the corner of Weller and Walton streets.

One at the corner of John and Bolivar streets.

One at the corner of George and Charlotte streets.

One at the corner of Benson avenue and Manning avenue.

Opening of Street.

A by-law authorizing the city Trust Commission to spend $3,000 and over in the purchase of land for the opening of a street from Bolivar to Patterson street, passed its several readings.

Smith St. Bridge.

The Mayor and Chairman of the Board of Works will again interview Mr. Denham, of the Quaker Oats Co. this morning on the question of retaining the old bridge at London street on conditions acceptable to all concerned.

A Question of Criticism.

Ald. Langford wanted a statement prepared for publication, explaining to the people the reason for adopting a pole line in the rear of properties in Centre City for commercial lighting.

Ald. Anderson second Ald. Langford's resolution to that effect, but the vote proving a tie, Ald. Anderson withdrew from the resolution.

His worship contended that this whole matter was a simple question of criticism of Aldermen and himself, and any Alderman who cannot stand such criticism should defend himself by letter in the press. And the matter rested at that.

City's Arbitrator.

On motion of Ald. Gordon, seconded by Alderman Buller, the chairman of the Power Committee was instructed to enquire into the qualifications, fees, etc., of any suggested arbitrator for the city in regard to expropriating the Peterborough Light & Power Company's plant.

NO BLAME IS ATTACHED JOHN A. LIDDELL'S DFATH

Last night the adjourned inquest on the death of John A. Liddell, who fell under the troops train on the night of May 23rd, and was killed thereby, was continued in the police court, with Coroner Dr. Greer presiding. The whole evidence went to show that the catastrophe was simply the result of an accident. At 10 o'clock the jury retired and later brought in the following verdict:

We, the jury empanelled to enquire into the death of John A. Liddell, find that he came to his death by accident, in jumping off the moving car at the C.P.R. station at Peterborough, on the morning of the 24th May. No blame can be attached to any person.

FRENCH GOVERNMENT TO HAVE A DEPARTMENT OF SPORTS

Idea is That Physicial Training of Rising Generation is as Important to the Nation as Art or Railroading

Paris, June 2.—The development of sport and athletics may shortly be taken under the direct supervision of the French Government, the idea being that physical training of the rising generation is quite as important to the nation as art or railways, and that it is in accord with the new spirit of progress in France.

The French Cabinet it is understood, has under consideration the question of asking Parliament to create an under secretary of State, who shall be attached to the Ministry of Labor, and whose duties will be solely to look after sporting affairs.

PINE TAR CORDIAL

Advertisements under above heads, 20 words and under, one insertion, 10c.; 3 insertions, 20c.; 6 insertions, 40c.

NUGENT'S SARSAPARILLA—PRICE FOR large bottle, 100 full doses, 25c. and well worth it, too. It's better to take no medicine at all than to depend upon cheap concoctions that are compounded to sell at low price and a big profit just because there is a large demand for certain remedies at certain seasons of the year. There are so-called Sarsaparillas offered to us to sell to our customers at 75c a bottle that would bring us a larger profit than Nugent's Sarsaparilla sold at 25c. Nugent's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, arouses the torpid liver, drives out all impurities, cleanses and tones up the system, and helps Nature throw off the dullness that comes from indoor life of winter. It arouses energy, brightens the eye, clears the brain, gives lightness to the movements. Nugent's Sarsaparilla is not the only thing you will find in this drug store. We make a specialty of Nugent's Remedies. Nugent Drug Co., 3[illegible] George St., directly opposite Crossman's store.

Fritter Batter

The general rule for fritter batter is as follows: Put one-quarter teaspoonful of salt into one cup of flour, beat the yolks of two eggs and add to them gradually half a cup of milk. Stir this slowly into the flour, beating until smooth. Add a tablespoonful of melted butter and stand aside for an hour or two.

If the weather is cold the batter can be made over night. In fact it will be improved by long standing.

Spiced Roast Mutton

Take any cut of young mutton suitable for roasting and prepare as follows: Rub well with a teaspoonful of salt, an even teaspoonful of pepper and place in an iron baking pan with six whole cloves, one dozen whole allspice, three tablespoonfuls of sugar, a third of a pint of water. Cover with another pan and bake in a moderate oven until half an hour before serving, then increase the oven heat and let it brown quickly. Baste often and add a little more water if needed.

Confined to His Home for Weeks.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on Varicose Veins. When I worked hard the aching would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope—but I dreaded it. I tried several specialists, but soon found out all they wanted was my money. I commenced to look upon all doctors as little better than rogues. One day my boss asked me why I was off work so much and I told him my condition. He advised me to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew they were square and skillful. I wrote them and got The New Method Treatment. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month's treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However, I continued treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I could only earn [illegible] a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am earning [illegible] and never loose a day. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment.

NEW BOOTS AND COMFORT

The business girl who is walking or standing more or less all day, and has no opportunity of resting her feet by wearing cosy slippers, is very dependent on her street shoes for her comfort. Much walking or standing enlarges the feet, and as soon as the days grow warmer the feet are likely to swell. If possible, then, new shoes should be bought at this season and worn a little, so that they will not pinch when they come into daily wear. It is very uncomfortable and a frequent source of blisters as well as of worn stockings when shoes are too large, but they must not be too small, and so the trying-on should always be done with thick stockings and when the feet are at their largest—towards evening. If the stockings fit badly the shoes may be blamed for the consequent discomfort. To ease new shoes stuff them with paper and sponge them for some time with hot water. If they press on any special spot wring a cloth out of hot water and apply it to the leather at the part that is strained.

WHY THEY DID NOT RETURN

Little Story Lacked Pathos Promised by the Altogether Gruesome Introduction.

"Talking about omens," said the ex-Canadian soldier, "a queer thing happened in the Boer war.

"A troop of mounted rifles were returning after a hard day's scouting to our camp near Middleburg, in the eastern part of the Transvaal. On our way back we had to pass the town cemetery, which was on the side of a hill. Near the gate of the cemetery stood a shed in which was kept the town hearse.

"The doors of this building were open as we were riding past, and in some manner the blocks which were usually kept under the wheels of the hearse must have become dislodged, for the hearse slowly moved out of the shed and rolled down the hill into the middle of our party, who scattered in all directions.

"The officer in charge of the troop ordered four men to dismount and take the hearse back. Now comes the queer part. Soon after this we went to Cape Town and took ship for home. Every man of that scouting party returned alive and well to Canada except the four men who handled that hearse. Not a man of that four returned."

The former warrior paused and heaved a sigh.

"Good men, true comrades they were," said he.

"Have another drink," said the bartender, "and tell us how the poor fellows died."

Silently the soldier drank to the memory of his comrades, set down the empty glass and edged toward the door.

"The reason they did not come back was because two of them got good jobs in Cape Town; the other two married Boer widows and settled down on farms," he said.

The Bluejacket's Kerchief.

It is not generally known that the bluejacket's black neckerchief, a survival of the service mourning for Nelson, is the best British silk obtainable, and that the Admiralty is a very fastidious customer. Two per man are issued annually, and many thousands of these discarded scarfs are subsequently worn by Jack's femininity. A pair of them make an excellent blouse.

The Care of the Teeth

Great care must be taken of the first teeth, even though they are temporary, for the better they are kept the longer they will last and the stronger will be the second set that follows them. The teeth, as soon as they are through, should be brushed each day with a soft brush, one in which the bristles will not come out. Every day the baby's mouth should be washed out, with a soft cloth or a bit of absorbent cotton, dipped in boiled water, or boracic acid solution. Most devices for "making teething easy" are useless, although the baby may be permitted to bite upon something hard, provided it is kept clean. If the child is unusually fretful, it is best to see a doctor. The trouble may be due to some other cause than teething.

A Royal Brew!

A good many men say that "Gold Label" is the finest Ale that we have ever brewed.

It's all a matter of taste. If you prefer a rich, old, creamy ale—that proves its quality by its delightful flavor—just try "Gold Label."

BRITISH HATERS AT WORK

Certain Irish-Americans and other jingoists across the lines are putting up a quite active campaign against the celebration of the One Hundred Years of Peace. But the idea of the celebration has appealed strongly to the people of the United States, as it has to those of Canada and the British Isles. The celebration is worthy of us all and the man who speaks against it is no true friend of any one of the nations or of human progress in general.

QUEEN MARY'S EDICT.

Fashionable English and American women in London have been greatly disturbed by the announcement that Queen Mary will refuse to receive any social function women who make a practice of visiting the famous gambling dens of London. She goes further and says that she will not consent to meet at the house of any friend women who are given to the vice of gambling. As a matter of fact, it is a royal edict of social banishment for such women.

This is one way in which members of the royal family of England can accomplish more good than ordinary people, for their word is final in a social way. Queen Mary has been called a Puritan, because she has the idea that as Queen her self-respect is as dear to her as if she were but a private citizen, but she is right. There is no good reason why as queen she should tolerate vicious practices she would not tolerate as a woman.

Social ostracism is to some women the most terrible of all punishments, and Queen Mary, by using it as her weapon, will be able to compel many women, jealous of their social position to live with the pretense of decency, whether they prefer decency or not. This, of course, is possible where social authority is established, but there is no way of exerting the same force in this country to compel social flunkies to conduct themselves with outward decency.

THE REAL HOPE

The one well established fact in the midst of much that is obscure regarding tuberculosis is that it is the most curable of diseases. One reason why "treatments" flourish is that apparently complete cures are a familiar thing in the course of ordinary tuberculosis, and that nothing seems to start these seeming cures more than some great hope. It is now known that practically every child reaching the age of twelve has or has had some form of tuberculosis. How the disease is acquired is at present a complete mystery; but it is almost certainly acquired in infancy. It is equally obscure as to why ten or twenty years later cians call them, should flare up into these tuberculitic "hearths," as physia virulent attack. But what is known is that less than one out of ten die of this disease, therefore that nine out of ten tuberculosis cases get well. What is yet more hopeful is that probably within fifty years the death rate from tuberculosis has been cut in half. Provided it is caught in time, this world-wide plague presents relatively little danger. That is why every person up to the age of thirty ought to be carefully examined for tuberculosis at least six months. It seems fairly clear that it is in no sense a hereditary disease; and if, as many careful workers now believe, the main mode of contagion is from the mother or father to the infant after birth, complete control of tuberculosis would then become merely a matter of sanitary organization. The tests for tuberculosis are simple and clear; they ought to be taught in the public schools. Then we should have little need of sanatoria, and still [illegible] physician with secret nostrums.

Headache Over the Eyes? Look For Nasal Catarrh

Catarrh Never Stops in One Place—It Spreads Rapidly—Often Ruins Health Completely.

In this changeable climate it is the little colds that drift into Catarrh. Unless the inflammation is checked it passes rapidly from the throat or nose to the bronchial tubes and then to the lungs. You can't make new lungs any more than you can make new fingers or toes, but you can cure catarrh.

The surest cure consists of breathing in the healing balsamic essences of CATARRHOZONE, which is simply a medicated vapor so full of rich curative properties that every trace of Catarrh vanishes before it.

"The soothing piney vapor of Catarrhozone is the most powerful medicine I ever used," writes Mrs. Edmond J. Christime, of Saskatoon. "Every breath drawn through the Inhaler sends a grateful feeling through the air passages of the nose and throat. Catarrhozone cured me of frightful headaches over the eyes, relieved me of a stuffy feeling in the nose, and an irritable hacking cough that had been the bane of my life for a year. My general health is greatly improved, my appetite and digestion are considerably better than before. Catarrhozone has been the means of giving me such health as I always desired, but never possessed."

Even though catarrh has a firm hold on you, and affects your throat, nose or ears, you can thoroughly cure it with Catarrhozone. Large size, guaranteed, costs $1.00; smaller size 50c.; sample size 25c. All storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

HER NEW HUSBAND

An Old Man Marries Young Girl, That He May Teach Her Wisdom.

BY FLORENCE E. CAMPBELL.

Mam'zelle Lisette Guitard was weeping in the hyacinth beds, and Monsieur Gaston Drouet wept, too, unreservedly. But then he was only twenty-two—four years older than Mam'zelle, nevertheless. Outside the night air was fragrant with the odor of hyacinths and jonquils, and the moon shone as brightly as it always shines in New Orleans in spring—that is to say, twice as brightly as anywhere else.

Ma'mzelle had stolen out of the house in which her father and mother and the two uncles and the maiden aunt and Sister 'Toinette and Brother Robert and the four bridesmaids and the ushers were busily rehearsing the part that they were to play at Ma'mzelle's wedding on the morrow. Monsieur Thiboult was fifty-seven and enormously rich, and it was to be a fashionable affair. Ma'mzelle did not love Monsieur Thiboult, but her parents did.

"Poor Gaston!" she murmured, laying her warm hand upon his icily cold one. "Tonight we must say goodby for ever."

And, being only eighteen, she could not help but feel a thrill of romance in the sadness of the separation.

"Angel! Beloved! Adored one!" exclaimed the young man, "I cannot let you go. Come with me now and let us be married somewhere. You do not love him, that old pig of a Thiboult."

"No, poor Gaston, I love you only," answered the little bride-to-be. "But consider, Monsieur Thiboult will give me much money and I shall make my parents rich; poor parents, who have slaved so hard for me."

"You shall not marry the pig!" shouted Gaston. "I will kill him first!"

"Hush, Gaston!" exclaimed the girl. "He will hear you. He prowls about his garden by night—yes, would you believe me, he is like a young man since he loves me, and he composes songs to the moon—as you do. He told me so himself."

Gazed With Wonder Into Her New Husband's Face.

"Kiss me, Lisette!" pleaded Gaston, drawing very close to her. "When you have kissed me you will no longer resist my entreaty. Then we will go—"

"No! No!" cried the girl, struggling out of his arms. "It is wrong. I am pledged to him. Let me go!"

"Lisette!" cried Uncle Henri from the door. "Where are you, little one? Come! We are to have cakes and wine."

For an instant Gaston hesitated; then, with a despairing sigh, he plunged through the hyacinths and disappeared into the darkness. Uncle Henri came down the path.

"Pest! Cats!" he exclaimed, throwing a clod of earth in the direction of the retreating Gaston. "Why do you roam among the flowers so late, little niece? Ah, it is the inspiration of Monsieur Thiboult! It is love for him! Never was any marriage so happy!"

see it, because it was quite dark under the eaves of the cottage. He followed her indoor.

The wedding was over and Monsieur and Madam Thiboult were seated comfortably upon the porch of their home. It was only a few steps to the cottage next door, occupied by the bride's parents, for Monsieur Thiboult had simply taken his bride home with him. That was his arrangement, and his will was law, for it was the will of a semi-millionaire. Madam gazed with wonder into her new husband's face. It was indeed wonderful to think that two hours before she had been Mademoiselle Guitard while now she was Madame Thiboult. Her silly little head was swimming with pride and astonishment, and the passion for poor Gaston was already buried, although deep down beneath the surface of things there was a little ache—if she had let herself perceive it.

But monsieur was very much older than she. She had never before noticed how red his face was, how white his beard and hair. He was an old, old man, and she wished he were young like Gaston. And suddenly the sense of her inexperience of life, the tragedy of Gaston's sorrow, and her own little fleeting happiness which had been accomplished at such a cost to him overwhelmed her. She began crying, and she looked at her husband timidly, as though she had done something that she ought not to have done.

Monsieur Thiboult had been smoking in the darkness. Now he laid his cigar aside and Lisette saw the red rim of it circle and descend and rest upon the rail of the porch. Her husband took her little hands in his and spoke to her.

"Do you love Gaston very much, Lisette?" he asked.

She started and then began sobbing convulsively. He knew then! He knew! How wicked she had been.

"Yes, I knew for a long time, my dear," said Monsieur Thiboult. "It must be quite two months since you have loved Gaston. And before that it was Leon Brevet; and before that Charles Bourget; and before that—who was it before that?"

Lisette was shaking with fear. He had known all the time, then, of these little childish love affairs!

"My dear little Lisette," said monsieur, caressing her cold hands, "listen to what I am going to tell you. I have never thought that you loved me—an old man like me, old enough to be your father's father. But I love you, just as though you might be my own daughter, and I married you because I knew that if I did not you would some day run away with Gaston or some other foolish young fellow and live a hard life and taste the realities of existence. And you are not made for hardship, my little Lisette. So I considered, and I thought to myself: 'If only she were a few years older and wise and knew the world, and had plenty of money, so that when the real love came she would know him and go to meet him.' Then I said to myself: 'How can you help her, you old fellow?' And the answer came to me: 'Marry her yourself, but let her be like your daughter to you, so that when you are dead she can inherit all your money and marry some young fellow whom she really loves.'" He paused. "My dear," he said, "I shall not live very long. The doctor told me that only last month. Perhaps one year, perhaps two—not more than three. And then, if you still love Gaston, you will go to him and make him happy, and your little head will be filled with wisdom instead of foolishness."

He pressed her to him and kissed her cheeks reverently. "Good-night, little daughter," said Monsieur Thiboult.

CHANGE WAS IMFERATIV

Trunks Had to be Made Smaller or Baggage Cars Made Larger

Discussing the order of the Dominion Railway Commission placing discriminatory charges on all trunks in excess of a certain size, Mr. J. E. Quick, General Baggage Agent Grand Trunk Railway, said in an interview "The problem of the increased size of baggage receptacles has been made acute for the railway companies by the fact that the width of baggage cars cannot be increased. They run as a rule, from 102 to 110 inches and baggage is stowed away in two rows so as to leave an aisle down the centre of the car. When the length of trunks is excessive this cannot be done. The cars cannot accommodate nearly so many trunks of increased length and so the number of baggage cars per train would have to be made greater. It is planned by the railway companies to allot only one baggage car per passenger train and when two have to be employed it increases the expense of haulage and the weight of the train as well as diminishing its speed, all of which are important factors in these modern days of high speed and fine estimates of the cost of operation. The carriers consider that it would be unnecessarily harsh to prohibit altogether large trunks but that the imposition of a moderate penalty will tend to discourage their use in future."

The non-stop reliability automobile run from Chicago to Boston, scheduled to start June 25, was postponed at a meeting of the contest committee of the Chicago Automobile Club. Assurances that the American Automobile Association is preparing to formulate stock car rules caused the club officials to let the run go over until October.

YATCHING.

Bristol, R.I., June 2.—"Nat" Herreshoff, designer of many successful defenders of the America's cup, will probably build a candidate for the defence of the cup next year against Sir Thomas Lipton, and a syndicate made up of former Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt, C. Oliver Iselin and some of the other older members of the New York Yacht Club will furnish the funds. That Mr. Herreshoff has expressed a willingness to accept a commission from the syndicate was learned tonight on his return from New York after a long conference requested by members of the New York Yacht Club, who have been prominent in financing other cup racers.

A commission for a 75-foot yacht is expected here soon. It was understood that Mr. Herreshoff would accept, so that work on the boat would begin the latter part of the summer.

Teaching boys and girls to box is the hobby of Guy Otis Brewster, physical instructor of the public schools at Wharton, N. J. K

That his charges may get all possible exercise out of the sport and not be disfigured, Brewster has invented a wire protector for face, hea and body that looks like a baseball catacher's mask and chest protector built in two sections.

The protector, Brewster says, doe not interfere with freedom of movement, and the pupils can swing, hook and lead straight rights and lefts, duck, block and side step with perfect freedom, while the blows landing upon the heavily padded wire guards injure neither the one punched nor the one doing the punching.

THEIR NEW DOCTOR

Excitement in Mayville When Old Physician Is Supplanted by Young Man.

By MILDRED CAROLINE GOODRIDGE.

There was great excitement in the social circles of Mayville when the successor to the practice of old Dr. Cyrus Dall arrived. For forty years the latter had been the chosen physician of the town. When he had sold his practice to Dr. Brian Eversley, a young, handsome and wealthy member of the profession, all Mayville was agog, and speculation and gossip held the various social coteries in a kind of pleasant thrall.

The young doctor had purchased The Oaks, a beautiful estate near the edge of the village. A maiden sister was to be his housekeeper. When a new automobile and some wonderful house furnishings arrived, Miss Cyrille Rushton, aged thirty, but passing for twenty-two, as the real leader of the real social set of Mayville, was said to brighten up at a chance to once more angle for a husband. When it was further announced that the young physician was philanthropically inclined, Miss Breda Dorman, president of the Ladies' Aid society, was in transports of anticipation and delight.

The young doctor arrived, and he was not a disappointment. He was something more than handsome—earnest, affable and intellectual. He was pleased at the gracious attentions of Miss Rushton, and it seemed to interest him to listen to the ceaseless chatter of Miss Dorman. High society shrugged its shoulders at his "free dispensary" ideas for the benefit of the poorer classes living over on the flats. Still, an exhibition of his skill in their own service caused him to be received as a fit successor to the old practitioner, Doctor Dall.

The Ladies' Aid society held weekly meetings in an old store, which had been neatly fitted up for them. A Mrs. Fulton lived in apartments behind, and kept watch and ward over the place. Miss Rushton had recently joined the circle, and Miss Dorman had never been so active in her supervisory duties. The society clothed little, however. She acted as the ornament of the group. As to the haughty Miss Rushton, all she pretended to do was to donate the raw material for the really industrious ones of the club to sew into garments.

"Miss Lane!" He Exclaimed in Wonderment.

One of these latter was Nettie Lane, who sat in a corner of the room now, engrossed in the task of making four tiny night robes. The rest of the group were chattering and gossiping. Whenever Doctor Eversley's name was mentioned, Nettie's eyes brightened with interest. It was mentioned very frequently.

"The way Cyrille Rushton has set her cap for the doctor is simply brazen," observed Sarah Bates, who had graduated into old maidenhood several years ago.

"Not half as bold as Breda's sly puss way," broke in cynical, wasp-armed Selina Marton. "She pretended to have neuralgia, just to get the doctor's attention."

Plain, quiet Nettie smiled to herself. She was happy in knowing that the doctor had made quite a friend and confidant of her. Miss Eversley had taken a decided fancy to her. Nettie was, in fact, very close to the doctor; something in their natures harmonized. Miss Eversley had seen through the feigned illness of several young ladies who had called for her brother's professional care. She had laughed over these plausible subterfuges with Nettie.

If anybody had told Nettie that these ripening friendships indicated a chance to capture the handsome young physician, she would have been overwhelmed with confusion. Such an idea had never entered her sensible little head. For all that, she knew she had never met a man whose kindly, human spirit had so awakened respect and admiration in her pure, gentle soul.

"And what do you say of all this babble, our little busy Dorcas," challenged Miss Bates, noticing the unobtrusive Nettie.

"I only know that Doctor Eversley is a very splendid man," replied Nettie softly. "Why, I am making these little trifles for a child who belongs to a family that the doctor has practically taken charge of at his own expense. He is a good, good man."

Nettie grew so enthusiastic that she flushed consciously. Miss Bates gave gave her a keen look and whispered to Miss Morton.

"It can't be possible that little nobody has ideas—"

"About the doctor," said Miss Morton. "Oh, ridiculous."

Nettie finished her work somewhat later and went home. Miss Rushton came in, then the lady president, and then a messenger arrived. He brought a note from Doctor Eversley. It was addressed to the society. A contagious sickness had broken out, in a poor family without means or friends. Could the society appoint some one to give half a day for a week to day nursing for two little children in the family?

There was dead silence at the word "contagious." Miss Rushton had an urgent engagement. Miss Dorman talked of "volunteers." The group gradually broke up and the doctor's note received no reply.

That afternoon Doctor Eversley's automobile stopped in front of the poor home where his services were so sorely needed. He was a trifle disappointed at receiving no recognition of his message, and had decided to enlist the sympathies of his sister. His knock brought a neat figure wearing nurse cap and apron to the door.

"Miss Lane!" he exclaimed in wonderment.

"Yes, it is I," Nettie smiled back. "A neighbor told me of this case, and I have so wished to see if I have the patience and skill to act the nurse."

"You are an angel," said Doctor Eversley with heightened color as he entered the sick room.

Never had a poor family such royal donations as those received by the one now under the care of Doctor Eversley as physician and Nettie Lane as nurse. Miss Rushton sent delicacies from her table every morning. The Ladies' Aid society invested all its surplus funds in sheets, pillow cases, comforters, an invalid chair and clothing.

That dread word "contagious" made greetings on the street quite few and far between for the doctor. His sister, however, was visited daily by the anxious young ladies, hoping the dear doctor was not overworking himself, that the dreadful disease would not spread, and eager to learn the real sentiments of the Eversleys as to "poor Miss Lane, who was just cut out for a nurse."

When the truth got out that the contagious feature of the case did not extend beyond light measles, Miss Rushton bit her lip and Miss Dorman denounced Nettie as a schemer.

"This is one of the great pleasures of a physician's life," said Doctor Eversley, as he and Nettie walked away from the home where they had taken the part of true ministering angels.

Nettie fully understood him. They had found the poor home filled with squalor, illness and suffering. They had left it supplied with the comforts of life and the inmates happy and hopeful.

There came a day when Miss Rushton took a sudden journey to relatives, and Miss Dorman resigned from the Ladies' Aid society. Two lines in the weekly announced an important engagement.

"You see, my brother is a very practical young man," was the way Miss Eversley explained the situation. "He thinks, as I do, that a good nurse makes a good doctor's wife."

King's New Farm

For the sum of $60,000 King George purchased Shernborne Hall Farm, lying to the north of Sandringham, which is now practically ringed round by the King's property. The hall farm is occupied by Mr. C. R. Byford, and it consists of some 700 acres, and a castellated house, surrounded by a moat.

Many years ago the farm was bequeathed to Emmanuel College, Cambridge, and an interesting clause in the agreement between the college and the tenant, which has existed for

Imperial Bank of Canada

PROCEEDINGS

OF THE

Thirty Eighth Annual Meeting of the Shareholders

Held at the Banking House of the Institution in Toronto, on Wednesday, 28th May, 1913, at 12 noon.

The Thirty-eighth Annual General Meeting of the Imperial Bank of Canada was held, in pursuance of the terms of the Charter, at the Banking House of the Institution, 28th May, 1913.

There were present:—Messrs. D. R. Wilkie, Hon. Robert Jaffray, Wm. Ramsay, P. Howland, C. Mulock, W. H. Merritt, M.D., W. J. Gage, H. Crewe, James Bicknell, K.C., C. M. Gripton (St. Catharines), Wm. Crocker, H. Vignon, Hon. Richard Turner (Quebec), S. Jeffrey (Port Perry), J. K. Fisken, R. W. Thompson, A. A. Thompson, M. Robinson, J. G. Boyce F. McPhillips, J. Tower Ferguson, A. P. Burritt, Rev. T. W. Patterson, L. H. Baldwin, M. E. S. Baldwin, A. E. Ames, E. Hay, O. F. Rice, W. Gibson Cassels, G. Howland, James McIntyre (Whitby), M. Morrison, R. H. Davies, E. K. Sooley, Major Keefer, J. K. Niven, B. Pontifex, T. Armstrong, G. Osler, Colin Osborne, G. G. Le Mesurier, A. A. McFall, Andrew Semple, J. H. McIntosh, David Kidd (Hamilton), J. H. Hallam (Port Hope), A. Foulds, J. C. Black, J. W. Beatty, F. H. Gooch, R. Carswell, F. Roper, J. C. Moore, A. Boyle (Niagara Falls).

The Report

The Directors have much pleasure in submitting to the Shareholders the Thirty-eighth Annual Report and Balance Sheet of the affairs of the Bank as on 30th April, 1913, together with Statement of Profit and Loss Account, showing the result of the operations of the Bank for the year which ended on that day.

The net profits of the Bank after making full provision for all bad and doubtful debts, for interest on unmatured bills under discount, and for payment of all Provincial and other taxes, amounted to		$1,125,971.61
being at the rate of 17.28 p.c. upon the average paid up Capital, or rather, of 7.61 p.c. upon Capital, Reserve Fund and Undivided Profits, all of which sources of profit must, of course, be taken into the calculation in determining the actual percentage of profit earned upon Capital from the operations of the year. There was received from Shareholders by way of premium upon new stock (issue 1912) the sum of		788,169.18
which with the balance of Profit and Loss carried forward from 1912		1,022,787.88
makes a total available surplus as on 30th April of		$2,936,928.67
This surplus has been applied as follows:
(a) Dividends have been paid at the rate of 12 p.c. per annum amounting to		$ 780,668.91
(b) Special contribution to Officers' Pension Fund, as per By-Law No. 29		20,000.00
(c) Annual contribution to Officers' Pension and Guarantee Funds		7,500.00
(d) Transferred to Reserve Fund		1,000,000.00
(e) Written off Bank Premises and Furniture Account		124,771.21
Balance carried forward to Profit and Loss Account, 1913		1,003,988.55
		$2,936,928.67

New Branches have been opened during the year:

In Ontario—At Aurora, Fort Frances, Sparta, and a second sub-branch at St. Catharines.

In Saskatchewan—At McLean.

The Branch at Golden City (Porcupine) has been closed.

The desire of your Directors to establish the Pension Fund of the Bank upon a firm and substantial basis, and the advantages to the Bank which your Directors believe will accrue therefrom, induces them to ask your authority to grant a further special contribution of $20,000 to the Fund. This sum will do little more than keep the Fund abreast of the probable requirements of a steadily increasing number of employes and maintain a proper proportion of the one to the other.

The Bank Act is undergoing its periodical revision by Parliament; several important changes have been made, additional powers of a minor character have been granted, restrictions have been introduced and safeguards have been provided by way of the establishment of a system of audit which will add to the strength and security of the Chartered Banks without interfering with legitimate sources of profit nor with the best interests of the Shareholders. It is intended that the new Act should come into operation on 1st July, 1913.

The Head Office and Branches of the Bank, now numbering 126, have been carefully inspected during the year, and your Directors have much pleasure in testifying to the faithful and efficient manner in which the staff have performed their respective duties.

The whole respectfully submitted.

D. R. WILKIE,
President.

WASHING BY SEE-SAW

Mother of Romping Youngsters Now Lets Them Wash Their Own Clothes

Mrs. Sarah Sewell, an Ohio Woman invented a device which can not be called impractical, even if at first blush it does not seem destined to produce an undue amount of cleanliness. Observing her small children at play on a seesaw, the while she worked hard revolving the mechanism of a washing machine, she conceived the idea of making the seesaw do the work, giving her time to enjoy life. She patented her idea and it is a complete success, which shows the beauty of possessing at once several children and an inventive brain by which they may be made to wash their own clothes, and at the same time have a good time.

The Dog in Politics

An Italian paper has been collecting instances where dogs were used to influence politics or express the political feelings of their owners. We are told that in 1894, when bilingual teaching was imposed on Istria, dogs were painted black in sign of mourning; in 1897 a candidate for the town councillorship of Milan decorated his Newfoundland with a scroll inscribed: "Vote for the Socialist." The following year this was "imitated" in London, where numbers of dogs wore mantles on which were written "Vote for Chamberlain."

VALUABLE LAND WITHOUT OWNER

That areas of valuable freehold building land in an English agricultural county should be apparently unowned does not appear very probable at first sight, but the fact remains that in one of the most productive areas of Hampshire, and in the heart of a rapidly growing urban district there are now several plots.

Fleet, a small town within a few miles of Aldershot, with a population of 3,500, has greatly developed of late years, and five or six years ago two or three of the principal streets were "made up" by the urban district council under the Private Street Works Act. The cost was apportioned to the frontages, but in a number of instances the owners of vacant plots of land could not be be traced.

The amounts apportioned to them were entered in the council's books, and there they remained ever since, unpaid, and with little likelihood of the owners appearing to make payment. The council therefore erected notice-boards on at least five plots of land in different parts of the town, informing the owners, known or unknown, that unless the sums due are paid the land will be sold. In two or three cases the charge only amounts to about $20 while the land is in some instances worth $5,000.

NAVAL ENTHUSIASM

More Than Enough Australians Offering to Serve on Ships

No difficulty, except that brought about by the number of applicants in excess of the accommodation, was experienced by the Australian Naval authorities in their recruiting operations. It was found necessary to call a halt, as the cruiser Encounter and the training depots were provided with their full complement of recruits. The naval officers were pleased that their predictions that Australians would take to the sea as readily as the young men of Great Britain were fulfilled.

For an examination of Naval College applicants there were 24 vacancies. Victoria alone, which was allotted 7 of them, produced 70 candidates, and it was stated by the naval authorities that they could obtain in that State sufficient boys of excellent type to fill a college roll.

TO PROTECT SHEEP

Lantern and Gun Keep Wild Animals at a Distance

A device to protect sheep from the inroads of wolves, coyotes, and other animals is the invention of a Westerner. The machine consists of an automatic gun which shoots a blank cartridge every thirty, forty, or sixty minutes, as arranged, while a bull's-eye lantern is so adjusted as to revolve and flash its light in every direction. It makes more than one revolution a minute, operating by means of a coiled spring and cog wheels, a sort of clockwork, in fact. The mechanism is inclosed in a storm and dust proof metal case and mounted on four adjustable legs. It has a weight of 25 pounds, so that it can be carried with the sheepman's outfit with no difficulty.

ROBERT BURNS' RAZOR

Interesting Relic of Scottish Poet Sold in London

There came under the auctioneer's hammer in London a rare personal relic of Robert Burns, and one of peculiar interest to those who value the intimate belongings of great men. It is the last razor that Scottish bard ever used, and belonged to David Paterson, a citizen of Liverpool, who bought it eleven years ago at the dispersal of Edward Quaile's collections of antique gems and curios.

In 1898 the razor was presented by Robert Burns, junior, to William Dunbar, who in 1865 passed it on to T. A. Porter, from whom in 1872 it went to J. Harris Gibson. It came into Mr. Quaile's possession in 1876, and remained one of his most prized possessions till the day of his death.

Canada's Coal Consumption

The consumption of coal in Canada has increased from 2,400,111 tons in 1886, to nearly 30,000,000 per year at present. During the same period the coal consumption per capita has increased from 0.758 tons to 3,349 tons.

GREAT AUK'S EGG?

Maybe, but Nevertheless, It Arrived at the Breakfast Table in a Scramble.

By MARGARET MANNING.

Professor Ferdinand Brinckhofen wandered into the kitchen of his summer bungalow, on the Maine shore. His wife was washing the dinner dishes.

"Ellen, my dear," he said, "Doctor Cavendish, of the Natural History museum, will be here this afternoon. Can you get up a meal for him? He has to start back tomorrow morning."

"I suppose so, Ferdinand," answered his wife, a little tartly. "You know, of course, that we haven't much in the house to offer a guest. However, I'll do my best, and if he will be satisfied with it he's welcome. Why is he coming all this distance just to spend the night with us?"

Professor Brinckhofen put his arm round his wife's waist and kissed her.

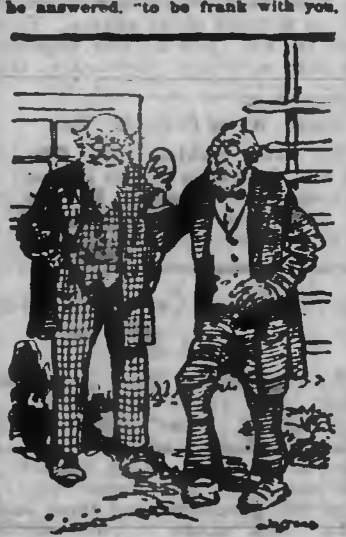
"I know you're busy, Ellen," he said. "Next summer we'll get a maid." And he wandered out, while his wife went on washing. She dried the last plate and set it aside.

"I wonder just why Doctor Cavendish is coming here for one night," she said to herself.

Professor Brinckhofen engaged a rowboat and pulled round to the railroad terminal, where he arrived just in time to greet Doctor Cavendish as his visitor stepped out of his car.

"Well, what did you think of my letter?" he asked, after the customary greetings had been interchanged.

Doctor Cavendish took his friend by the arm. "My dear old enthusiast," he answered, "to be frank with you,



"Good Heaven, Brinckhofen, It is! It is!"

I am sceptical—wholly sceptical. It sounds too good to be true. If you had told me that you had discovered a buried Indian village or a dozen asteroids I would have accepted your word without question. But a great auk's egg—no, my friend. You have probably mistaken the egg of a crested grebe or tufted puffin for that of the auk."

"But the great auk did range as far south as Maine in the last century!" cried the professor.

"And the last specimen was shot in 1844."

"No, Cavendish, in 1912. I tell you it was an auk. I shot the brooding bird, but it fell into the water and drifted out to sea before I could get a boat. But the egg—it was an auk's egg, and it was warm. I took it home and I'm incubating it."

"What does Mrs. Brinckhofen think of it?"

"She doesn't know anything about it, of course. I don't believe in telling my wife a professional secret. And the joke of it is"—he nudged Cavendish in the ribs—"it's incubating with a clutch of eggs that she set just last week under one of our hens. It couldn't be safer anywhere."

"Show me!" said Cavendish sceptically, and they entered the rowboat and, a few minutes later, rounded the point of land behind which the Brinckhofens had their bungalow.

"There was where I shot her," said the professor, pointing to the high, towering cliff. "I didn't mean to, either, but I was so excited that I couldn't bear to think of her getting away. Now, before we do anything else we'll go straight to the clutch."

They climbed the hill and entered the little garden of the bungalow. In one corner was the hen house, and, in the center, seated upon a clutch of eggs surrounded with straw, was a gray hen, which looked at them with malignant eyes and half opened her beak as though to protect her treasure.

"Shoo!" said Professor Brinckhofen, and the hen slowly rose and retired a few paces, where it crouched with flapping wings and an irate expression. Professor Brinckhofen plunged his hand into the clutch and drew out the precious egg. It was a little larger than that of a goose.

"Good heavens, Brinckhofen, it is! It is!" yelled Doctor Cavendish, and, carefully replacing it, he seized his friend round the waist, and the two graybeards executed a dance.

Mrs. Brinckhofen watched them out of the kitchen window.

"I suppose that is Doctor Cavendish," she said pityingly. "I wonder why they are dancing in the hen-house."

She sat down and meditated upon the subject until the men came in. Then she welcomed Doctor Cavendish with smiles.

"Come, Cavendish, I want to show you my laboratory," said Brinckhofen, dragging his friend away as soon as he decently could. They went into the professor's little bare room and began discussing the great discovery.

"Of course it goes to the museum, Brinckhofen," said Cavendish. "It will be worth a thousand dollars to you."

"A thousand dollars!" exclaimed the professor. "You are joking, Cavendish. Why, the egg alone would bring that at auction."

"Yes, yes, I'm speaking about the egg," said Doctor Cavendish irritably. "What are you speaking about?"

"Why, the auk, of course. Don't you know that I put it there so that it would hatch? Why, we'll have a real live bird, Cavendish. I shall sell it to the Zoological society, and I'll patch up the egg after it has hatched out, and I'll let you have that for a thousand. And the bird will lay more eggs, and I'll get a thousand apiece for those too, and—"

"I say," interposed Cavendish, "remember it isn't hatched yet. If I were you I would tell Mrs. Brinckhofen about it."

"Tell Mrs. Brinckhofen! Why, she'd tell the neighbors and they'd steal it or do something to it! Never trust a woman. No, it is safest just where it is."

They argued with some lack of equanimity until dinner time, when Mrs. Brinckhofen ejected them into the dining room.

"Hum! I'm hungry as a bear," said Doctor Cavendish, pulling his napkin across knees. "What have we here? Scrambled eggs? Fine!"

"I don't know whether you like scrambled goose eggs," said Mrs. Brinckhofen. "They say they're very nice. I found one under our biddy—it must have been laid by one of Mr. Giles's geese, for it wasn't there last time I looked. So I thought that as we hadn't many eggs I'd try what it tasted like."

"Woman!" gasped the professor, springing to his feet, "do you mean to say you—you scrambled that egg?"

"Yes, dear," said Mrs. Brinckhofen sweetly.

TRANSLATION A HARD MATTER

Few Make Success of Work, but There Are One or Two Instances Quite Recently Brought to Light.

Reading Shakespeare in a foreign language is generally a weird experience not without its amusing side. It matters little what language one selects, for Shakespeare has been translated into all of them, and the translations are in all grades of badness. Arthur Bennington writes in the North American Review. Similarly a Frenchman reading Corneille in English is moved to laughter or tears, and an Italian reading Dante in English scarcely recognises the divine poet.

Good translations are rare. For a faithful rendering of mere words much thought, backed by intimate knowledge of the subtle shades of meaning of the words of both languages is a primary requisite. But more than words are to be translated; thoughts, spirit, atmosphere, art, are more important than words. And it is in this that most translators are an exemplification of the old Italian epigram, traduttore, traditore.

This is not to say that every translator is a traitor. Among the cases in the desert are one or two of the more recent translations of Shakespeare. Continental Europe—Germany excepted—is really only just beginning to know Shakespeare as we know him. Italy is ringing with praises of Diego Angeli's version, of which four volumes—"The Tempest," "Julius Caesar," "Hamlet" and "Macbeth"—have already appeared. France was thrilled two years ago by Maeterlinck's translation of "Macbeth" and applauded De Gramont's "Julius Caesar" in 1906.

Lazy Man's Shoe

A new shoe for men is laced in front but has an elastic section in the back so it may be removed without unlacing.

Use of Magnet

In a new German welding process magnetism is employed to deposit all of the molten metal at the exact spot desired.

A back view of a handsome gown made by the famous Beer in Paris for an English lady. The dress proper is of white satin with white pearl embroidery on the train, which is a pointed affair, and on the reveres and kimona waist. The great beauty of this costume is the way the tunic is draped. This is made of black tulle, embroidered with pearls, and is put on a little full at the high waist line and brought up into a puffed pannier below the knee.

THOSE WHO DO NOT THINK

Eskimos Believe It Is Not Necessary If They Have Enough Meat to Eat.

Where the physical struggle for life is at its keenest, as it is among the Eskimos, the years glide by free from the more subtle cares and worries of the civilized man. The Eskimo, says Mr. Knud Rasmussen in "The People of the Polar North," does not count the days, and keeps no record of time. All his thoughts are centered on hunting.

Once I asked an Eskimo who seemed to be plunged in reflection, "What are you thinking about?"

He laughed at my question, and said: "Oh, it is only you white men who go so much for thinking! Up here we only think of our flesh-pits, and whether we have enough for the long dark of the winter. If we have meat enough then there is no need to think. I have meat and to spare!"

I saw that I had insulted him by crediting him with thought.

On another occasion I asked an unusually intelligent Eskimo, Panigpak, who had taken part in Peary's last north polar expedition:

"Tell me, what did you suppose was the object of all your exertions? What did you think when you saw the land disappear behind you and you found yourself out on the drifting ice-floes?"

"Think?" said Panigpak, astonished. "I did not need to think. Peary did that!"

Eating becomes the great thing with the Eskimos. I once excused myself, when paying a visit, with the plea that I had already eaten and had had enough. I was laughed at, and the answer I received was:

"There thou talkest like a dog! Dogs can be stuffed till they are satisfied and can eat no more; but people—people can always eat!"

More Dead Than Living

In Ingersoll, Ontario, the Home of the Dead is larger than the City of the Living. Of course, that statement is made with a reservation. Many of those who have been buried in the cemeteries of Ingersoll lived in the surrounding country and not a few came from a distance, although they were former residents of the town. But the fact remains that there are more people in the cemeteries of Ingersoll than are at present living within the corporation. Ingersoll's Home of the Dead is inhabited by about 5,200 people. The latest Dominion Census returns show that the population of the town is 4,763. This leaves a margin of about 500.

MEMORIES OF IRVING

His Son's Tale of Snobbery at a Famous Public School

Mr. Laurence Irving, younger of the two actor sons of Sir Henry Irving, at Bristol, received from the British Empire Shakespeare Society a bronze tablet which is to be affixed to the house in Bristol where Irving, then John Henry Brodribb, lived as a boy.

Comparing his father with Macready, the great Shakespearian actor of a generation before, Mr. Irving said Macready never entirely recovered from the fact that he had a public school education—he never quite got the public school contempt for players out of his mouth.

"I shall never forget when, at the tender age of ten, I became a student at Marlborough College the astonishment and dismay with which I found out that the boys regarded with undisguised contempt the occupation which had already rendered my father one of England's most celebrated men.

"But I did not entirely bow my head before the verdict of the boys of Marlborough College. I caused blood to flow from the nose of the overweening son of an apothecary named Nicholson.

"Like Kean, my father had known what it was to be hissed and hooted at, as well as to be in great financial need, and like Kean, he had ultimately aroused such storms of enthusiasm as are only evoked in the theatre when an unexpected meteor rushes into view."

TAKING BABY'S PICTURE

Advent of Cheap Camera a Boon to Baby Worshippers

"The average baby of to-day," said the grandfather of one, "is as much pictured as royalty. I don't mean that this baby's picture gets into the newspapers as often as the Prince's does, but there are as many taken of it for home admiration.

"I can remember back to the time when far fewer pictures of babies were made, when the only pictures of anybody other than painted portraits, were those taken in the old time daguerreotype galleries. To take a baby to one of those galleries was something of a task; and when you had got him there might not be awake, or he might not be good humored. In various ways this picture taking was an operation that might involve many difficulties; and then, besides, it cost money; and so in those old days if you managed to get four pictures of the baby in its first year you were doing very well.

"But now? Why, now, with the wonderful and inexpensive little modern hand camera with which pictures can be taken whenever the baby is in a happy mood, we take pictures of him in his first year almost daily, and in many situations.

"The baby is photographed at various ages held in the arms of its mother; in the arms of its father; and if, as may happily be, all its grandparents are living the baby is photographed held by each and every one of them. Also, it is photographed held in the arms of each of its aunts and uncles.

"And then the baby is photographed in all its various apparel; in its first short clothes; and with hat on and hat off; and in its carriage. When I come to consider the many times and occasions on which we take the baby's picture I am inclined to think that in that first year we take a hundred pictures of him."

STILL LIVES AS QUEEN

Though Long Years in Exile Eugenie Retains Old-time Royal Etiquette

The aged Empress Eugenie has now spent 42 years of her life in exile, but still likes to retain in her home the royal etiquette she enjoyed at the height of her fame and beauty as the wife of Napoleon III.

For instance, at her English home, Chislehurst, her week-end guests are all expected to bow low when the Empress enters the drawing-room before dinner. In spite of her great age, the Empress can still make a stately courtesy, and this she does, taking in all the guests with the one bow, and afterward proceeding alone before her guests into the dining-room.

In the little hotel where the Empress frequently stays in Paris she is treated by the manager and servants just as if she were still Empress. These little attentions please the old lady immensely.

These little weaknesses of the Empress Eugenie appeal to her friends, but the same cannot be said of the Duke d'Orleans, who has sold Wood Norton to Sir Charles Swinfen Eady.

The duke has announced that his wife's health does not permit her to remain in England, but clubmen in London tell a very different story. They say the duke was so unpopular he could never get guests to stay at Wood Norton, where he kept up a ridiculously regal state, even to making servants walk backward from his presence.

Englishmen never forgave the duke for his ingratitude to his country, which he displayed by grossly affronting Queen Victoria at the time of the Boer war.

ELECTRICITY FROM PEAT

Bavaria Trying Out Commodity of Which Canada has Deposits

European engineers are engaged in the investigation of methods of utilizing peat as fuel in electric stations. Southern Bavaria, for instance, has vast fields which would serve to run electric plants of large size and this would give a great reserve of power. The peat bogs lie mainly in the region of the Danube, and are estimated to cover an area of 500 square miles. Supposing the peat layer to be only three feet in thickness and the cubic foot of peat to afford but three pounds of fuel, this will mean a supply of fifty million tons. The fuel can be burned under boilers or it can be used in special producers to secure a supply of gas for industrial purposes.

Lizard in Stomach

Miss Melrose Pickell of Melrose Highlands, Mass., ate shrimp salad and then was very ill. Ordinary remedies for acute indigestion failed to have any effect and finally by the aid of a stethescope, a physician discovered that there was something alive in the woman's stomach. A head of boiled lettuce was held at Miss Pickell's mouth, and in a moment a very much alive lizard made its escape.

BIRCH BARK CLOTHING

Port Arthur Finlander Sets a New Fashion in Men's Apparel

The latest novelty in men's wear consists of a coat constructed of birch bark. The coat was worn by a Finlander who passed along the thoroughfares of Port Arthur, Ont., seemingly unconscious of the curiosity aroused by his novel upper covering.

The material was strips of the inner bark about an inch wide and of indeterminate lengths. These strips were interwoven after the manner in which a basket is made, but were shaped to the form of the body.

From the neck, part of the strips were carried down to the shoulders and continued to the wrist for the arms. The strips were woven diagonally down the front and back and turning up at the bottom of the coat were carried on the same plan up to the collar thus forming what tailors call a self-lining.

The coat was made double breasted held together by hooks and strings. The only part of the garment that was not knitted together was that under the arms, where strings were used to form the union. The reason for this probably was to make the arms more pliable, for while the coat was not exactly board-stiff it was not what one could truthfully designate as wholly pliable.

Fellow countrymen who accompanied the Finlander said that three hundred feet of birch bark strips were used in the construction of the coat and that it took three days' time to complete the garment.

ELECTRIC COOKER

Series of Air Chambers Provide Even and Lasting Heat

Since fireless cookers invaded the home a few years ago a number of such devices have been patented. One of the latest is this electric cooker. A cabinet has a double drum casing inside of it, with space between the two drums. There is a baking oven inside of the smaller of the two drums, with space around it. There is a heat unit in the upper part of the oven, a second heat unit below the oven and a heat-retaining element under the latter. These units are connected with an electric current, and when the current is turned on the heat from the two spreads out through the air chambers and meets. The oven is thus kept at exactly the same heat all round until such time as its contents are done, when the current is automatically shut off by a time clock.

DANES IN CANADA

Vice-Consul at Ottawa a Great Factor in Bringing Out Fine Settlers

Perhaps the only Danish family in Canada that can boast of being represented by four generations residing in the same locality, is that of Vice-Consul Meyer, of Ottawa. The eldest, Mrs. Anne Jorgensen, is still hale and hearty; then come her son, Carl Conrad Meyer; her grand-son, C. Robert Meyer, and her great-granddaughter Baby Anne Meyer.

Mr. Meyer is one of the most distinguished Danes in this country. Ever since coming to Canada in [illegible] he resided in Ottawa, where from comparative poverty he rose into the limelight of responsibility and nationwide esteem. Physically the consul is a typical Scandinavian.

Besides his diplomatic duties, Mr. Meyer is proprietor and editor of The Dannebrog, a weekly paper that he established in 1893. Through this medium he has been responsible for bringing many thousands of Danish immigrants into the northwestern provinces of Canada where, as agriculturists, they have prospered splendidly.

"I am a British subject," said the consul in an interview, "and a great believer in the naturalization of all who come to this country to make their living. There were very few Danes here when I came out and Ottawa had only 22,000 inhabitants, but I stuck to the ship, did all that I could for the benefit of my people, and I feel that I have pretty good results to show for it."

Fruit Salad

Soak half a box of gelatin in a generous pint of water, add the juice of two lemons and two cups of sugar. Bring to a boil and strain. When cold pour over two sliced oranges, two bananas, half a cup of cherries, half cup of English walnut meats as nearly whole as possible. Stand on the ice until it sets. Serve with whipped cream.

Removing Grease Spots

To remove grease from a light blue serge dampen a circle just outside the spot with turpentine and continue wetting until the center of the spot is reached. Never begin from the center of the spot or a ring will be left after the spot is out. When the place is saturated, put a piece of blotting paper under the material and another over it and press with a warm iron until the spot is gone.

Fat on Soup

When one has not time to let the fat on soup cool and harden, the skimming can be done very quickly and thoroughly with an ordinary kitchen ladle. Pass the ladle very slowly and firmly into the soup until one side of the rim is barely below the surface and the floating fat will run into it. Do not try to get it too full or the soup will run in also. By holding the ladle very firmly below the surface you can get all the fat and almost no soup.

A Bad Heart, Its Cause and Cure

Many, Firmly Convinced They Are Dying of Heart Trouble, Have Often the Strongest Hearts.

Sometimes you wake up at night, heart throbbing like a steam engine. Your breathing is short and irregular; pains shoot through the chest and abdomen, and cause horrible anxiety.

Your trouble isn't with the heart at all. These sensations are the outcome of indigestion, which has caused gas to form on the stomach and press against the heart.

Just read what happened to Isaac Malloux, of Belle River, Ont.:

"Three months ago I was a weak, sickly man. My appetite was poor, food fermented in my stomach, I had sour risings and indigestion. At night I would often weaken with gas in the stomach and heart palpitation.

"I consulted my doctor and used remedies that my friends advised NOTHING HELPED.

"One day I received a sample of Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and my cure commenced. To-day I have a vigorous appetite, strong heart action and no sign of indigestion. I feel younger and healthier than ever before."

Your druggist or storekeeper sells Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box or five boxes for $1.00. By mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Well-Known Lindsay Man Honored

Lindsay: Mr. Wm. Dundas was presented with a handsome diamond stick pin by the members of the firm of Dundas & Flavelles Limited, and the firm of Flavelles Limited on the occasion of his severing his connection with the above firm the other evening. Mr. and Mrs. Dundas are moving to St. Thomas.

"Sunny Jim" Soused—Smashes Pot

James Wilson, "Sunny Jim," a blacklister, was charged with being drunk. He pleaded guilty. Chief Thompson explained that Jim, called Sergt. Adams to the cell door and flung a pot full of tea at him, breaking the pot. He said the liquor was brought to his house by an umbrella-mender named Maher, who knew he was an "Indian." $13.75 to be paid forthwith or 30 days in Castle Nesbitt. It seems that the umbrella mender, to use a slang expression has "flown the coop" or left town.

WEDDING BELLS.

New Springett.

A pretty wedding was solemnized in St. Peter's Cathedral yesterday morning, when Ella Springett, the youngest daughter of Mr. A. J. Springett, of England, became the charming bride of Mr. A. W. G. New of this city. Rev. Father McColl, rector of the Cathedral, tied the knot.

Warne—Mulholland.

Early yesterday morning, All Saints' church, was the scene of a pretty wedding, when Miss Ida W. Mulholland, daughter of Mr. James Mulholland, Reid street, became the charming bride of Mr. Stanley Chas. Warne, of this city. The nuptial knot was tied by the rector, Rev. R. B. Grobb, M.A.

Only their immediate friends were present. The bride was given away by her father. Mrs. McClelland, organist of the church, played the wedding march.

The bride was becomingly attired in a navy blue broadcloth suit with hat, and carried a bouquet of bridal roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Warne, left for a honeymoon, to be spent in Toronto, Buffalo and New York. On their return they will take up residence on Gilmour street.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. R. A. Davey, of Campbellford, was a guest at the Oriental yesterday.

Mr. Geo. W. Thornton, Claims Agent of the C.P.R., was in the city yesterday looking after the inquest.

Miss Vera McNulty, of St. Catharines, has returned home after visiting friends here.

The Graham Brothers from Seattle Washington, are visiting their sisters, Chamberlain street and Lafayette avenue.

Miss Jeannette Kihmaster, of the Toronto Conservatory of Music, was the guest of Mrs. Rupert Gliddon, at the Conservatory over the week end.

THIS REMOVES HAIRS QUICKLY WITHOUT PAIN

(Toilet Talks.)

Troublesome, unsightly hairs on cheek, lip or chin can be quickly banished without resorting to the cruel electric needle or any other painful or expensive method. A paste made with powdered delatone and water applied to hairs not wanted and left on 2 or 3 minutes, then removed will take with it every trace of hair or fuzz. After the skin is washed and dried it will be clear and free from spot or blemish.

Eyebrows and eyelashes will be greatly beautified by using pyroxin. Rubbing a little on the brow makes them grow thick and lustrous, and applied at lash-roots with thumb and forefinger causes the lashes to come in long, silky and curly. Be careful and don't get pyroxin where no hair is wanted.

INTENSIVE FARMING

Ten Acres Too Large For One Man Says This Experimenter

Mr. F. W. Krouse, a former laborer at the Ontario Agricultural College, at Guelph, surprised his friends a few years ago by purchasing one acre of land for a farm. His gain from that acre after his house had been supplied with vegetables and small fruits figured up $425. He next bought one and a half acres more, filled up the existing gravel pits with soil, secured a few bees, and at the end of the third year after commencing bee-keeping his profits for the year were $2,700. "This was after the living for my household had been taken out, and in spite of the fact that I had hired no labor whatever," said Mr. Krouse. "I did the work myself. Then I bought seven and a half acres more of better land, but I find that a man can't work ten acres and work it profitably."

Copper and the Indians

Some of the wildest of the red indians tribes of North America discovered the use of metals. The Copper Knives are a tribe that found some copper ore on a mountain and learned how to make knives of it and other weapons. According to their legends, it was a wandering woman who took up a piece of the copper ore, being interested in its color. By chance, she left it by a fire, thinking it as a piece of stone that would not be damaged, and she was greatly surprised to find that the ore melted in the fire and produced a mass of bright and shining copper. She saw how useful the metal was and showed the copper to the chief men and then led them to the mountain where she had found it.

Northern Tragedy Recalled

A bronze tablet has been placed in the chapel of the Royal North West Mounted Police barracks at Regina to the memory of Inspector Fitzgerald, Constables Taylor and Kinney, and special Constable Carter, who lost their lives on patrol from Fort Macpherson to Dawson, in Feb., 1910.

Criminals in Canada

Canada's criminal population is comparatively small. This is largely because of the standard of living is good, and labor and prosperity are plentiful. According to latest figures Canada has 1,896 prisoners in her penitentiaries, divided as follows:

Kingston, Ontario, Penitentiary, 494; St. Vincent de Paul, Quebec, 442; Dorchester, New Brunswick, 230; Manitoba, 133; British Columbia, 231; Alberta, 167; Saskatchewan, 58. The cost of maintenance is about 84 cents a day for each prisoner.

MONEY BRINGS IMPORTANCE

Welsh Laborer Finds Himself Suddenly a Millionaire

Price Goodwin Beavan is the name of a farm laborer in Brecknshire, Wales, who is acclaimed as the heir to £200,000—one million dollars—left to him by his father, Richard Goodwin, who died in Texas. The farm laborer has employed a solicitor of Landrindod Wells to devote his time to securing the inheritance, and Price Goodwin Beavan has left the farm at Llwynfilly, exchanging his slouch hat, corduroys and gaiters for a new black suit and hard felt hat. Beavan is now being deluged with hundreds of begging letters for his money, besides which he is asked to contribute to scores of benevolent and church projects.

DOMINION GOVERNMENT TO ASSIST THE BANK DEPOSITORS

Announcement of Aid for Farmer's Bank Sufferers Expected Before Session Ends

Ottawa, June 3.—A correspondent learns on good authority that the Government has decided to give some assistance to the depositors of the Farmers Bank, but there will be nothing done this session. An announcement will likely be made before the close of Parliament that it has been decided to give some aid, but that it will not be dealt with until next session. There will not likely be any details given now as to what form the assistance will take.

The present outlook is that the House will close on Thursday, as the legislative slate has now been nearly cleared. There is no announcement yet as to what will be done in regard to an additional indemnity for the members. The idea of changing the indemnity has been dropped, but a $1,000 bonus, on account of the extraordinary long session, is what is now being considered.

BIG TRAIN OF SOLDIERS HELD UP BY CATERPILLARS

Kingston, Ont., June 3.—To be held up by caterpillars was the experience met with by the members of the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery while on their way from Kingston to Camp at Petawawa via the C.P.R. When the train arrived at Calabogie the train had to stop, and it was found that for a stretch of over three miles the tracks were covered with caterpillars two inches deep. Section men, with brooms had to be called, and the train, a double-header, was delayed two hours as a result.

MISSIONARY MAKES A HOT ATTACK ON ROMAN CHURCH

Rev. H. A. Burlis Rouses Congress to Great Enthusiasm By His Appeal--People Kept in Religious Slavery

Toronto, June 3.—"I appeal to you for the Slav immigrants, intellectually fettered, morally seared, bandied about by unscrupulous priests and designing politicians. I appeal to you to extend the work among them and bring them into that church, which we believe is the most faithful representative of that church of the New Testament, the Presbyterian Church." These words from a light-haired fiery Russian, delivered in a voice vibrating with passion broke the solemn calm of the Presbyterian Congress. It was the most striking moment in the Congress. Rev. H. A. Burlis, missionary to the Ruthenians, who came to Canada from Russia ten years ago was the man who caused the outburst.

He began by describing the people among whome he was laboring, "crushed for centuries in countries where a tyrannous ecclesiastical and social system has held sway." He told them after their arrival in Canada, "huddled in towns, in baffling-of-all-description overcrowding, falling a prey to the drunkenness which leads to fights. Look at the police court records, see statistics of the Social Service Board and you will see what happens to too many of the Slav immigrants. So many of them are illiterate, almost wholly ignorant of English. And attempts to teach them are hindered by rabid nationalistic leaders. These leaders are often supported by the agents of the Roman Catholic Church in the West. These agents say they want the people to remain as they are, so they keep them in simple ignorance, and simple abject religious slavery."

The audience applauded. Mr. Burlis became even more vehement.

"Poor Tools in Leaders Hands."

"These people remain poor tools in the hands of unscrupulous leaders. They are kept religiously stunted, kissing their miserable images, cross[illegible] themselves, receiving absolution from the priests at so much per head." Again there was a burst of applause.

"These people have become morally seared. They have no particular moral impulses left but a self love which sometimes breaks into rabid anarchism. They are intellectually fettered. They study what those sinister priests direct. They are politically helpless, bandied about by priests and politicians who bribe or intimidate them, and sweep them like sheep into the fold at election times. These are some of the peculiarities marking the Slavic immigrants, the Ruthenians, the Russians the Poles, the Macedonians and all the rest of them.

"What is the remedy? These people all need revitalizing touch of a living contact with Christ and His gospel. Legislative enactments and social experiments are all very well, but they are like slashing away at the branches of the tree of evil. To correct evil we must go to the root. The basal, the fundamental things in these Slavic peoples is their religious attitude. That must be transformed. The stunted, seared, fettered man of yesterday will have to be changed."

EDITOR MADE GOVERNOR OF THE PANAMA ZONE

Washington, June 3.—Richard L. Metcalfe, of Lincoln, Neb., editor of the Commoner, was to-day selected by President Wilson to be civil governor of the Panama Canal zone.

Mr. Metcalfe has been in newspaper work all his life, and came into national political prominence during the campaign of 1896 as spokesman for Mr. Bryan. Last year he ran in the primaries on the Democratic ticket for Governor of Nebraska, but lost.

LAWYER LENNOX WILL SEE MINISTER REGARDING GIBSON

Toronto, June 3.—Mr. T. H. Lennox, K.C., counsel for Charles Gibson, will leave to-night for Ottawa, to enter an application before the Minister of Justice for a new trial for the condemned man. It is probable that Mr. Lennox will be absent for at least a week, as he wishes to press the application in person.

It is understood that the request for a new trial will not be made on any technicality, but on the ground that enough new evidence has come to light since the trial to warrant a new hearing of the case.

Since taking the matter in hand, Mr. Lennox has carefully reviewed the evidence given at the trial, and interviewed a number of persons who are prepared to give evidence in Gibson's favor, and he is confident that the Minister of Justice will take a favorable view of the application.

The circulars headed "An appeal for justice and help," which members of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, the Christian Commercial Travellers, and others are circulating, have met with a ready response. Sergt.-Major Wilcox, of the Canadian Army Service Corps, turned in one of the papers to the treasurer of the fund, C. F. Storey, 122 Oak street, with [illegible] contribution of $9.[illegible], most of the contributors being members of the C.A.S. Corps. As there are 500 of these appeals in circulation it is expected that funds will be forthcoming for the appeal and defence.

ANOTHER FIANCEE OF MAN OF MANY WIDOWS

Fifth Woman In strange Case Only One Who Doesn't Say She Gave Him Money.

Chicago, June 3.—A fifth woman appeared last night in the strange case of the late Homer Edward Morrison, "man of many widows." She is Miss Eleanor Ostrander, who asserts she was to have married Morrison yesterday as W. E. Morrison.

Morrison, who died just a week ago, left three widows and two fiancees, and the police believe there are other women, who are mourning him as husband or bethrothed.

Miss Ostrander told detectives she met Morrison six years ago and during that time he took her to many places of amusement and gave her several substantial presents.

Before Morrison began courting Miss Ostrander, he had two wives. Two years after he began to pay her attentions he married again. He also found time to pay his respects to another woman, a widow, who says she was to have married him next month. She gave Morrison $1600.

Miss Ostrander is the only woman of the five who does not claim to have given Morrison considerable sums.

ALDERMAN M'BRIDE THREATENS TO RESIGN AND SUE THE CITY

Disgraceful Exhibition in Council Over Request of Church to Encroach Upon the Street Line--Personalities and Insinuations Indulged in--Mr. Wickett Protests Against the "Drivel"

Toronto, June 3.—As a striking evidence of the calibre of the City Council is the fact that the members wasted nearly two hours last night talking about a fence. Practically every member of Council insisted on making a speech. Personalities entered freely and for some time the Council Chamber was the scene of a burlesque beneath the dignity of the city and a disgrace on the principal actors. Ald. McBride was largely responsible for the farce, the garrulous gentleman talking unrestrained and stooping to a cross-fire of personalities, insinuations and charges of improper influence certainly unworthy of the council of any large city. A well-merited rebuke was drawn from Ald. Wickett in protest against the drivel and humiliating exhibition of petty jealousies. At best the discussion was only as to whether or not Council would do an illegal act.

Says Church Tricked Controllers.

The fiasco was started when Ald. McBride waxed wrathy and sarcastic over the request from St. Anne's Church for permission to place its fence some feet over the street line on Gladstone avenue. The Alderman from Ward III. told of Rev. Mr. Skey appearing before the Board of Control when Commissioner Harris declined to permit the obstruction. The trick had been done by a picture postcard, he said, and Controller Church was the first to fall for it. It was proposed to enclose an area of city property 11 feet deep by 130 feet frontage, and especially to a church which is not paying a nickel to carrying their own property except for local improvements.

"They will pay for all this property next year," Mr. McBride declared. "If I have anything to do with it and we can get the necessary legislation. They have the nerve to appear here and ask us to violate the law, which we have no right to do. Their application is in order to allow additional accommodation and keep their 'ping-pong' players inside. No other institution should throw open their lawns so freely to the children. Yet the Board of Control has fallen for a picture postcard. If this fence is put up I will see that it is removed. If they place that fence on city property I will issue an injunction."

BASEBALL

The Petes are still climbing up towards the top. Yesterday they took another game from Berlin, and the outlook is rosy for still another to-day. Belding pitched his usual good game and was held up by McNeal. The final score being 6—1 in favor of the Petes.

BEING POLITE IN CAR COSTS THIS MAN $60

Rudolf Gombert of Clarence Centre, N.Y., Says Pickpocket Relieved Him of $60 When He Gave Woman His Seat.

Lockport, June 3.—Rudolph Gombert, of Clarence Center, was robbed he says, of $60 shortly after 11 o'clock yesterday morning while a passenger on a Buffalo bound International trolley car. The money was in bills and was taken from his pocket.

Gombert boarded the car at Elm street. The car was crowded and at Pine street he arose and gave his seat to a woman. At the International depot he discovered his loss. He immediately notified the police and Detectives Costello and Lacy went to work on the case. Gombert is positive that he had the money when he boarded the car.

SYSTEM TO BE INVESTIGATED FULLY

General Scheme for Improvement of Penitentiary System, Will Introduce Legislation at Another Session

The announcement made by Hon. Charles Doherty, Minister of Justice, that he has been considering with a view to legislating, the question of the general reform of the penitentiary system, will be received with interest. There can be no possible question, stated the Minister in the House of Commons, that in the administration of penitentiaries there is room for vast improvement. He acknowledged that the whole subject of how best to deal with the convict, the man who has so conducted himself as to call down upon him punishment at the hands of society, is most intricate and difficult, and at the same time a most interesting problem. The minister went on to say:

General Scheme

"It is one that has caused a good deal of thought to the officers of the department and, I may say to myself, since I have occupied the position which I hold to-day, which makes me responsible for the administration of these institutions. I have had in mind some general scheme of improvement in the system. That is something that of course requires to be very carefully thought out, and a measure to bring that about is one that would necessarily call for serious consideration, and take up in that consideration not a little of the time of the House. For these reason I do not propose to attempt to deal with that subject in a general way at this session. I hope, later on, to be able to introduce legislation looking to the improvement of the entire system."

Such an utterance by the Minister of Justice, who is a wise and careful statesman, shows that the system of treating criminals in Canada will undergo important changes, and a great philanthropic work will have been accomplished. Last summer while in Europe, the minister visited France and England, and studied the different systems in vogue, and when he brings down his legislation the country will have the satisfaction of knowing that the most modern methods of dealing with the criminal will have been incorporated therein.

Tressie Pasco, the 15-year-old daughter of Mayor Pasco, of Moose Jaw was shot and seriously wounded while out with other Girl Guides.

SCHOOL BOARD TAKES EXCEPTION TO CITY COUNCIL'S CRITICISM OF ITS POLICY

So Far As School Requirements are Concerned the Tax Rate Need Not Have Been Raised at all--Increased Assessment Would Have More Than Carried Board's Additional Demands.

The Board of Education met in regular monthly session last night, Chairman Dr. Morrison presiding. There were also present Trustees John Crane, Col. Miller, L. M. Hayes, W. H. Hill, Dr. Middleton and Dr. Burnham.

Mr. R. A. A. McConnell, Misses Moore, Smith, Leary, McDonald and Real, all resigned from the public schools staff.

Government Inspector Leake's report on the Domestic Science and Manual Training Classes proved highly satisfactory. He especially commended the dining room feature of the work.

The Collegiate Institute classes will dismiss on Tuesday evening June 10th to allow of accommodation for examinations.

Land for Substation.

Col. Miller reported that the city Council's Finance Committee had suggested that the School Board give them a quarter of an acre of the south-west corner of the King Edward School grounds, on which to erect a fire substation.

Mr. Hill could not see why the Board should give away a portion of their school grounds for municipal purposes. Board might, however, consider a purchase price of $1,000 for the quarter of an acre in question.

No action was taken in regard to this matter.

Mr. Hill Takes Exception.

Mr. Hill objected to the city council's shouldering the onus for the increase in the tax rate this year upon the School Board. The Board, he said, was not responsible in any way for the jump in the tax rate from 23 to 25 mills. So far as the School Board's requirements are concerned the rate need not have been raised at all. The Board is only calling for an additional $8,000 over their demand of last year, and the city's increase in assessment would have more than carried that. In regard to the new schools being erected at a cost of $85,000, they are imperative to meet the growing educational requirements of Peterborough, and a quarter of a mill will take care of that amount's interest and sinking fund. "The School Board," he went on to say, "is not extravagant, and Council's frequent criticisms of our business transactions are totally uncalled for and misplaced." Mr. Hill here contended that the School Board should not be dictated to by the "Senate," of the city of Peterborough, and placed himself on record as opposing Council's senatorial attitude toward the Board.

Chairman Dr. Morrison endorsed Mr. Hill's stand in this connection.

Dr. Burnham here jocularly suggested that the Chairman and Mr. Hill meet Council and tell them what the Board thinks of them. This ended the discussion.

New Appointment.

Mr. O. M. Steers, graduate of Peterborough Normal School, was appointed vice-principal of the South Central School in the place of Mr. McConnell, resigned.

Report of Committee on Appointments.

To the Chairman and Members of the Board of Education,—

Gentlemen,—Your Committee on Appointments beg to report and recommend as follows:

1. That Mr. L. J. Colling, of Collingwood, be appointed to the position of vice-principal at one of the Public Schools. Salary to be according to schedule, and duties to commence 1st September next.

2. That Miss May L. Bristol Miss Jessie A. M. Graham, Miss Lillian Garbutt, Miss Margaret O. Seymour Miss Pearl Lapp, Miss C. S. Shaw and Miss Nellie G. Totten, be appointed on the Public School Staff at salaries according to schedule and duties to comence 1st September next.

3. That the following teachers be reappointed on the Public School staff and also the Kindergarten staff at salaries according to schedule adopted by the Board:

Messrs. H. A. Yenney, R. F. Downey, M. H. Park, M. N. Clark, F. J. Voaden, J. M. Roszel, W. J. Stacey W. H. Walkey, F. E. Kerr; Misses L. C. Cadwell, M. Armstrong, A. A. Staples, D. Morley, A. E. Peters, E. Jenkins, D. Fessenden, J. Jackson, J. M. Runnings, J. O. Bucke, M. J. Denne, L. Esplen, E. Thomlinson, E. M. Gordon, M. Cadwell, M. E. Stubbs, B. L. Thompson, M. Hallett, E. M. Morrow, M. Ross, M. H. Morrow, M. F. Erskine, S. Carmichael, J. F. MacKenzie, E. Thompson, E. Brown, L. Ord, E. Tomlinson, L. J. Elliott, P. S. Bennet, Mrs E. R. Brown, Misses C. Cairns, F. Jackson, E. L. Thomas, M. R. Warner, L. H. Rush, A. Cameron, A. Gillespie, H. Howson, E. Richardson.

4. That the following special teachers of Manual Training Household Science, Art and Music, employed jointly by the Education Department and the Board of Education, be reappointed at salaries according to schedule:

Mr. A. F. Hagerman, Misses J. McRae, E. R. Steinhoff and M. R. Rannie.

5. That the basis rate per class room paid to the Janitors (up to 8 rooms) be increased from $60.00 to $70.00, such increase to take effect from 1st June, 1913.

6. In the event of any of the teachers recommended for appointment being unable to accept, we would ask that your Committee be authorized to appoint the next in order of merit in each case.

Respectfully submitted,
W. H. HILL,
Chairman.

SEVEN MILLIONS IN C. N. R. STOCK FOR PEOPLE OF CANADA

New Policy In Railway Subsidies--Help to be Given to Canadian Northern Will be Offset by Large Block of Shares Placed to Credit of the Country

(Special to The Times)

Ottawa, June 3.—An important new policy in giving aid to railways has been developed by the government. Instead of giving direct assistance or making a loan as has been done in the past to the C.P.R. and the Grand Trunk, the government has made an arrangement with the Canadian Northern Railway, whereby in return for increased subsidies the railway is to turn over to the government no less than seven million dollars' worth of common stock which will be owned outright by the government for the benefit of the public. This will give the government a substantial interest in the Canadian Northern Railway, and in the future the government will have a voice in the control of that railway.

WHAT IT MEANS.

The ordinary railway subsidy is $6,400, and on two important sections of the C.N.R. there are to be subsidies of $12,000 a mile. The lines on which this additional subsidy is to be granted and in return for which the government is to receive stock are 910 miles of the C.N.R. from Ottawa to Port Arthur, a difficult section to build, and a necessary section for the linking up of the new C.N.R. Transcontinental. The other section is 200 miles from Edmonton to Yellowhead Pass. All these subsidies must be earned in the ordinary way.

THE WEATHER.

To-day—Fair and a little cooler.

Wife and I Are Friends of Instant Postum
"There's a Reason"

"I used to drink tea and coffee—was nervous and irritable. Wife said so.

"So when the new food drink, Instant Postum came along, she said to herself: 'Here's where I break Jack off the tea and coffee habit.

"Instant Postum is good stuff. I sleep better, smile more, and miss my indigestion.

A level teaspoonful of Instant Postum in an ordinary cup of hot water dissolves instantly and makes it right for most persons.

A big cup requires more, and some people who like strong things put in a heaping spoonful and temper it with a large supply of cream.

Experiment until you know the amount that pleases your palate and have it served that way in the future.

Postum comes in two forms.

Regular Postum (must be boiled).

Instant Postum doesn't require boiling but is prepared instantly by stirring a level teaspoonful in a cup of hot water.

PINE TAR CORDIAL

Advertisements under above heads, 20 words and under, one insertion, 15c.; 3 insertions, 25c.; 6 insertions, 40c.

NUGENT'S SARSAPARILLA—PRICE FOR large bottle, 100 full doses, 50c. and well worth it, too. It's better to take no medicine at all than to depend upon cheap concoctions that are compounded to sell at low price and a big profit just because there is a large demand for certain remedies at certain seasons of the year. There are so-called Sarsaparillas offered to us to sell to our customers at 25c a bottle that would bring us a larger profit than Nugent's Sarsaparilla sold at 50c. Nugent's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, arouses the torpid liver, drives out all impurities, cleanses and tones up the system, and helps Nature throw off the dullness that comes from indoor life of winter. It arouses energy, brightens the eye, clears the brain, gives lightness to the movements. Nugent's Sarsaparilla is not the only thing you will find in this drug store. We make a specialty of Nugent's Remedies. Nugent Drug Co., 326 George St., directly opposite Cressman's store.

SIX GENERATIONS

The Remarkable Longevity of a French Family

Writing to the "Echo de Paris," a correspondent declares that his wife who is twenty-one, has a little daughter of eighteen months. The baby's grandmother is forty-five, and this lady's mother is seventy-four and her grandmother ninety-five. These five generations are all Paris-born and bred, except the junior sprig, who saw the light in the suburbs.

From Libourne, however, another correspondent hastens to inform the world that a baby girl has just been born to him by his young sixteen-year-old wife. The following is the ascendant family tree in the feminine line of this newcomer into the world: Grandmother 33, great-grandmother 53, great-great-grandmother 71, and gerat-great-great-grandmother 88, whilst the mother of this last old lady died at the age of 106, just three months too soon to allow of her being one of the greatest of all great-great-grandmothers.

YACHTS AND YACHTING

Most of the Boats Registered by Lloyds Are on Power List

The total number of yachts owned in Canada, the United States and the West Indies, as shown by Lloyds Register for this year is 3,533, about 60 per cent. of which are in the power division of the fleet. The list, of course, does not include the open launches, whose numbers are at best a matter of guess.

The changes from last year are for the most part made up of the dropping of a number of the older sailing yachts, both small and large, and the addition of several sizes of gasoline cruisers, notably the handy and convenient little raised deck launch of 23 to 35 feet length. The additions of the sailing division of the fleet are comparatively unimportant, and the conversion of sailing yachts to auxiliaries which went on so rapidly several years ago is less marked, for the reason that most of the outclassed sailing yachts have been already converted, and the older ones, dating from the early Burgess era about 1885, are being sold for fishing or for breaking up.

The club list in the register now includes 578 clubs and 39 associations and miscellaneous organizations. These clubs are distributed along the Atlantic coast from Cape Breton Nova Scotia, to Jamaica, in the West Indies; inland they cover every lake and river of any importance, and on the Pacific coast they form a continuous chain from San Diego, at the southern extremity of California, to Nelson, British Columbia, close to the Alaska border.

ROME GRANTED PETITION

Canadians to Hold Chief Offices in Great Teaching Order in Quebec

The agitation among the members of the Christian Brothers in Quebec Province for a return to the system under which the chief places in the Canadian division of the Order were filled by the appointment of brothers either born in Canada or with long Canadian experience, seems to have borne fruit.

Much dissatisfaction existed for some time, over the appointment of French and Belgian members to many of the important positions in Canadian houses.

So keenly did certain sections of the Canadian brotherhood feel about the matter that Rome was petitioned, and certain changes have now been announced.

The most important of these changes was that by which the Rev. Brother Regis, was re-called to the Mother House in Belgium. His successor the Rev. Brother Sigisbert was formerly director of St. Lawrence, St. James and St. Patrick's schools, Montreal, and of the Training College at Maisonneuve. He is a Canadian by birth, a noted educationalist, as well as a skilled musician. Brother Sigisbert was the choice of the Canadian members of the order.

MANY MINERAL DISTRICTS

Mr. J. Parke Channing Speaks of Canada's Possibilities

To the Canadian Mining Institute, Prof. R. W. Brock, Director of the Geological Survey of Canada, said that the development of Northern Ontario was absolutely dependent on the success of the mining industry. Beyond a certain line north is a region not favorable for ordinary agricultural development, and it would be necessary to have a local market, and the local market would depend upon mining. So they all asked with confidence that the various Governments should contribute much more to the betterment of the industry they had at heart.

Mr. J. Parke Channing, who was described as the Copper King, said that Canada was a country with the greatest possibilities. Sudbury, Cobalt and Porcupine had been discovered, and he believed there were dozens and dozens of mineral districts which were undiscovered and which would be discovered in the future. The day of the rich small mine had gone by, to-day was the day of the low grade deposits, and the highly skilled technical mining man was required to develop it.

Queen's Apt Rebuke.

Queen Victoria, who hated unpunctuality, once administered an apt rebuke to a certain mistress of the robes:

A day and an hour had been appointed for a certain public ceremony in which the queen had to take part. The hour had arrived, and of all the court the duchess alone was absent, and her absence retarded the departure. The queen gave vent more than once to her impatience, and at length, just as she was about to enter her carriage without her first lady of honor, the duchess, in breathless haste, made her appearance, stammering some faint words of excuse. "My dear duchess," said the queen smiling, "I think you must have a bad watch." And as she spoke she unloosed from her neck the chain of a magnificent watch which she herself wore, and passed it round the neck of the offender.

TRIBUTE TO SOBRIETY

Liquor Man From Antipodes Says Canadians Most Sober in World

"The Canadian People are the most sober in the world!"

This was the opinion expressed by Mr. W. A. Lloyd, the official lecturer of the Liquor Trades Defence Union of New South Wales, and secretary of the Liquor Trades Defence Association of Western Australia, after travelling through the Dominion while on a tour of the world to study the liquor question.

"I visited South Africa and all parts of Great Britain," said Mr. Lloyd, "with the object of making a first-hand, systematic study of the liquor laws of the Empire; I visited the Continent of Europe also, and must confess Canada appears to me to be the most truly temperate part of the Empire. I am not prepared to say that your restrictive legislation, as applied to the liquor traffic, is responsible for this eminently desirable condition of affairs, but whatever the cause, Canada is to be congratulated on the sobriety of its people. I think that those countries, such as France, which encourage the drinking of light wines and low fermentation malt liquors, have done more to solve the liquor problem than any other countries."

RAN DANGEROUS RAPIDS

Three Young Men Perform Feat Indians Feared to Attempt

The honor of running the rapids of the Upper Fraser River from Tete Jaune Cache on the Grand Trunk Pacific main line to Fort George, for the first time, belongs to three adventurous youths from the United States who made the hazardous journey in safety. They made the trip in a 12 foot collapsible canoe passing through waters that have never been traversed even by Indians with far largr canoes. In some parts of the criuse they are said to have averaged a speed of a mile a minute in rapids that were studded with dangerous rocks. On one of these they stuck but succeeded in sewing up their craft at the foot of the rapids. Altogether the party was nine days on the river. On at least half a dozen occasions these amateur canoemen were warned that probable death awaited them if they did not take to the portages used by other travellers, but in spite of all they stuck to the river until they reached the Fort.

Special Train Menagerie

A special train recently left Nairobi for Zanzibar containing a record shipment of wild animals intended for a menagerie at Hamburg. The game was collected by a hunting party in British and German East Africa. This is the largest shipment of game which has ever left the country. It embraces eight giraffes, 11 hippopotami, two rhinoceroses, and about 50 antelopes and gazelles.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Senate Reform should be a winner at the next elections.

"Abolish the Senate" should be the battle-cry of the Conservative party.

The American press should not be too hard on Doc Friedmann. Having heard that the game of bunco is one of Uncle Sam's country's institutions he came over with his turtle serum and chipped in, cleaning up a [illegible] pile of the coin of the realm.

A new law requires that ten verses from the Bible be read daily in the public schools of Pennsylvania. The law ought to extend also to the Legislature of that State, because a few of the seed sown might take root in spite of the general toughness of the soil.

And Sir George Ross declares that he is not concerned to the extent of a brass farthing in the political situation in the House of Commons, and forthwith proceeds to do the work assigned to him by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the rest of the anti-British obstructionists.

Good roads are essential to the prosperity of the farmer, and the dweller in the rural portions of Canada. The Borden Government sought to provide them by systematic financial aid. The Senate, a body appointed and not elected has so mutilated the legislation that it is useless.

ABOLISH THE SENATE

Here is what The Toronto Daily Star (Liberal) says about the Senate, which is killing the Naval Bill at the bidding of the blockers:—"The Star has advocated the abolition of the Senate for twenty years, and especially during the period the Liberals were in power. It still holds that it should be abolished, and is therefore not particularly interested in the threat that it will be abolished or reformed if it rejects the Naval Bill. It ought to be abolished or reformed, preferably abolished, whether it rejects the Naval Bill, amends it, or passes it in its present form."

A BLOW FOR RECIPROCITY FANATICS.

It is worthy of note that in spite of the cry for larger markets for the Western grain grower we imported last fiscal year from the United States $8,131,279 worth of wheat, as compared with $2,837,608 worth for the preceding fiscal year; an increase of $5,293,671. We exported to the United States $8,352,983 worth of wheat so that the imports and exports of wheat to the United States are practically the same—about $120,000 in favour of the exports from Canada.

We also imported considerably more oats from the United States than we exported. Our imports of oats were $1,551,909 worth, and we only exported $739,357 worth. Our imports of barley from the United States showed an increase. In 1912 we imported $6,755 worth, and in the year just ended $77,667 worth; while our exports of barley were $440,000 worth a decrease of $118,000 worth from the previous year. Our imports of eggs from the United States also show a great increase, being $2,821,000 worth, an increase of $1,200,000 worth from the previous year. We imported more butter and cheese from the United States than we exported to that country. Our imports of butter amounted to $314,971, a considerable increase over the previous year, and we exported $75,000 worth of butter to the United States. In cheese we imported $81,304 worth and we only exported $41,366 worth.

We imported from the United States $1,572,000 worth of horses, and we exported $473,000 worth. We imported $626,000 worth of sheep and exported $68,000 worth.

We imported $2,399,000 worth of vegetables and we were only able to export $348,000 worth of the same article.

What have the advocates of the adjunct policy to say about these facts?

Many Reasons Why Liquid Cough Mixtures Can't Cure Bronchitis

But the Healing Fumes of Catarrhozone, Which Are Breathed to the Further Recesses of the Bronchial Tubes, Bring Quick Relief and Sure Cure.

Every sufferer from coughs, colds, bronchitis and all throat and chest ailments needs a soothing, healing, medicine which goes direct to the breathing organs in the chest and lungs attacks the trouble at its source disperses the germs of disease, and cures the ailments thoroughly. And this medicine is "Catarrhozone."

The germ-killing balsamic vapor mixes with the breath, descends through the throat, down the bronchial tubes, and finally reaches the deepest air cells in the lungs. All parts are soothed with rich, pure medicinal essences, whereas with a syrup the affected parts could not be reached, and harm would result through benumbing the stomach with drugs.

"I have been a chronic sufferer from catarrh in the nose and throat for over eight years. I think I have spent four hundred dollars trying to get relief. I have spent but six dollars on Catarrhozone, and have been completely cured, and in fact have been well for some time. Catarrhozone is the only medicine I have been able to find that would not only give temporary relief but will always cure permanently. Yours sincerely, (Signed) WILLIAM RAGAN, Brockville, Ont.

For absolutely permanent cure use Catarrhozone. Two months' outfit costs $1.00 smaller size, 50c. at all storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y. and Kingston, Canada.

HE TOOK A CHANCE

For Love's Sake Hunchback Undergoes Operation on Distorted Bones of Spine.

BY C. V. CLARENDON.

On the night before the operation Doctor Klein entered his patient's room and sat by his bed. "You are resolved to take the chance of it?" he asked.

His steel-gray eyes were fixed unwaveringly upon those of the cripple beneath the sheets. The cripple smiled back at him as frankly.

"Perfectly," he murmured. "My chance is, I understand, on the whole favorable. You say I am the fourth who has risked this?"

"The fifth," answered the great surgeon composedly.

"And two of them died?"

"O, dear, no. Well, yes, two died, but one of these would have died anyway from other causes. In his case death was a merciful release. I am firmly convinced that you will get up as straight as I am."

And he went on learnedly to describe the details of his famous operation which was to cure the hunchback. The pressure of the vertebrae upon the spinal cord must be removed, the distorted bones reset and held in a cast; it was perfectly feasible, but because the slightest slip of the scalpel would mean paralysis and a lingering death no other surgeon dared attempt it.

"And I suppose," the surgeon ended, smiling kindly, "that there is, as usual, a woman in the case."

The hunchback's eyes lit up.

"I'll tell you, Doctor Klein," he said, "for you have been my best friend in the world. Yes—there is a woman in the case.

"I haven't burdened you with my early history, but I may as well say that I am a man of good family and in my youth enjoyed the advantages of an excellent education. My early life was, as you may imagine, a torture of self-consciousness and suffering. The pity, the aversion, the disgust of all whom I met—well, you can understand how these things affect a sensitive boy. I felt cut off from the world by the barrier which my deformity had raised up. Once, when I was about twenty-one, I fell in love. One day I dared to tell her. I shall never forget the astonished look in her eyes. 'Why, Mr. Manning,' she said, 'I never dreamed that you felt like this. I thought that we were only friends.' Then she went on, with a touch of anger, 'I thought that I could safely be friends with you where I could not with another man.' She stopped. 'Because of my deformity,' I answered bitterly. She made no answer but went out of the room.

The Surgeon Rose From the Bedside.

"But when I met Esther Garvin things were different. She made me forget my infirmity. Ours was a real communion of souls; I knew then that I had met a woman who would marry me in spite of all, in spite of everything, whose love was to be as eternal as my own. And because of this I left her, three years ago, after a mad demonstration of love which left each of us panic-stricken and ashamed. I, because I knew that I had been a cur to tell her; she, because she knew this feeling in my heart. I left her and never saw her again.

"For two years I tried to put her out of my heart, but in vain. Then I heard of your operation. I scraped together every penny I could, and, when it reached eight hundred dollars I came to you—and you know the rest. But you refused to take a penny of it and so I can only repay you with my deepest gratitude. And when I am well I shall tell Esther, and she will bless your name a hundredfold."

The surgeon rose from the bedside. His face was white, his steady hand trembling. Without a word he pressed the hunchback's fingers and left the room.

"Ask Miss Garvin to step into my office," he said to the orderly, and, five minutes afterward, the anaesthetist entered.

"Miss Garvin," said Doctor Klein, "I want you to take a holiday tomorrow and let Miss Chapin etherize my patients."

"Why?" asked Esther Garvin quietly and directly.

Doctor Klein half rose from his chair and sat down dizzily.

"Esther," he said, placing his hand upon her sleeve, "are you still quite sure that you can never love me? Yes, I see that you are. You gave me to understand once that your heart was pledged. I want you to tell me one thing, and I do not ask it impertinently. Where is the man you love?"

"I don't know," she answered.

"He has gone out of your life?"

"But I love him still," she cried defiantly. "I love him and always shall. O, Doctor Klein, I—we all owe so much to you. None of us but is too conscious of your many kindnesses, your goodness, your charity and self-sacrifice. Don't make it harder for me. I don't love you, I can't love you." Suddenly she flung herself upon her knees. "Do you know why I was first attracted to you?" she cried. "The man I love is a hunchback. His whole life has been poisoned by his infirmity. I hoped it would be my task to bring him back to an understanding of goodness, to instill a gracious benevolence into his mind and nature. But he left me because he dared not ask me to link my life with his. Then I came here, to be a nurse, to give my life to others. I met you, I learned of your operation and hoped that some day the time would arrive when he, too, would hear of you and would come to you to be made a straight man like other men, and then—"

"I loved you," said Doctor Klein hoarsely.

"You loved me," she repeated mechanically. "And then I dared not tell you about what lay so near my heart But I have told you now because—because—"

She did not know. Perhaps it was her lover's presence in the hospital that she felt unconsciously; she looked helplessly at the doctor. He raised her to her feet gently.

"Miss Garvin," he said slowly, "five minutes ago I contemplated the blackest crime that any doctor could imagine or dream of. You have straightened out the mental kink in my own brain as I shall straighten Mr. Manning's body tomorrow."

"Mr. Manning!" she cried, and stood staring at him in terror. "You know, then? He is—"

"My dear," the doctor answered, "he has told me everything. He loves you. And he is under this roof tonight. But you must not go to him now. You shall see him tomorrow, and you and I will cure him."

And Manning saw Esther's face smiling on him as he sank to sleep under the ether; and Esther's was the first that he saw when he awakened in his room afterward. But Doctor Klein was standing at her side.

"You will be well soon," said Doctor Klein. "You will be straight as a man should be and [illegible] wish you—"

But he knew that his life also stretched straight before him, ruled and planned and unchangeable.

CARRIED RIDER FROM REVIEW

Even General Custer, Accomplished Rider as He Was, Could Not Stop Runaway Horse.

There was perhaps no more picturesque cavalry commander engaged in the Civil war, north or south, and most certainly none with a more remarkable career, writes Gen. James Grant Wilson in the Bulletin of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, than George Armstrong Custer (1839-1876), who was graduated at the United States military academy of West Point in 1861. Entering the army as a second lieutenant in that year he rode at the head of his cavalry division in the famous Washington review of May, 1865, as a major-general!

While in less than four years' service he had seven horses killed under him—a greater number it is believed than was lost by any other leader of Union troops who participated in the war, he miraculously escaped both death and wounds.

Among the numerous chargers owned by Custer, his four favorites were Don Juan, Jack Rucker, Dandy and Vic. The first mentioned was a thoroughbred stallion of great speed, strength and spirit, on which the dashing young sabreur appeared with his celebrated Third Cavalry division in the grand review at the close of the war.

When approaching the reviewing stand on which were assembled President Johnson with his cabinet, Grant, Sherman, Meade and many other prominent generals, Don Juan became excited and frightened at the floral bouquets and wreaths showered upon him and his rider, as well as the wild tempest of cheers that greeted them, and ran away, in spite of the efforts of one of the most accomplished horsemen in the army to control him. The youthful major general of twenty-six at length stopped the stallion and rejoined his command in season to appear with it as the division swept past the reviewing stand.

Courting in Church.

The Rev. F. B. Meyer has been declaring at Leeds that he does not seriously object to a "little courting" in chapel. One recalls an incident in a Midland chapel some years ago.

The preacher was annoyed by the sound of whispering coming from the semi-darkness under one of the galleries. At last he paused in his sermon and declared:

"If the young couple making love under the gallery do not come to me in the vestry before service next Sunday morning I will name them to the church."

It was a chance shot, but next Sunday he found twenty couples awaiting him in the vestry!—London Chronicle

Beating the Turks in Two Weeks.

A modern battle upon the huge scale projected in and beyond the Maritza valley sometimes takes many days to develop, and may require some days after fighting in general all along the line to bring it to a decisive issue. Warfare is more complicated than it was 40 years ago. In 1870 the Germans crossed the French frontier on August 4. Worth was fought on the 6th, Spicheren on the 8th, Vionville on the 16th and Gravelotte on the 18th. Sedan had been won and the Emperor Napoleon was a prisoner by September 1. But in the Russo-Japanese war the great conflicts were by no means so rapidly decided, and Mukden was really a series of separate battles.

New York state has so thoroughly foregone racing since August, 1910, that when Belmont Park re-opened, everything was there except first-class horses.

THE MATT.

This is intended as an encouragement to the man who begins to assume the airs of middle age about the time he buys the first baby its teething ring.

George Bothner is 46 years old. From time to time strong men have broken his bones or twisted his joints out of their sockets or torn his ligaments. He has never paid any attention to diet, and when he feels that his system needs a pail of dark brew he buys it. His specialty is late hours. He believes that during the last two years he has been stronger, faster, and more enduring than ever before.

"I've forgotten how to get tired," said Bothner, tossing a 200-pound man over his shoulder. "The explanation is that I take plenty of hard work—but not too much. Any one can do the same."

Thirteen years ago Bothner won the lightweight wrestling title. Later he wrestled Iralinger to a draw—Iralinger being the winner of the Lord Lonsdale belt in the middleweight tournament in Europe. There were 147 contestants, and the series lasted six weeks. It was Bothner who destroyed the jiu-jitsu vogue of some years ago. He explained that he would not have bothered Higashi if that Japanese champion had not assumed airs of superiority to all white wrestlers.

"I couldn't let him get away with his bluff that any Jap could draw any white man, or that jui-jitsu was better than catch-as-catch-can," said Bothner. "But he had me scared. They made me sign a paper holding Higashi harmless if he killed me. Right afterward I bought all the life insurance I could pay for."

He threw Higashi at the latter's own game, in which the Japanese took several unsportmanlike advantages, because he was a quicker thinker than the Jap. He worked out a counter to Higashi's while on the mat.

RING.

Buffalo, N.Y., June 3.—The scheduled 10-round bout tonight between Jimmy Duffy of Lockport and Jack Britton of Chicago ended in the sixth round when Britton fouled his opponent.

Britton had been hitting low in several of the previous rounds and was frequently cautioned by the referee. Duffy was landing freely and had the best of the round when the foul blow was struck. His injury, while painful, is not considered serious. Up to the sixth round the fight was even, both landing frequently but without either doing much damage.
